ICC cuts Edison rate bid in half; 7% hike OKd

Suburban residents will pay an average $2 a month more for electricity shortly, but the latest pocketbook pinch will be less than what Commonwealth Edison Co. wants.

The Illinois Commerce Commission, in a decision hailed by consumer groups, Wednesday voted to cut nearly in half Edison's requested 14.5 per cent general rate hike, approving a 7.6 per cent boost instead.

The ICC vote had been delayed for nearly a year because of vacancies on the commission.

THE NEW RATES will take effect as soon as they are filed in the next couple of days with the ICC, but David Stahr of Citizens for a Better Environment, predicted the utility company will seek another rate hike as early as within the next two months because of the ICC's action.

Edison's last rate hike came in September 1975 when a 7 per cent increase was approved by the ICC. In February of that year an interim 5.6 per cent hike also was granted to Edison.

The new rate will mean a suburban residential customer using an average 550 kilowatt hours a month will pay $25.16 instead of the present $23.20. City residents, who on the average use less electricity, will pay about $16.53 compared to $15.51 for 350 kilowatt hours.

The ICC also ordered Edison to begin monthly rather than bi-monthly billing and to initiate seasonal residential rates with higher rates being charged for peak usage in the summer.

THE COMPANY will be allowed 18 months to change from its present bimonthly billing system before instituting the seasonal rates.

Edison spokesman Jerry Stanbrough said Wednesday the higher rates will mean an additional $152.6 million for the company. The utility company had told the ICC it would need an additional $279.6 million to meet increasing costs and provide for stock benefits and an extensive construction program.

Edison President Thomas G. Ayers Wednesday said the increase is not enough.

"While it will help in some measure to offset the rising costs of providing reliable electric service to our customers, the increase still leaves our return on plant investment far below what is necessary under prevailing financial conditions," Ayers said.

He said the increase would be insufficient to finance construction of new generating plants "critically

Bakalis to announce bid against Thompson today

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — After weeks of soul searching, Michael Bakalis will announce today his plans to run against Gov. James R. Thompson next year.

While Bakalis, the Illinois Comptroller, and his aides refused to confirm his political intentions Wednesday afternoon, he began telling the 24 members of the Democratic State Central Committee later in the day that he will seek the nomination to oppose Thompson.

Bakalis told the committeemen he will run for governor despite the fact that a recently completed survey by President Carter's pollster, Patrick Caddell showed Bakalis had a better chance to beat incumbent U.S. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill.

BAKALIS' DECISION to skip the U.S. Senate race eased concerns by some party leaders that he might choose to oppose Alex Seith and leave the party without a prominent figure to oppose Thompson. Seith, Cook County Zoning Board chairman, has been campaigning for the Democratic nomination for the Senate since July.

Bakalis, 38, of Downers Grove, had not been considered a prime contender for the gubernatorial race, but decisions by former Gov. Daniel Walker and Sec. of State Alan J. Dixon not to oppose Thompson, catapulted him to the forefront.

The Demcratic leaders, who were told privately of the Bakalis decision, praised the move to take on the "tougher" Thompson. They recalled the 1976 debacle when former Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett initially balked at running for governor and after

Crackdown on 'slum' house

by BILL HILL

Neighbors have been upset for several years with the dilapidated house and garage at 104 N. Pine Ave., Arlington Heights. They say the buildings are "a disgrace to the neighborhood."

The weather-warn garage tilts slightly toward the west; the wooden steps leading to the front door of the two-story house have rotted to the point where they sag several inches when used; windows are broken, doors have no screens and rubbish is strewn about the site.

Conditions are not much better inside, say village inspectors who have started a crackdown on the property by getting an arrest warrant for the owner and issuing 22 tickets for building and housing violations.

THE VIOLATIONS include leaking ceilings, broken bathroom fixtures, rotting floors, holes in the ceilings and walls, unsafe wiring and faulty plumbing.

"The place is a slum. It's the slum of Arlington," Village Prosecutor Ernest Blomquist said.

"We want it out of there. It's a blight on the area," Building Director Martin Munsen said.

Until the situation improves, the village plans to write complaints against the property at least once a week and possibly daily if inspectors have time, Blomquist said. Each ticket carries a maximum penalty of $1,000.

THE OWNER OF the property, John Peters, 502 N. Stratford Rd., Arlington Heights, was served with an arrest warrant last week for failing to appear in court Aug. 24 when he had promised to pay a $110 fine and show that improvements had been made.

Since then, Peters has posted a $1,300 bond guaranteeing he will appear in Cook County Circuit Court next Wednesday, Blomquist said. Peters also promised last Wednesday to demolish the garage and make exterior repairs to the house, but neither has been done, Blomquist said.

Peters may face criminal prosecution under the criminal housing management laws, prohibiting the leasing of inadequate housing, Blomquist said.

Peters could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

The house at 104 N. Pine Ave. has been posted by village officials as being unapproved for occupancy.

FIRE DEPARTMENT officials also have been ordered to inspect the building so the village can begin demolition proceedings.

"We're being backed into a corner because they (Peters) are not doing anything. It's gotten to the point where we have no other alternative," Blomquist said.

Demolition proceedings, however, would be lengthy and possibly complicated because the house is occupied by four men living upstairs, Blomquist said. A family that lived on the main floor moved out earlier this

Divorce law lauded by lawyer

Lawyers hostile to no-fault divorce and skeptical of Illinois' new marriage and divorce law "have nothing to worry about," the author of the law told Northwest suburban attorneys Wednesday night.

Marshall Auerbach, an attorney specializing in matrimonial law, told the annual meeting of the Northwest Suburban Bar Assn. the new divorce law is constitutional and represents the first reform of the state's 103-year-old divorce laws.

He assured the group of some 300 lawyers, however, that the new law is not a no-fault act, a bill that has been defeated numerous times in the General Assembly.

No-fault divorce, passed for the first time in 1970 in California, would grant a divorce simply on the statement of a married couple that the marriage no longer can work.

THE NEW ILLINOIS divorce law, which took effect Oct. 1, provides for reform in several areas, most notably in the grounds that can be cited for divorce.

The law now only requires persons seeking divorces to state the grounds for them without going into specific testimony. The law also eliminates divorce trials by jury.

Auerbach, a member of the prestigious Chicago law firm of Jenner & Block, said Illinois, the 48th state to adopt a divorce reform law, consistently turned down attempts to pass no-fault divorce because of opposition from the legal community.

He said the current law incorporates divorce reform measures and establishes case law while excluding no-fault divorce provisions.

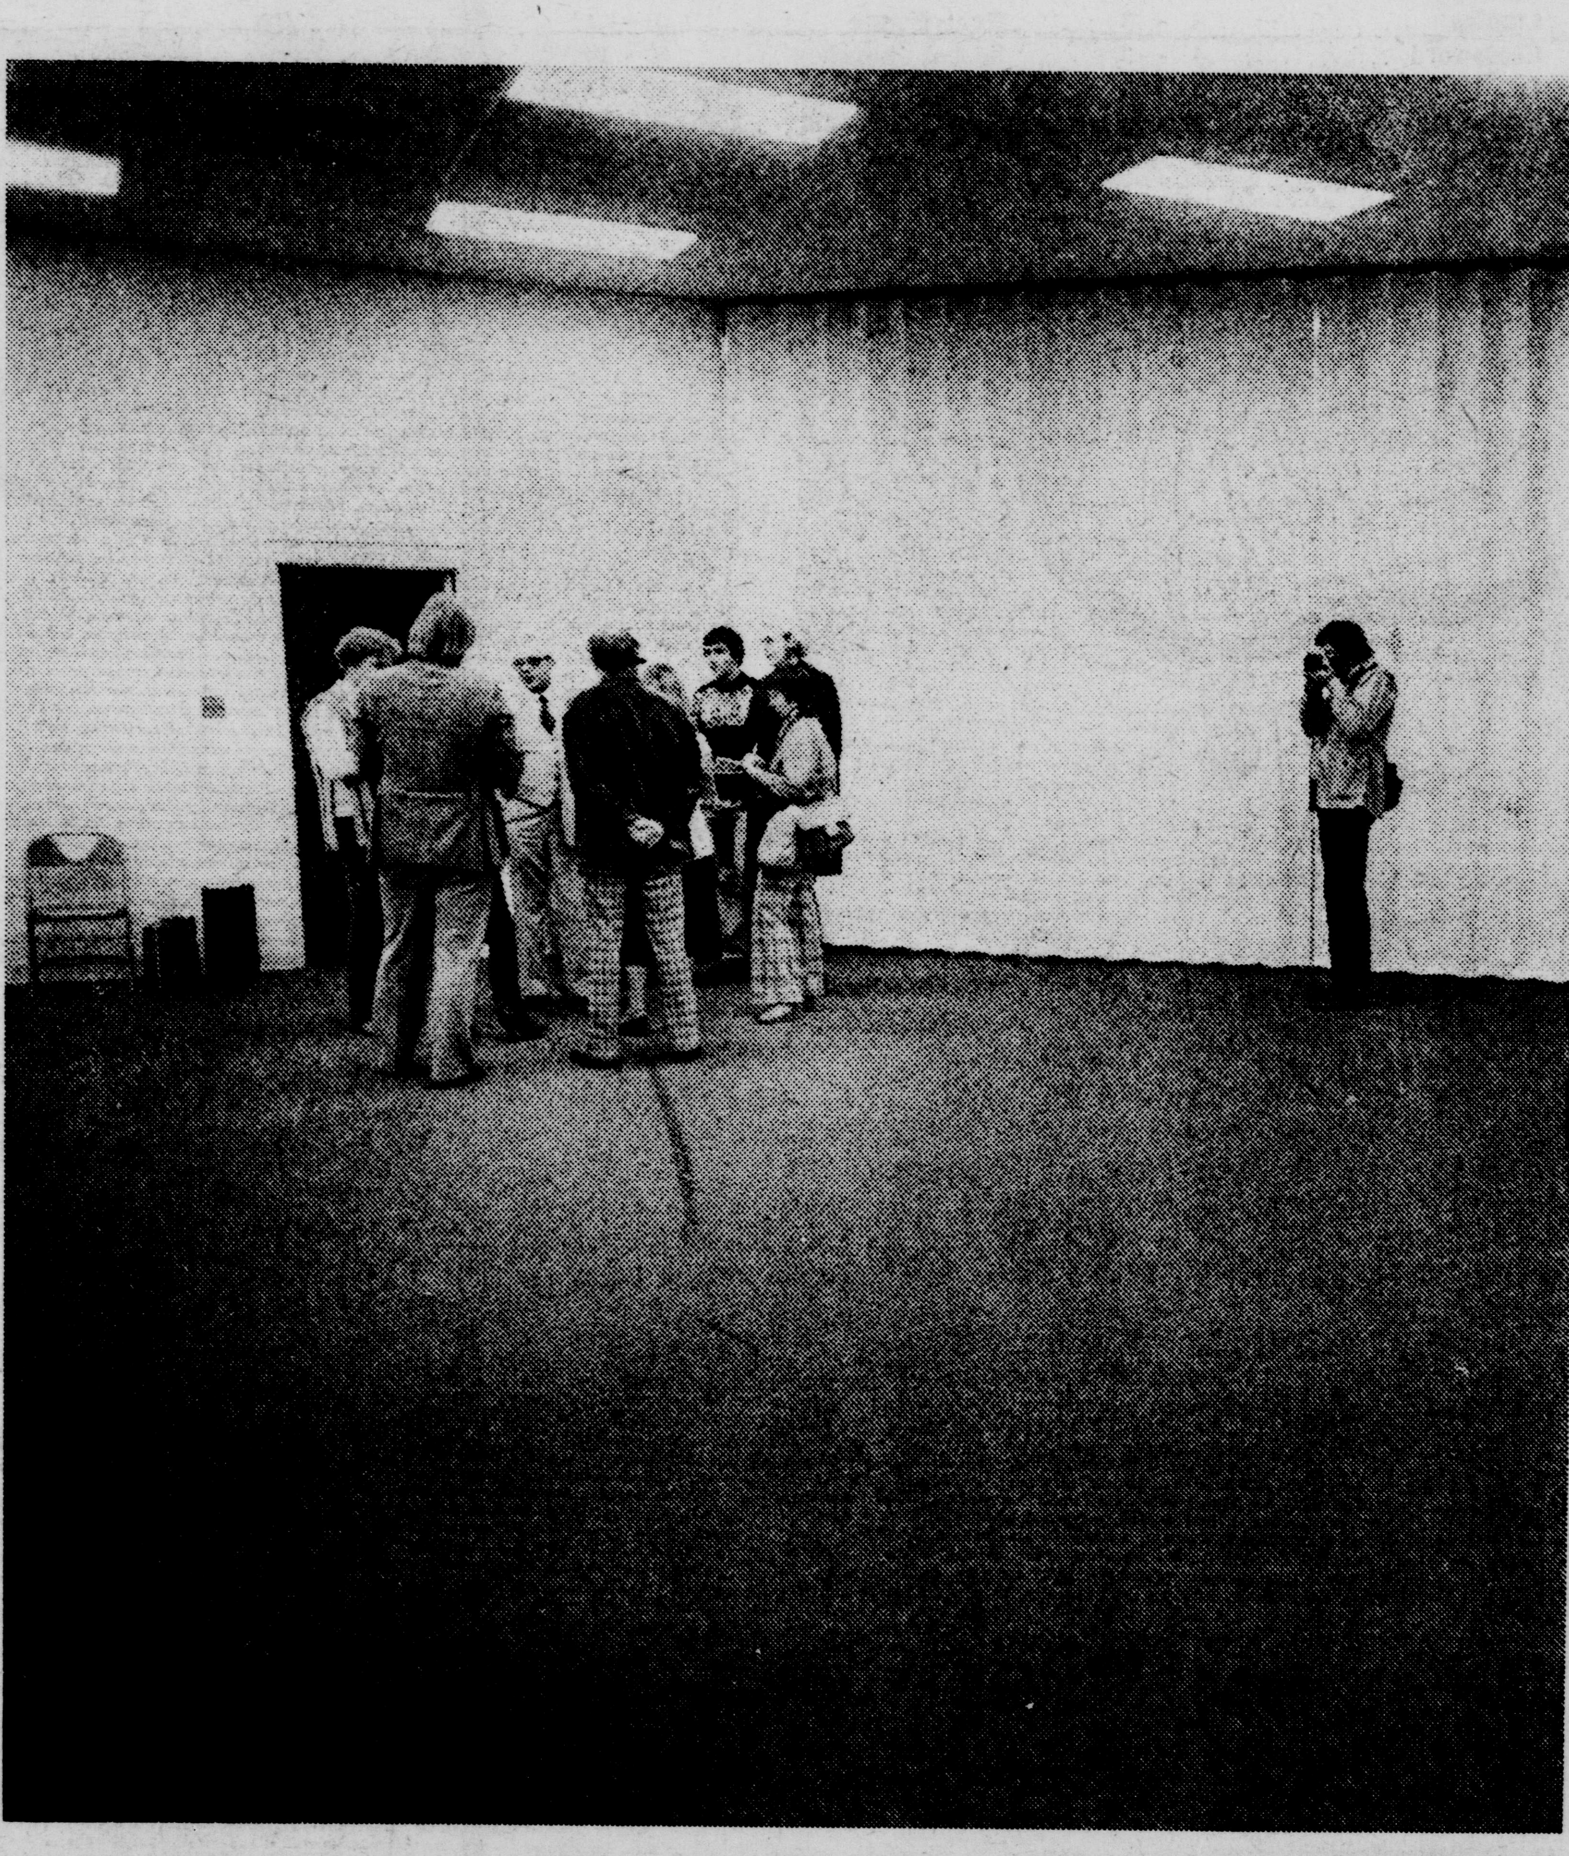
HE SAID SIMILAR laws passed in other states have been declared constitutional and dismissed criticisms that the Illinois law might not survive a constitutional challenge.

In addition to provisions surrounding grounds for divorce, the new law also reforms decisions involving alimony, property rights and child support.

Under the new act, evidence of marital misconduct cannot be considered by the court when deciding these matters, Auerbach said.

Auerbach spoke to the association's annual meeting at the Club Bianco in Skokie. His talk was the first in the state discussing the new divorce law since it went into effect Oct. 1.

Auerbach is the former chairman of the Illinoiis State Bar Assn. Family Law Section, a member of the American Bar Assn. Family Law Section and the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers.



DR. JOHN ROCHE, leader of a tax protest movement, is surrounded by newsmen as he arrives at a meeting in Hanover Park Wednesday night. However, in an admitted "flop," Roche and 18 newsmen found themselves alone.

Tax protest unto God—it's a flop

Byline report

The press got there early.

A good 15 minutes before 8 p.m.

The announcements had said 50 to 100 disgruntled taxpayers from the Hanover Park area were going to be "ordained" in the Universal Life Church of Modesto, Calif., by Dr. John Roche of Chicago.

The ordinations are a part of a growing tax protest being led by Roche in the Chicago area. The "ministers" then try to claim their homes as churches and thus gain exemptions from property taxes.

AND, PARTICULARLY with the planned quadrennial reassessment in Hanover and Schaumburg townships, taxes are news.

ABC in New York even had a crew out to film a segment for "Good Morning America."

But as it approached 8 p.m. in the park district's, Community Centre, there still were no disgruntled taxpayers present.

At 7:55, a woman slowly walked in and the crowd of eight newsmen, who had been talking casually in small groups, surged toward her.

"Are you a reporter or . . ." one asked excitedly.

"I'm a reporter," the woman replied.

"OH," THE interviewer said softly and the group began to split up again.

At 8, the only nonmedia member in attendance was Robert Lashbrook, acting director for the park district.

"I don't know anything about it," he said. "I just know a guy reserved the place."

The group, Lashbrook said, had prepaid the $10 required for two-hour use of the hall.

Five more minutes passed. Eighteen newsmen were there now and they were getting anxious. The ABC reporter mentioned she had to get her film to a plane for New York by 10 p.m.

THEN ROCHE walked in, escorted by his wife. He was carrying a stack of taxpayer newsletters. Immediately, as he walked in, he was surrounded by reporters. What were they going to do? One asked.

"All we'll have to do is wait," he said.

"The trouble is the World Series is on," one reporter said, nodding at her insight.

"Taxes," Roche quickly interrupted, "are more important than the Fire swept through a home in DeLago Village in Schaumburg late Wednesday night.

Neighbors said they saw fire coming from a front window and a chimney. They said the fire began about 11:30 p.m.

The fire appeared to be confined to the Berkowitz unit, one of six in the building.

Son of ex-labor leader held in Maryland killings

MILLERSVILLE, Md. (UPI) — Police arrested the 16-year-old son of a former labor leader Wednesday in the stabbing deaths of three young girls whose bodies were found Monday lying face down in a shallow creek.

Police said they arrested Stuart Kreiner, whose father, Edward, resigned several months ago as president of the Maryland Municipal Employes Assn., a union representing most of the 60,000 state employes.

The Kreiners lived a few blocks from the girls in Southgate, about 10 miles south of Baltimore.

The youth was held in the stabbing deaths Sunday of Debbie Hogan, 10, her 8-year-old sister Terry, and Ann Brzeszkiewicz, 8.

POLICE SAID they confiscated a hunting knife, jacket and other items from Kreiner's home as evidence. Lie detector tests were given to several persons in the area before young Kreiner's arrest was announced.

The girls were last seen playing in their yards shortly after dark Sunday and were reported missing at 10 p.m.

Anne Arundel County police found their fully clothed bodies Monday morning, face down in a stream in a wooded area about 500 yards from their homes.

The girls had been stabbed repeatedly, one at least 40 times. The autopsy report said the girls had not been sexually molested.

The funeral for the girls will be held today.

Son of ex-labor leader held in Maryland killings

MILLERSVILLE, Md. (UPI) — Police arrested the 16-year-old son of a former labor leader Wednesday in the stabbing deaths of three young girls whose bodies were found Monday lying face down in a shallow creek.

Police said they arrested Stuart Kreiner, whose father, Edward, resigned several months ago as president of the Maryland Municipal Employes Assn., a union representing most of the 60,000 state employes.

The Kreiners lived a few blocks from the girls in Southgate, about 10 miles south of Baltimore.

The youth was held in the stabbing deaths Sunday of Debbie Hogan, 10, her 8-year-old sister Terry, and Ann Brzeszkiewicz, 8.

POLICE SAID they confiscated a hunting knife, jacket and other items from Kreiner's home as evidence. Lie detector tests were given to several persons in the area before young Kreiner's arrest was announced.

The girls were last seen playing in their yards shortly after dark Sunday and were reported missing at 10 p.m.

Anne Arundel County police found their fully clothed bodies Monday morning, face down in a stream in a wooded area about 500 yards from their homes.

The girls had been stabbed repeatedly, one at least 40 times. The autopsy report said the girls had not been sexually molested.

The funeral for the girls will be held today.

Blaze sweeps Schaumburg home

Fire swept through a home in DeLago Village in Schaumburg late Wednesday night.

Details of the blaze were sketchy at midnight, but neighbors said the fire sent heavy black smoke from the home at 1025 Emerald Ln., reportedly owned by Mike Berkowitz.

At least three Schaumburg Fire Dept. vehicles responded to the blaze. Units from Rolling Meadows and Hanover Park also fought the fire.

It was unknown if there were any injuries.

Neighbors said they saw fire coming from a front window and a chimney. They said the fire began about 11:30 p.m.

The fire appeared to be confined to the Berkowitz unit, one of six in the building.

Ordinary day eclipsed by mere cosmic accident

by THOMAS LEE

The sun, the moon and the earth fell briefly into line Wednesday, casting a shadow over much of the Western Hemisphere and fascinating millions who didn't know why.

It was just a cosmic accident, nothing more. It lasted only minutes. It wasn't really beautiful or mysterious or meaningful. And contrary to ancient belief, it wasn't a dragon devouring the Sun God.

In Chicago, where only one-eighth of the sun disappeared behind the moon, it was even less impressive. Hoping to see the sight of a lifetime, some 300 persons gathered at the Adler Planetarium and saw what looked like a beam of a flashlight on a ceiling, with a chunk of the beam missing.

Definitely nothing of cosmic consequences, so to speak.

But still they crowded into the planetarium lobby and around a little table with a white square atop it.

THE TABLE stood directly beneath a beam of sunshine coming through a telescope. The sunshine was a circle. When the moon crossed in front of the sun, the circle slowly yielded to a dark disc.

An Adler Planetarium astronomer placed a reflector, tilted at an angle, atop the white square, and the beam of sunlight glanced off the reflector onto the ceiling.

The people craned their necks to the ceiling saying things like, "Isn't that strange looking?" and, "Imagine what it looks like in the Pacific where those ocean liners are," and, "Is that the real eclipse?"

They said they were fascinated by it all, but couldn't explain why. It's different, said a few. It's something to do with astronomy, said another. A woman said ever since the space shots began, she's been enthralled at anything out there.

ONE YOUNG MAN, who said he was a poet, said the eclipse represented the passing of "world ages."

"We are reaching the end of the cycle of a world age," said Leroy Porche Jr. of Chicago. "Mankind is reaching into a higher level. It's going from so much materiality to spirituality." A poem he had written said the same thing.

All that from a partial eclipse of the sun.

In his downstairs office, James Seevers, Adler associate astronomer was less poetic. He explained that astronomers and their less-scientific predecessors have been able to predict eclipses for centuries, perhaps as long ago as 1700 B.C.

Indeed, two Chinese priests lost their heads after they failed to predict an eclipse.

TODAY, COMPUTERS help astronomers predict the exact time and location of the umbra (shadow of the total eclipse) upon the Earth. That is a long way from the use of boulders at Stonehenge, England, which are believed to have forecast eclipses as well as seasonal changes.

For all the science involved, the eclipse still fascinates people by the millions. And it doesn't seem to matter that no one can give a good explanation for their fascination.

It is a disc of light and a disc of dark, meeting for a few minutes on an otherwise ordinary day. Nothing will come of it. Nothing ever does.

IT LOOKED LIKE someone had taken a small bite out of the edge of the sun as students in Prospect High School's space science class indirectly viewed Wedneday's partial eclipse of the sun. Using a reflector telescope, teacher Dale Hugo's students shine an image of the shadow of the moon covering 13 per cent of the sun on a piece of cardboard in order to view the eclipse safely.

Race 'impossible basis' for choice: Bakke's lawyer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Allan Bakke's lawyer told the Supreme Court Wednesday that race "is an impossible basis" for admissions to professional schools. The government countered that blindness to race "is to be blind to reality."

And the lawyer for the University of California, which twice denied Bakke admission to its medical school, rejected the notion that "reverse discrimination" was inflicted on the 37-year-old white applicant.

For nearly two hours, the nine justices heard arguments in the closely watched case in which they are being asked to make one of the most momentous decisions on civil rights since "separate but equal" public schools were struck down in 1954.

THEY HEARD in turn from Archibald Cox, the former solicitor general and Watergate prosecutor representing the university and Wade McCree, current solicitor general arguing for the government, and Reynold Colvin, Bakke's lawyer from San Francisco.

The justices, who will decide the case by written opinion later this term, listened attentively and interrupted frequently with questions in the chamber jammed with spectators.

Colvin argued that race is "an impossible basis on which to judge people" and that "ability is not measured by skin pigmentation."

But McCree, a black and a former federal judge, said discrimination still exists 23 years after the milestone school desegregation decision, and that "to be blind to race today is to be blind to reality."

THURGOOD MARSHALL, the court's only black member, interrupted Colvin at one point to say: "You're arguing about keeping somebody out and the other side is arguing about getting somebody in.

"So it depends how you look at it, doesn't it?"

Bakke claimed he was discriminated against because 16 per cent of the openings for each entering class at the university's medical school at Davis, Calif., were reserved for disadvantaged minorities under a special admission program.

But Cox, told the court 'there is no racially blind method of selection which will enroll more than a trickle" of minority students.

COX URGED the justices to reverse the California Supreme Court, which declared the admissions program unconstitutional because it classified applicants on the basis of race.

''For generations, racial discrimination in the United States . . . isolated certain minorities and condemned them to inferior education," said Cox, standing ramrod straight before the curved bench.

Now, he said, schools want voluntarily to increase the number of minority doctors and set models for the next generation of blacks, Chicanos and other minorities to overcome past discrimination.

McCree followed up with the argument that many Americans born in 1954 when the Supreme Court decided Brown v. Board of Education still are "knocking on the doors of professional schools" today seeking to fulfill that promise of equal opportunity.

"WE ARE HERE asking the court to give us the full dimensions of the 14th amendment," which provides equal protection of law for all persons, McCree said.

It should provide "not only equality of treatment but help persons who were held back to be brought up to the starting line where the opportunity to compete will be meaningful," he said.

While the case was argued, the central figure went to work as usual at a space laboratory near San Francisco, where he is an engineer. Colvin explained that he is a "private person" not interested in the publicity he has generated.

In his argument, the stocky lawyer stressed his client's personal stake in the case, saying: "Allan Bakke's position is that he has a right not to be discriminated against by reason of his race and that's what brings Allan Bakke to this court.

"The ultimate fact in this case, no matter how you turn it, is that Mr. Bakke was deprived of an opportunity to attend the school by reason of his race," said Colvin.

Oswald widow says Lee acted alone in JFK death

NEW YORK (UPI) — The question of why Lee Harvey Oswald assassinated President John F. Kennedy 14 years ago still troubles Marina Oswald Porter, but she said Wednesday she is convinced now he acted alone.

"I beleive that Lee acted alone in this murder, and shot the President, ironically, a man whom he respected and admired," Osolad's widow said.

Oswald, she explained, was a loner, never willing to confide in others.

"I ALWAYS thought he was guilty. At first, it was intuition. But through the years, I have found a logical explanation . . . bits and pieces of his character fit," the shy, 36-year-old woman said in a rare public appearance.

MARINA OSWALD PORTER, left, widow of Lee Harvey Oswald, Wednesday said she is convinced Oswald acted alone in assassinating John F. Kennedy. With her is Priscilla Johnson McMillan, author of "Marina and Lee."

The occasion was a Harper and Row news conference to publicize the book "Marina and Lee" written by Priscilla Johnson McMillan, a onetime Kennedy worker and former Moscow correspondent.

The book chronicles the "slow painful tragedy" of the couple's short, two-year marriage, the deteriorating mental health of Oswald and the events that led to the day of the Kennedy assassination.

MARINA HERSELF, now remarried and living in a suburb of Dallas, Tex., remembers little about the past, except regret and sometimes hatred.

"I can never forget or forgive what he did, to me and to my children, to the President and his family, to the whole world.

"Right now I almost hate him," she said as tears welled in her eyes.

Speaking with a slight accent, the Russian-born woman described her former husband as a secret man, "a loner" who was "very, very confused" and often violent for no apparent reason.

When the troubled ex-Marine, a defector to the Soviet Union, brought his new bride back to the United States in 1962, Marina said his personality changed. He refused even to let her learn English.

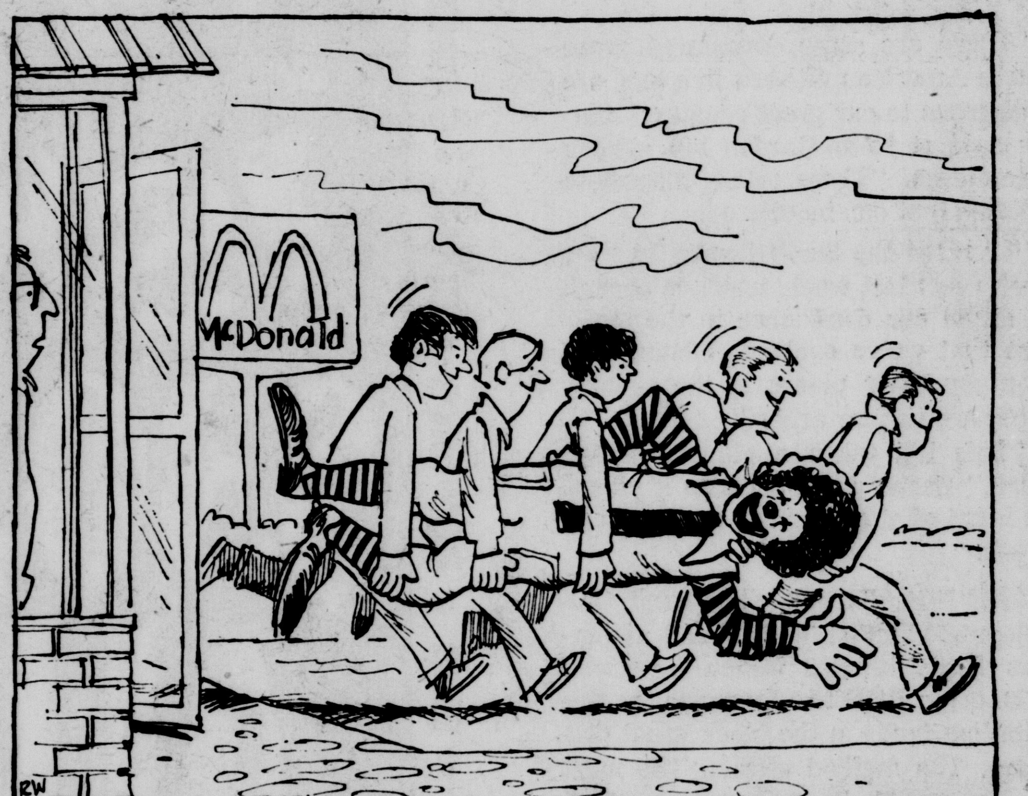
Asked repeatedly about a motive behind her husband's deed, she struggled with her Englsih, then asked Mrs. McMillan to explain.

THE WRITER described Oswald as a man with a deprived childhood, an early believer in Marxism. He also believed, she said, that American capitalism must be "dealt a blow from which it could never recover."

The announcement that Kennedy would pass below the book depository building where Oswald worked was the "catalytic" event, said Mrs. McMillan.

"It brought Oswald's tangled emotions and his Marxist convictions together in a certainty that he, and he alone, had been singled out by fate to deal the American political process a mortal, decapitating blow."

Ronald fills tall order for homecoming



Ronald McDonald was kidnaped Wednesday.

The capter was pulled off quickly by a group of high school students who invaded the McDonald's Restaurant at 188 E. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

Ken Cicero, manager of the fast-food eatery, was going about his chores when he saw the seven-foot statute of Ronald being carried off.

"It happened around 11:15 a.m. The high school kids always come in for lunch. There must have been 30 of them. They bought lunch, ate it and on the way out, six of them picked up the statue, stuck it in a van and split real fast," Cicero said.

THE UNTIMELY departure of McDonald's patron saint led to a flurry of activity. Cicero notified police of the incident while Rochelle Baum, McDonald's public relations spokesman, called local newspapers.

"We don't know whether they just stole it or kidnapped it," Ms. Baum said.

Several hours later, Ronald McDonald surfaced in the attendance office of Wheeling High School, apparently rescued by a number of students who "found" it on the premises.

Wheeling Police Officer Tad Leach attributed the quick recovery to the fact that "word had gotten out we were looking for it."

"The kids were exceptionally cooperative," he said.

Leach said McDonald's officials have declined to press charges against the youths, who apparently planned to include the statue in this week's homcoming celebration.

Meanwhile, Ronald is back on duty in the restaurant lobby, none the worse for the experience.

Bill planned to even tax increases

Two Arlington Heights state representatives plan to introduce a bill designed to spread out tax increases more evenly.State Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, and State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, will cosponsor a bill directing the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs to set separate multipliers for each quadrant in Cook County.

The technical change in the real estate tax formula is aimed at curtailing big tax bill jumps associated with quadrennial reassessments, the legislators said.

The multiplier is a number calculated by the state each year to bring the total assessment in a county to 33.3 per cent of the market value of all the property in the county. This year the Cook County multiplier is 1.4153, down 2.3 per cent from a year ago.

THE EQUALIZER has its greatest impact on reassessed property. But because only one quarter of the county is reassessed each year, the effect is uneven, Mrs. Chapman said.

"When the equalizer is set up for the whole county, it tosses everybody into the same pot and the quadrant that has just been reassessed is going to be treated inequitably," she said.

Thousands of homeowners in Wheeling and Palatine townships were shocked this year by big increases in their tax bills, caused in part by the reassessment of their property.

But, separate multipliers for each quadrant in the county has a problem of its own, said Jack Beatty, executive director of the Chicago Civic Federation.

"There is a different makeup of property in each quadrant. The areas that have a large amount of commerce and industry will get a lower multiplier than quadrants that are predominantly residential, Beatty said.

INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY in Cook County is assessed at 40 per cent of market value, but single family homes are assessed at only 16 per cent. A concentration of 40 per cent assessments in an area means the state will need a lower figure to bring the over-all assessment to 33.3 per cent of market vaule, Beatty said.

"For many years we had separate multipliers for each quadrant in the county but the system was changed to a single multiplier in 1967 because of the differences between quadrants," he said.

Dan Pierce, chief deputy assessor, said a change to separate multipliers would mean a lower multiplier at the time of reassessment, but increasing multipliers over the next three years.

"It's an interesting idea," said Pierce, "but it may be robbing Peter to pay Paul. This is a very technical area."

It is a disc of light and a disc of dark, meeting for a few minutes on an otherwise ordinary day. Nothing will come of it. Nothing ever does.

IT LOOKED LIKE someone had taken a small bite out of the edge of the sun as students in Prospect High School's space science class indirectly viewed Wedneday's partial eclipse of the sun. Using a reflector telescope, teacher Dale Hugo's students shine an image of the shadow of the moon covering 13 per cent of the sun on a piece of cardboard in order to view the eclipse safely.

Race 'impossible basis' for choice: Bakke's lawyer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Allan Bakke's lawyer told the Supreme Court Wednesday that race "is an impossible basis" for admissions to professional schools. The government countered that blindness to race "is to be blind to reality."

And the lawyer for the University of California, which twice denied Bakke admission to its medical school, rejected the notion that "reverse discrimination" was inflicted on the 37-year-old white applicant.

For nearly two hours, the nine justices heard arguments in the closely watched case in which they are being asked to make one of the most momentous decisions on civil rights since "separate but equal" public schools were struck down in 1954.

THEY HEARD in turn from Archibald Cox, the former solicitor general and Watergate prosecutor representing the university and Wade McCree, current solicitor general arguing for the government, and Reynold Colvin, Bakke's lawyer from San Francisco.

The justices, who will decide the case by written opinion later this term, listened attentively and interrupted frequently with questions in the chamber jammed with spectators.

Colvin argued that race is "an impossible basis on which to judge people" and that "ability is not measured by skin pigmentation."

But McCree, a black and a former federal judge, said discrimination still exists 23 years after the milestone school desegregation decision, and that "to be blind to race today is to be blind to reality."

THURGOOD MARSHALL, the court's only black member, interrupted Colvin at one point to say: "You're arguing about keeping somebody out and the other side is arguing about getting somebody in.

"So it depends how you look at it, doesn't it?"

Bakke claimed he was discriminated against because 16 per cent of the openings for each entering class at the university's medical school at Davis, Calif., were reserved for disadvantaged minorities under a special admission program.

But Cox, told the court 'there is no racially blind method of selection which will enroll more than a trickle" of minority students.

COX URGED the justices to reverse the California Supreme Court, which declared the admissions program unconstitutional because it classified applicants on the basis of race.

''For generations, racial discrimination in the United States . . . isolated certain minorities and condemned them to inferior education," said Cox, standing ramrod straight before the curved bench.

Now, he said, schools want voluntarily to increase the number of minority doctors and set models for the next generation of blacks, Chicanos and other minorities to overcome past discrimination.

McCree followed up with the argument that many Americans born in 1954 when the Supreme Court decided Brown v. Board of Education still are "knocking on the doors of professional schools" today seeking to fulfill that promise of equal opportunity.

"WE ARE HERE asking the court to give us the full dimensions of the 14th amendment," which provides equal protection of law for all persons, McCree said.

It should provide "not only equality of treatment but help persons who were held back to be brought up to the starting line where the opportunity to compete will be meaningful," he said.

While the case was argued, the central figure went to work as usual at a space laboratory near San Francisco, where he is an engineer. Colvin explained that he is a "private person" not interested in the publicity he has generated.

In his argument, the stocky lawyer stressed his client's personal stake in the case, saying: "Allan Bakke's position is that he has a right not to be discriminated against by reason of his race and that's what brings Allan Bakke to this court.

"The ultimate fact in this case, no matter how you turn it, is that Mr. Bakke was deprived of an opportunity to attend the school by reason of his race," said Colvin.

Oswald widow says Lee acted alone in JFK death

NEW YORK (UPI) — The question of why Lee Harvey Oswald assassinated President John F. Kennedy 14 years ago still troubles Marina Oswald Porter, but she said Wednesday she is convinced now he acted alone.

"I beleive that Lee acted alone in this murder, and shot the President, ironically, a man whom he respected and admired," Osolad's widow said.

Oswald, she explained, was a loner, never willing to confide in others.

"I ALWAYS thought he was guilty. At first, it was intuition. But through the years, I have found a logical explanation . . . bits and pieces of his character fit," the shy, 36-year-old woman said in a rare public appearance.

MARINA OSWALD PORTER, left, widow of Lee Harvey Oswald, Wednesday said she is convinced Oswald acted alone in assassinating John F. Kennedy. With her is Priscilla Johnson McMillan, author of "Marina and Lee."

The occasion was a Harper and Row news conference to publicize the book "Marina and Lee" written by Priscilla Johnson McMillan, a onetime Kennedy worker and former Moscow correspondent.

The book chronicles the "slow painful tragedy" of the couple's short, two-year marriage, the deteriorating mental health of Oswald and the events that led to the day of the Kennedy assassination.

MARINA HERSELF, now remarried and living in a suburb of Dallas, Tex., remembers little about the past, except regret and sometimes hatred.

"I can never forget or forgive what he did, to me and to my children, to the President and his family, to the whole world.

"Right now I almost hate him," she said as tears welled in her eyes.

Speaking with a slight accent, the Russian-born woman described her former husband as a secret man, "a loner" who was "very, very confused" and often violent for no apparent reason.

When the troubled ex-Marine, a defector to the Soviet Union, brought his new bride back to the United States in 1962, Marina said his personality changed. He refused even to let her learn English.

Asked repeatedly about a motive behind her husband's deed, she struggled with her Englsih, then asked Mrs. McMillan to explain.

THE WRITER described Oswald as a man with a deprived childhood, an early believer in Marxism. He also believed, she said, that American capitalism must be "dealt a blow from which it could never recover."

The announcement that Kennedy would pass below the book depository building where Oswald worked was the "catalytic" event, said Mrs. McMillan.

"It brought Oswald's tangled emotions and his Marxist convictions together in a certainty that he, and he alone, had been singled out by fate to deal the American political process a mortal, decapitating blow."

Ronald fills tall order for homecoming

Ronald McDonald was kidnaped Wednesday.

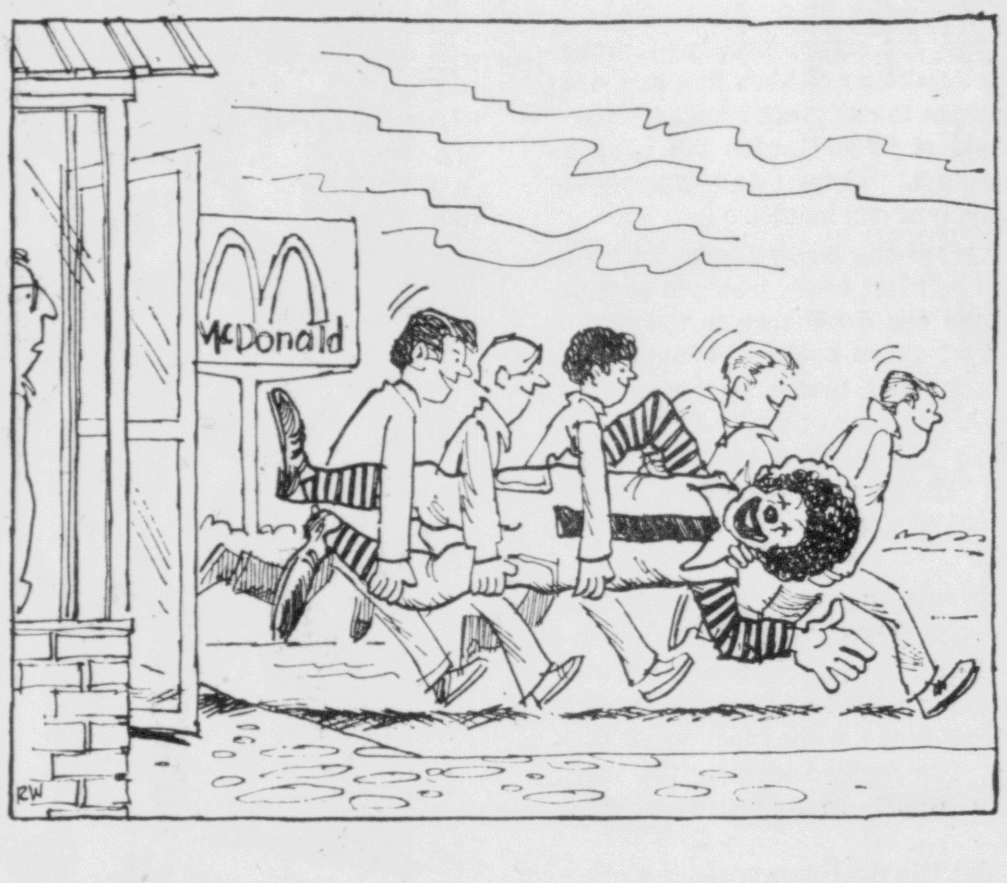
The capter was pulled off quickly by a group of high school students who invaded the McDonald's Restaurant at 188 E. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

Ken Cicero, manager of the fast-food eatery, was going about his chores when he saw the seven-foot statute of Ronald being carried off.

"It happened around 11:15 a.m. The high school kids always come in for lunch. There must have been 30 of them. They bought lunch, ate it and on the way out, six of them picked up the statue, stuck it in a van and split real fast," Cicero said.

THE UNTIMELY departure of McDonald's patron saint led to a flurry of activity. Cicero notified police of the incident while Rochelle Baum, McDonald's public relations spokesman, called local newspapers.

"We don't know whether they just stole it or kidnapped it," Ms. Baum said.



Several hours later, Ronald McDonald surfaced in the attendance office of Wheeling High School, apparently rescued by a number of students who "found" it on the premises.

Wheeling Police Officer Tad Leach attributed the quick recovery to the fact that "word had gotten out we were looking for it."

"The kids were exceptionally cooperative," he said.

Leach said McDonald's officials have declined to press charges against the youths, who apparently planned to include the statue in this week's homcoming celebration.

Meanwhile, Ronald is back on duty in the restaurant lobby, none the worse for the experience.

Bill planned to even tax increases

Two Arlington Heights state representatives plan to introduce a bill designed to spread out tax increases more evenly.State Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, and State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, will cosponsor a bill directing the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs to set separate multipliers for each quadrant in Cook County.

The technical change in the real estate tax formula is aimed at curtailing big tax bill jumps associated with quadrennial reassessments, the legislators said.

The multiplier is a number calculated by the state each year to bring the total assessment in a county to 33.3 per cent of the market value of all the property in the county. This year the Cook County multiplier is 1.4153, down 2.3 per cent from a year ago.

THE EQUALIZER has its greatest impact on reassessed property. But because only one quarter of the county is reassessed each year, the effect is uneven, Mrs. Chapman said.

"When the equalizer is set up for the whole county, it tosses everybody into the same pot and the quadrant that has just been reassessed is going to be treated inequitably," she said.

Thousands of homeowners in Wheeling and Palatine townships were shocked this year by big increases in their tax bills, caused in part by the reassessment of their property.

But, separate multipliers for each quadrant in the county has a problem of its own, said Jack Beatty, executive director of the Chicago Civic Federation.

"There is a different makeup of property in each quadrant. The areas that have a large amount of commerce and industry will get a lower multiplier than quadrants that are predominantly residential, Beatty said.

INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY in Cook County is assessed at 40 per cent of market value, but single family homes are assessed at only 16 per cent. A concentration of 40 per cent assessments in an area means the state will need a lower figure to bring the over-all assessment to 33.3 per cent of market vaule, Beatty said.

"For many years we had separate multipliers for each quadrant in the county but the system was changed to a single multiplier in 1967 because of the differences between quadrants," he said.

Dan Pierce, chief deputy assessor, said a change to separate multipliers would mean a lower multiplier at the time of reassessment, but increasing multipliers over the next three years.

"It's an interesting idea," said Pierce, "but it may be robbing Peter to pay Paul. This is a very technical area."

'Superb' flight prompts new shuttle test plans

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — The space shuttle Enterprise, America's hope for future manned spaceflight, performed its fourth free flight so "superbly" Wednesday enthusiastic NASA officials announced only one more test will be needed.

"The flight today went better than most of us expected," said former astronaut Donald "Deke" Slayton, project manager of the approach and landing tests. "In my opinion it was the most important flight. It was a superb flight and I'm glad to have it ton Enterprise touched down on a dry behind us."

At a news conference after the 75-lake bed on its free fall flight from more than 20,000 feet, Slayton announced that the program has been so successful, the shuttle will make only one more free flight instead of the previously scheduled three.

That flight is scheduled for Oct. 26, and instead of using the vast dry lake landing strip, the Enterprise will glide to a landing for th first time on a regular concrete runway at this desert base.

AFTER THE final test, the shuttle will be shipped to NASA's facility at Huntsville, Ala., for vibration tests leading to its first orbital flight scheduled for March, 1979.

The shuttle's successful flight Wednesday, in which it took on the characteristics of a "high performance jet fighter" by gliding to a landing at 212 miles an hour, needing only 5,000 feet of runway instead of the projected 9,000 feet, proved the braking system of the craft could enable the shuttle to use a regular runway.

With astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly aboard, the delta-winged craft, which some scientists jokingly have labeled a "flying rock," took off bolted to the back of its Boeing 747 mother ship as in previous tests. But for the first time, the shuttle made the flight without its 750-pound plastic tailcone, which had provided the craft in previous tests with aerodynamic stability.

Without the tailcone, winds from the Enterprise buffeted the 747 while the two craft were climbing to separation altitude but the buffeting was not severe enough to abort the mission.

Before reaching launch altitude, the tandem planes went through a dress rehearsal for the "pitchover" maneuver which put them in a shallow dive to gather speed for the separation.

Enterprise was blasted loose from the 747, traveling at 300 mph, at an altitude of 20,536 feet about one hour after the mated craft lifted off from the base.

Carter signs $14.7 billion bill for cities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, saying some American city dwellers live in "devastated areas," Wednesday signed a bill authorizing $14.7 billion in grants for cities, especially in the Northeast and Midwest.

The allocations, spaced over a three-year period, give such cities as New York and Chicago tens of millions of dollars in added funding.

But other hard-pressed urban centers — including Washington — will have to plead their cases with the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development.

"There are some devastated areas where American citizens live that are a disgrace to our great country," Carter said at Rose Garden bill signing ceremonies. "There is no immediate solution that can be offered.

"I visited the South Bronx (in New York City) last week, which is enough to shake our confidence in the structure that we've evolved. I know that in many other places in the country there are similar areas."

"This bill takes a giant step forward," Carter said, because it places "a focus of attention" on major urban areas.

THE HOUSING and Community Development Act of 1977, which authorizes funds of $6.2 billion for fiscal 1978, gives HUD two formulas for distributing funds in the block grant program. The method offering the most money would be followed in each case.

Under the dual approach, the original formula for block grants weighs population at 25 per cent of consideration, over-crowded housing at 25 per cent and poverty level at 50 per cent.

The new formula, which most benefits older large cities, weighs population growth lag — the rate of population growth compared with other cities of similar size — at 20 per cent, poverty at 30 per cent and age of current housing at 50 per cent.

Groups urge minority for police superintendent

Two citizens watchdog groups urged Wednesday that a black or Latino be among the three finalists to succeed Police Supt. James Rochford who has resigned. Sister Gabriel Herbers, a Roman Catholic nun who is executive director of the Alliance to End Repression, and Ruth Wells, head of Citizens Alert, strongly recommended that minority candidates be considered. "In view of the serious tension between the police department and the minority population of Chicago, we urge that serious consideration be given by the police board to recommending a minority as a candidate," Sister Herbers said.

Both groups agreed Rochford's resignation raised four key issues, including political control by the mayor's office, police spying on lawful citizens and organizations, the need for an effective, representative police board and an open process for the selection of a new superintendent. Rochford, who announced his resignation Tuesday, said he plans to take a position in private industry. He said he will make a more specific announcement today.

Serious crime drops by 8,500

Serious crime in Chicago dropped by more than 8,500 in the first half of this year compared to 1976, preliminary statistics released Wednesday by the FBI showed. The north central region, which includes Illinois, experienced an 11 per cent drop in crime, the sharpest of any region, Atty. Gen. Griffin Bill said in the report releaued in Washington. Bell said reports of serious crimes dropped 7 per cent nationwide.

During the first six months of this year, 96,047 serious crimes in Chicago were reported, compared to 104,629 during the first half of 1976. Bell said the statistics are an indication that the "surge of crime in recent years is ebbing. "However, the number of violent crimes against persons remains high," he said. The breakdown for the first six months in Chicago was: 380 murders and nonnegligent manslaughter, 578 rapes, 7,640 robberies, 5,024 aggravated assaults, 18,117 burglaries, 49,116 larceny thefts and 15,192 motor vehicle thefts.

A HOUSE AT 104 N. Pine Ave., Arlington Heights, has been declared unsuitable for occupancy because of more than 20 building and housing code violations. Demolition proceedings will be started if improvements are not made, village officials said.

Village cracks down on 'slum' home

Using the building as a rooming house is a violation of village codes, officials say. It also is one of the main objections from neighbors living near the intersection of Wing Street and Pine Avenue.

"We've been fighting with that thing all summer," said Gerri Raupp, 103 N. Pine Ave., who lives directly across from Peters' property. "A week or so ago the Mexicans moved out, but there were 17 or 18 of them. A family moved in there eight or nine years ago and every year they added more."

THE PROBLEMS at 104 N. Pine Ave. have been growing over the past three years, said Mrs. Raupp, who has lived across the street from the house her entire life.

John Peters entered into a contract purchase for the property four years ago, agreeing to pay $40,000 for the site within five years, according to records obtained by Blomquist.

Mrs. Raupp said neighbors often have complained about the condition of the property, especially the garage, the parking of cars on the parkway, and for nearly two weeks last spring about 25 bags of garbage were left on the parkway.

"Our biggest worry is that it's a fire trap," Mrs. Raupp said. "If they want to fix up the house, fine, but what kind of people are going to rent it in that kind of shape."

Her neighbor, Werner Bokelmann, 25 N. Pine Ave., agreed.

"I don't say the house should be condemned and torn down because I don't know what kind of shape it's in inside, but that garage has to go. It's a disgrace to the neighborhood," said Bokelmann, who have lived in the neighborhood 55 years.

"The house would be okay if it were run properly, but I don't think it should be a rooming house," Bokelmann said.

5 arrested in 7-Eleven robbery

Three Northwest suburban residents were among five persons arrested early Wednesday in connection with a $250 armed robbery of a Crystal Lake 7-Eleven Store.

Arrested were Daniel Babincsak, 18, of 316 N. Lytle Dr., and a 15-year-old girl, both of Palatine, and Philip Rumann, 18, of 1807 Avon Ln., Arlington Heights. Police also arrested Christimo D. Carra, 31, of Crystal Lake, and Lorraine Curtis, 17, of Dundee.

Babincsak, Rumann, Carra and Miss Curtis were charged with armed robbery, felony theft, armed violence and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Police said the 15-year-old will be named in a juvenile petition on charges of armed violence, felony theft and armed robbery.

Police said Carra also was charged with contributing to sexual delinquency of a minor and taking indecent liberties with a minor. Police would not give reasons for this charge but said the 15-year-old was residing at Crystal Lake Motel at the time of her arrest.

Crystal Lake police said two of the men entered the 7-Eleven Store at Kieth and Virginia streets about 4:30 a.m. asking for cigarets. When an employe reached for a carton, the men allegedly pulled a knife on him and demanded money. Police would not say which of the three men went into the store.

They escaped with $250, said Lt. Tony Zimmerman of the Crystal Lake police.

Algonquin police arrested all five about 45 minutes later at a gas station after an employe called police when he matched the identity of one of the men with descriptions which had been sent to area gas stations.

Babincsak, Rumann, Carra and Miss Curtis were held Wednesday night in the McHenry County Jail pending a bond hearing today in circuit court.

The juvenile was taken to the Lake County Youth Home in Waukegan.

Carter, Torrijos slate canal meet

President Carter has invited Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos to meet with him Friday for a discussion of the canal treaties and the "public debate" about them, the White House announced Wednesday. The announcement said Torrijos "will be passing through Washington en route to Panama after a three-week trip through the Middle East and Europe." It said the Carter-Torrijos meeting would take place at the White House and "will focus on the Panama Canal treaties . . . and the public debate regarding such treaties that have taken place both in Panama and the United States." The announcement said Carter also would talk with Torrijos about the canal discussions he had with European and Israeli leaders during his trip.

It was also announced Carter will hold a nationally televised news conference at 9:30 a.m. CDT today. The President was expected to be asked about the outlook for his energy program, the Panama Canal Treaty ratification and progress in the strategic arms limitation negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Lawmakers swap abortion plans

The House and the Senate exchanged proposals Wednesday on the issue of federal funding of abortions — a dispute which threatens to hold up pay for thousands of government workers and benefits for millions of needy persons. They came to no agreement. The Senate then proposed that the two legislative bodies not try to settle the emotional abortion issue now but instead pass a simple resolution continuing the pay and programs of the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare and several smaller agencies for the rest of this month.

FDA urges ban of pep bills

The Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday it wants to ban the use of amphetamines — pep pills — as a diet aid for fat persons, a move that would further reduce the availability of the drugs. At the moment, the FDA said, amphetamines are approved only for short term obesity control and 88 per cent of the legitimate medical use of the drugs is for that purpose. Even though increased government control during the past decade has reduced the amount of amphetamines that legally can be manufactured by about 75 per cent, "abuse of these drugs continues," the FDA said. The agency has contended the drugs are of only "trivial" use in weight control.

Body may be that of gem dealer

A charred and bullet-riddled body dumped in the mountains of central Puerto Rico may be that of missing New York gem merchant Abraham Shafizadeh, according to the jeweler's brother and New York City Police. Shafizadeh disappeared on a trip to Puerto Rico in July with between $200,000 and $300,000 in gems. The bodies of three other jewelry dealers have been found in Puerto Rico in the past three years. The San Juan Star quoted Shafizadeh's brother, Dr. Farokh Shafizadeh-Hakimi, as saying that the body found resembled the gem dealer.

Soviets take slap at U.S. 'show'

The Soviet Union Wednesday accused the United States of using "psychological warfare" at the Belgrade conference by staging a "propaganda show" over human rights. The United States, which earlier criticized the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia for alleged mail violations, immediately issued an official denial of the Russian charges. In a strongly worded speech to the 35-nation meeting called to review the 1975 Helsinki agreement, Soviet delegate Yuli Vorontsov warned that "to transorm the Belgarde conference into an arena of psychological warfare would distort the intentions of the leaders who signed the (Helsinki) final act. We wonder why some people are putting on a show over human rights," Vorontsov told the Soviet news agency Tass.

Allende daughter commits suicide

Beatriz Allende, daughter of the late chilean President Salvador Allende, has committed suicide, Havana Radio reported Tuesday night. The broadcast monitored in Miami said Allende's daughter, who was married to a middle-level Cuban bureaucrat, was despondent over the political situation in Chile. She was said to have shot herself with a pistol at her home Monday. Cuban officials said a public funeral would be held as soon as the woman's relatives arrive in Havana. Beatriz Allende married and moved to Cuba five years ago, before her father's overthrow in Chile.

needed to maintain adequate and reliable supplies of energy."

BUT STAHR, director of utility research for Citizens for A Better Environment, praised the ICC decision, saying it shows the commission is "becoming sensitive to the fact that Edison has been overbuilding for the past four years."

"We turned up some Edison documents that showed that their $4.6 billion construction program would result in maintaining excessive reserves through 1983," said Stahr, whose group was among a number of citizen and industrial organizations objecting to the rate hike request.

Stahr said he believed the evidence played a role in the ICC's decision to deny a rate increase for construction plans.

"Edison has been crying wolf when there was no danger (of a lack of power reserves)," Stahr said. "I see this as a very significant sign."

Edison spokesman Stanbrough said the company still has plans to build a nuclear power station in Carroll County, four additional coal-fired stations and two other nuclear stations in 10 to 15 years.

Currently the company, which serves 2.8 million customers in Northern Illinois, has seven nuclear plants on three Illinois sites, providing 40 per cent of the company's power supply. Six other nuclear units are under construction on three other sites.

THE COMPANY'S other plants are powered by coal.

Wednesday's decision was the first involving public consideration of rate increase requests, a factor that Stahr also praised. Sunshine laws adopted recently changed the policy of closed ICC meetings, he said.

He predicted, however, that Edison will file for another rate hike, possibly as early as within two months, because of the ICC's decision to deny the full rate request.

Carter, Torrijos slate canal meet

President Carter has invited Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos to meet with him Friday for a discussion of the canal treaties and the "public debate" about them, the White House announced Wednesday. The announcement said Torrijos "will be passing through Washington en route to Panama after a three-week trip through the Middle East and Europe." It said the Carter-Torrijos meeting would take place at the White House and "will focus on the Panama Canal treaties . . . and the public debate regarding such treaties that have taken place both in Panama and the United States." The announcement said Carter also would talk with Torrijos about the canal discussions he had with European and Israeli leaders during his trip.

It was also announced Carter will hold a nationally televised news conference at 9:30 a.m. CDT today. The President was expected to be asked about the outlook for his energy program, the Panama Canal Treaty ratification and progress in the strategic arms limitation negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Lawmakers swap abortion plans

The House and the Senate exchanged proposals Wednesday on the issue of federal funding of abortions — a dispute which threatens to hold up pay for thousands of government workers and benefits for millions of needy persons. They came to no agreement. The Senate then proposed that the two legislative bodies not try to settle the emotional abortion issue now but instead pass a simple resolution continuing the pay and programs of the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare and several smaller agencies for the rest of this month.

FDA urges ban of pep bills

The Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday it wants to ban the use of amphetamines — pep pills — as a diet aid for fat persons, a move that would further reduce the availability of the drugs. At the moment, the FDA said, amphetamines are approved only for short term obesity control and 88 per cent of the legitimate medical use of the drugs is for that purpose. Even though increased government control during the past decade has reduced the amount of amphetamines that legally can be manufactured by about 75 per cent, "abuse of these drugs continues," the FDA said. The agency has contended the drugs are of only "trivial" use in weight control.

Body may be that of gem dealer

A charred and bullet-riddled body dumped in the mountains of central Puerto Rico may be that of missing New York gem merchant Abraham Shafizadeh, according to the jeweler's brother and New York City Police. Shafizadeh disappeared on a trip to Puerto Rico in July with between $200,000 and $300,000 in gems. The bodies of three other jewelry dealers have been found in Puerto Rico in the past three years. The San Juan Star quoted Shafizadeh's brother, Dr. Farokh Shafizadeh-Hakimi, as saying that the body found resembled the gem dealer.

Soviets take slap at U.S. 'show'

The Soviet Union Wednesday accused the United States of using "psychological warfare" at the Belgrade conference by staging a "propaganda show" over human rights. The United States, which earlier criticized the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia for alleged mail violations, immediately issued an official denial of the Russian charges. In a strongly worded speech to the 35-nation meeting called to review the 1975 Helsinki agreement, Soviet delegate Yuli Vorontsov warned that "to transorm the Belgarde conference into an arena of psychological warfare would distort the intentions of the leaders who signed the (Helsinki) final act. We wonder why some people are putting on a show over human rights," Vorontsov told the Soviet news agency Tass.

Pistol-whippers get 30-50 years

Two Chicago men were sentenced to up to 50 years in prison for a Park Ridge home invasion in which a 54-year-old woman was pistol whipped so badly she required plastic surgery and hospitalization for her wounds.

Gale Nettles,, 38, and Paul W. Tedder, 33, both of 844 W. Anslie, were each sentenced to from 30 to 50 years on an armed robbery charge stemming from the home invasion of Ruth Fruehling, 54, of 320 S. Greenwood Ave., Park Ridge.

The men entered the home about 3:30 a.m. Aug. 12, 1976 and assaulted Mrs. Fruehling in the basement. Asistant States Atty. Michael Corkell said Tedder threatened to kill the woman before pistol-whipping her for five minutes, he said.

The men escaped after ransacking the home and ripping out the telephone wire, Corkell said.

Both were apprehended by Chicago police Sept. 21, 1976 and picked out of a police line-up by Mrs. Fruehling.

Nettles and Tedder were also sentenced to from six to 18 years in prison for burglary. Tedder was also sentenced to from three to nine years in prison for aggravated assault.

In passing sentence, Cook County circuit Judge Marvin J. Peters said that "people have a right to feel safe in their own homes."

After the sentencing, Peters said that "home invasion is the kind of crime that is especially reprehensible. Here we had a woman 54 years old who was pistol whipped and the men talked about whether she should be silenced."

Peters said his sentences from 30 to 50 years were passed "to make sure the opportunity will never be presented to them in the future where they will be able to carry through on that threat"

Panel to study possibility of raising drinking age

Members of the Northwest Municipal Conference Wednesday said the legal drinking age should be raised to 21 and will undertake a study to see if it is possible.

Arlington Heights Village Trustee Ralph Clarbour asked the conference to look into the matter, saying his village board is debating the question.

He presented statistics showing that liquor offenses in both Arlington Heights and Illinois have increased dramatically since the drinking age was lowered to 19 by the Illinois General Assembly in 1973.

Noting that several attempts to raise the drinking age have failed in the legislature, conference members said it would be ineffective to change the drinking age unless it were done on at least a regional level.

The conference's legislative committee will take an indepth look at the problem and come back to the group with a recommendation. Members said the conference could act regionally or call for new legislation.

Officials of several villages agreed the drinking has been a serious problem among teen-agers in their towns, and at least two towns already are considered raising the drinking age.

"MY BOARD DID not pass the ordinance — not because they didn't feel they should — but because they felt it would be futile," said Village Pres. Virginia Hayter of Hoffman Estates.

Mount Prospect Village Mgr. Robert Eppley said his board is going to look into the problem, noting his mayor, Carolyn Krause, has announced support for raising the drinking age.

"It has caused nothing but trouble since it has been in," he said, noting there has been an increaae in teenage vandalism. And alcohol is involved in it."

Niles Police Chief Clarence Emrikson said 16 to 19 year olds always have been able to get alcohol surreptitiously.

Since the drinking age was lowered, he said the teen-agers as young as 14 have been found intoxicated.

"They have always been able to get it but they haven't been able to sit in gin mills and get half smashed so they could give police officers a hard time."

Panel to study possibility of raising drinking age

Members of the Northwest Municipal Conference Wednesday said the legal drinking age should be raised to 21 and will undertake a study to see if it is possible.

Arlington Heights Village Trustee Ralph Clarbour asked the conference to look into the matter, saying his village board is debating the question.

He presented statistics showing that liquor offenses in both Arlington Heights and Illinois have increased dramatically since the drinking age was lowered to 19 by the Illinois General Assembly in 1973.

Noting that several attempts to raise the drinking age have failed in the legislature, conference members said it would be ineffective to change the drinking age unless it were done on at least a regional level.

The conference's legislative committee will take an indepth look at the problem and come back to the group with a recommendation. Members said the conference could act regionally or call for new legislation.

Officials of several villages agreed the drinking has been a serious problem among teen-agers in their towns, and at least two towns already are considered raising the drinking age.

"MY BOARD DID not pass the ordinance — not because they didn't feel they should — but because they felt it would be futile," said Village Pres. Virginia Hayter of Hoffman Estates.

Mount Prospect Village Mgr. Robert Eppley said his board is going to look into the problem, noting his mayor, Carolyn Krause, has announced support for raising the drinking age.

"It has caused nothing but trouble since it has been in," he said, noting there has been an increaae in teenage vandalism. And alcohol is involved in it."

Niles Police Chief Clarence Emrikson said 16 to 19 year olds always have been able to get alcohol surreptitiously.

Since the drinking age was lowered, he said the teen-agers as young as 14 have been found intoxicated.

"They have always been able to get it but they haven't been able to sit in gin mills and get half smashed so they could give police officers a hard time."

Chemical is target of airbag foes

By Douglas Starr

Boston — On June 30, Sec. of Transportation Brock Adams ordered carmakers to install passive restraint systems (such as airbags and automatic seatbelts) beginning with the 1982 model year. Even though critics charged that the chemical used to inflate the airbags is itself dangerous, Congress upheld the order.

The worrisome substance is sodium azide. A dry crystal in wafer or pellet form, it quickly turns to nitrogen gas when ignited by a "squib," or electric match. New cars will contain about two pounds of the substance in steel containers mounted in the dashboard and steering wheel. Manufacturers say it is the only chemical that safely produces pure nitrogen, a harmless gas that comprises more than 70 per cent of the atmosphere.

But sodium azide is recognized as highly poisonous and fatal if inhaled or swallowed. Airbag foe Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa. charges that the chemical could present the public with "a serious danger if the canister is opened, broken, or leaks."

ALSO, ACCORDING to Washington State University researchers R. A. Nilan and A. Kleinhofs, "sodium azide can cause genetic damage . . . great caution must be utilized in the use of this compound."

Manufacturers and Dept. of Transportation spokesman say the chance of people coming into contact with the chemical is extremely small. The substance is sealed in high-strength steel containers. "You'd need a commercial hacksaw to get it out," one researcher says. And virtually all of the sodium azide is consumed in the nitrogen-producing reaction.

A Dept. of Transportation spokesman also points out that any collision serious enough to break the canister would set off the airbags, as would fire.

But the chemical could prove a hazard in abandoned or junked cars. Government officials concede that before airbags are widely used, regulations concerning their safe disposal will have to be devised. Such regulations — under the Toxic Substances Control Act or Resource Recovery and Conservation Act — could require junk dealers to remove the canisters and sell them to recyclers or bury them according to federal guidelines. More simply, dealers could set off the airbags before disposing of the car.

One airbag manufacturer believes that sodium azide disposal problems make other systems more attractive. Allied Chemical president Donald Radke says that he prefers a "hybrid" system using compressed argon gas. Used in the passenger side of General Motors test cars, this system seems a second choice so far. "It's more complicated and takes up more room," says a GM spokesman. Other engineers say bottled gas stored over long periods of time is not always dependable.

Ron Ence, aide to Shuster, adds that compounds made from sodium azide can be explosive. Unused canisters could become "open prey for vandals and people looking to make cheap bombs," he charges. Product developer Steve Istvanffy of Montreal-based Canadian Industry Ltd., which makes sodium azide terms the charges ridiculous. "It's about the last thing you'd use to make a bomb. You'd be far more likely to damage yourself." He explains that the compounds are low-powered and unstable.

Pro-airbag forces charge that Representative Shuster is using sodium azide as one of many levers to block mandatory passive restraint systems in automobiles. According to National Highway Traffic Safety Administration attorney Bruce Buckheit, whether or not sodium azide proves acceptable has little to do with the future of required airbags. "We're not here to sell sodium azide," he comments. "We've alerted EPA that if this rule flies they'll have to take steps. If sodium azide is banned that's nothing to us."

Congress voted Wednesday to uphold an order requiring passive restraint by 1984.

Airbags . . . hidden menace may lurk in system.

Congress votes for airbags in 1984 new cars

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After hearing arguments that airbags will "keep a lot of people out of hospitals and out of the morgue," Congress Wednesday upheld an administration order requiring passive restraints in all new cars by 1984.

The action came on a 65-31 Senate vote killing a resolution that would have overturned Transportation Sec. Brock Adams' June 30 order. It requires automatic crash protection devices in big cars by the 1982 model year, in medium size and compacts by 1983 and in subcompacts by 1984.

To block the order, both houses of Congress would have to vote against it by Friday. Just hours before the Senate action, the House Commerce Committee voted 16-14 to keep the measure from getting to the House floor for a vote.

"THIS IS A victory for us, but even more for our children, because highway accidents are the single greatest killer of American youth," Adams said after the vote.

Adams has estimated 9,000 lives a year would be saved by mandatory use of airbags, which automatically inflate from under the dashboard in head-on collisions to protect front seat occupants from injury.

Opponents called for more testing, citing evidence that airbags can malfunction. Some, like Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., protested the government's intrusion into people's lives.

"We elected a President who said he was going to get the federal government out of our hair and now he's in our driver's seat," Goldwater said.

Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H., a former state insurance commissioner, said insurance companies favor the airbag.

Chemical is target of airbag foes

By Douglas Starr

Boston — On June 30, Sec. of Transportation Brock Adams ordered carmakers to install passive restraint systems (such as airbags and automatic seatbelts) beginning with the 1982 model year. Even though critics charged that the chemical used to inflate the airbags is itself dangerous, Congress upheld the order.

The worrisome substance is sodium azide. A dry crystal in wafer or pellet form, it quickly turns to nitrogen gas when ignited by a "squib," or electric match. New cars will contain about two pounds of the substance in steel containers mounted in the dashboard and steering wheel. Manufacturers say it is the only chemical that safely produces pure nitrogen, a harmless gas that comprises more than 70 per cent of the atmosphere.

But sodium azide is recognized as highly poisonous and fatal if inhaled or swallowed. Airbag foe Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa. charges that the chemical could present the public with "a serious danger if the canister is opened, broken, or leaks."

ALSO, ACCORDING to Washington State University researchers R. A. Nilan and A. Kleinhofs, "sodium azide can cause genetic damage . . . great caution must be utilized in the use of this compound."

Manufacturers and Dept. of Transportation spokesman say the chance of people coming into contact with the chemical is extremely small. The substance is sealed in high-strength steel containers. "You'd need a commercial hacksaw to get it out," one researcher says. And virtually all of the sodium azide is consumed in the nitrogen-producing reaction.

A Dept. of Transportation spokesman also points out that any collision serious enough to break the canister would set off the airbags, as would fire.

But the chemical could prove a hazard in abandoned or junked cars. Government officials concede that before airbags are widely used, regulations concerning their safe disposal will have to be devised. Such regulations — under the Toxic Substances Control Act or Resource Recovery and Conservation Act — could require junk dealers to remove the canisters and sell them to recyclers or bury them according to federal guidelines. More simply, dealers could set off the airbags before disposing of the car.

One airbag manufacturer believes that sodium azide disposal problems make other systems more attractive. Allied Chemical president Donald Radke says that he prefers a "hybrid" system using compressed argon gas. Used in the passenger side of General Motors test cars, this system seems a second choice so far. "It's more complicated and takes up more room," says a GM spokesman. Other engineers say bottled gas stored over long periods of time is not always dependable.

Ron Ence, aide to Shuster, adds that compounds made from sodium azide can be explosive. Unused canisters could become "open prey for vandals and people looking to make cheap bombs," he charges. Product developer Steve Istvanffy of Montreal-bamakes sodium azide terms the charsed Canadian Industry Ltd., which ges ridiculous. "It's about the last thing you'd use to make a bomb. You'd be far more likely to damage yourself." He explains that the compounds are low-powered and unstable.

Pro-airbag forces charge that Representative Shuster is using sodium azide as one of many levers to block mandatory passive restraint systems in automobiles. According to National Highway Traffic Safety Administration attorney Bruce Buckheit, whether or not sodium azide proves acceptable has little to do with the future of required airbags. "We're not here to sell sodium azide," he comments. "We've alerted EPA that if this rule flies they'll have to take steps. If sodium azide is banned that's nothing to us."

Congress voted Wednesday to uphold an order requiring passive restraint by 1984.

Congress votes for airbags in 1984 new cars

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After hearing arguments that airbags will "keep a lot of people out of hospitals and out of the morgue," Congress Wednesday upheld an administration order requiring passive restraints in all new cars by 1984.

The action came on a 65-31 Senate vote killing a resolution that would have overturned Transportation Sec. Brock Adams' June 30 order. It requires automatic crash protection devices in big cars by the 1982 model year, in medium size and compacts by 1983 and in subcompacts by 1984.

To block the order, both houses of Congress would have to vote against it by Friday. Just hours before the Senate action, the House Commerce Committee voted 16-14 to keep the measure from getting to the House floor for a vote.

"THIS IS A victory for us, but even more for our children, because highway accidents are the single greatest killer of American youth," Adams said after the vote.

Adams has estimated 9,000 lives a year would be saved by mandatory use of airbags, which automatically inflate from under the dashboard in head-on collisions to protect front seat occupants from injury.

Opponents called for more testing, citing evidence that airbags can malfunction. Some, like Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., protested the government's intrusion into people's lives.

Wet balloonists give it up—for now

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (UPI) — Two Colorado adventurers were forced to ditch their helium-filled balloon "Eagle" in the Atlantic Ocean Wednesday — the 15th futile attempt to cross the ocean by balloon — but said after being rescued they will try again.

The two men and the gondola of their craft were picked up by the Canadian Coast Guard ship Provo Wallis shortly before 6:30 p.m. EDT some 80 miles east of Dartmouth.

The balloonists, Dewey Reinhard, 47, and Steve Stephenson, 44, of Colorado Springs, Colo., did not say why they had been forced down after nearly two days in the air. They were cold, wet and tired but insisted they were not downhearted despite spending some three hours on the choppy Atlantic waters.

"YES, WE'RE well, although we're very wet, very cold. We are both in pretty good health. We just haven't had any sleep in the past 24 hours. It turned out to be a lot of work on that flight," said Reinhard.

Asked whether they would again defy history with a transatlantic attempt, Reinhard said, "Yes, I think I'll try again next year."

Noting his chilled condition, Reinhard quipped "I think it might be a little earlier in the year."

He laughed off the need for a medical checkup. "I think rest and relaxation for us is more in order now."

Reinhard said he had contacted his family. "They called earlier this evening after they had heard we had landed, and, of course, they were disappointed that we hadn't made it, but they were glad that we were not injured in landing or anything."

HE SAID THEY expected to remain here a few days, supervising the crating of their craft's gondola for shipment back to Colorado.

Afterward, the men planned to take a commercial flight to Europe for a vacation. "We planned to go there anyway," said Reinhard.

The Wallis' captain, Thomas Hicks, said he had no difficulty coping with the waves and chill rainy weather in the rescue operation — "We flipped a line over and pulled their craft aboard. It was no problem."

The black-and-silver "Eagle" took off Monday from Bar Harbor, Me. The balloonists had planned to spend five days on the trip and hoped to land in Ireland.

PRIOR TO DITCHING the two balloonists had "anchored," using a unique system of buoys linked to a steel cable in an attempt to hold the craft on course until a low pressure system passed.

But the planned rise following shedding of ballast never took place. Instead the $250,000 crossing attempt once again ended in Atlantic waters.

Since 1873, 15 attempts have been made and five persons have died.

The longest distance traveled by a balloonist on this route was recorded last year when Ed Yost, a lifetime balloonist who holds several patents in the field, reached 200 miles east of the Azores.

Yost made Reinhard's balloon and was in charge of its inflation. He also designed the gondola.

IQ tests useless, educator says

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Asa Hilliard III, dean of education at San Francisco State University, testified in U.S. District Court Wednesday that standard IQ tests are practically useless for ranking children by intelligence.

Hilliard was the first witness at a trial to determine whether the state of California should be permanently banned from employing the tests in assigning black youngsters to classes for "the educable mentally retarded."

The ban is sought by civil rights lawyers on grounds that the standard tests are culturally biased against blacks.

WHEN THE SUIT was filed, 27 per cent of the retarded in California were black — although they comprised only 9 per cent of the school population. But Hilliard said the tests are useless for several reasons in addition to cultural bias.

Results are skewed, he said, because of "the practice effect." When given a test involving blocks, one child does well because he has done a lot of playing with blocks. Another child who never played with blocks does less well.

Another reason some children do poorly, he said, is because they suffer from poor teaching. He said standard IQ tests really measure achievement rather than intelligence.

HE SAID EDUCATIONAL psychologists do not agree on what intelligence is. If forced to define the term, he would say it is "the ability to learn something somebody else is trying to teach you."

In 1897, groups of 500 white children and 500 blacks in Washington, D.C., were tested on their ability to memorize stanzas of poetry. The blacks did best, and Hilliard said "it was then decided that memory is not intelligence."

But Hilliard's main argument was that it is impossible to standardize IQ tests in the United States because of the existence of too many cultural differences. He cited numerous questions in current tests to which different children would give different correct answers.

When a child is asked on a Wechsler test how to respond when hit by a much smaller child, the correct answer would indicate restraint. However, for children in some neighborhoods, the correct answer would be to hit back because that is what they are taught.

SOME CHILDREN cannot answer a question requiring awareness of checking accounts because their parents do not have such accounts. Other children can fail to serialize a group of pictures into a story because they have different perceptions of a key figure — the policeman.

The case, originally filed in 1971, is being heard without a jury by Judge Robert F. Peckham. In 1974, he issued a preliminary injunction barring the tests for retarded child classification in California.

The state is the defendant and will contend that the disproportionate number of blacks was because intelligence impairments "are more frequently found among persons of lower socioeconomic status."

Angry House kills new ethics reform proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House killed a congressional ethics reform bill Wednesday apparently angered by embarrassing disclosures brought to light by an earlier reform and soured at the prospect of further policing.

The surprise move, a personal defeat for Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, followed Tuesday's disclosure that members had used taxpayer money for business entertainment expenses, including club dues and an office Christmas party.

"I know the timing (of the new reform proposal) is bad because of the stories in the papers," O'Neill said. "There is resentment by many members because they have to reveal to the public so many things."

ALTHOUGH THE decisive vote was on a technical matter, it effectively quashed the last major reform proposal of the Commission on Administrative Review, a special panel assigned to tighten ethical standards and revise administrative procedures following last year's congressional sex scandals.

O'Neill said he wanted the proposed reform bill — which focused on housekeeping reforms, staff grievance procedures and committee system revisions — to be considered under a particular parliamentary rule.

O'Neill warned he would withdraw the bill if the rule were not approved and said, "I see no chance of further ethics legislation this year."

The House then defeated the rule, 252-160.

Several House members had expressed indignation at the publication Tuesday of a House clerk's report, which, under a new reform requirement, divulged office expense spending information previously kept private.

NEWSPAPERS GAVE prominent display to the wining-and-dining details disclosed.

"Here's an example of what these reforms have done for us so far!" said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., waving a copy of the clerk's report over his head.

The measure killed Wednesday would have created an administrator to manage all of the housekeeping business of the House with the help of a comptroller and an auditor.

IQ tests useless, educator says

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Asa Hilliard III, dean of education at San Francisco State University, testified in U.S. District Court Wednesday that standard IQ tests are practically useless for ranking children by intelligence.

Hilliard was the first witness at a trial to determine whether the state of California should be permanently banned from employing the tests in assigning black youngsters to classes for "the educable mentally retarded."

The ban is sought by civil rights lawyers on grounds that the standard tests are culturally biased against blacks.

WHEN THE SUIT was filed, 27 per cent of the retarded in California were black — although they comprised only 9 per cent of the school population. But Hilliard said the tests are useless for several reasons in addition to cultural bias.

Results are skewed, he said, because of "the practice effect." When given a test involving blocks, one child does well because he has done a lot of playing with blocks. Another child who never played with blocks does less well.

Another reason some children do poorly, he said, is because they suffer from poor teaching. He said standard IQ tests really measure achievement rather than intelligence.

HE SAID EDUCATIONAL psychologists do not agree on what intelligence is. If forced to define the term, he would say it is "the ability to learn something somebody else is trying to teach you."

In 1897, groups of 500 white children and 500 blacks in Washington, D.C., were tested on their ability to memorize stanzas of poetry. The blacks did best, and Hilliard said "it was then decided that memory is not intelligence."

But Hilliard's main argument was that it is impossible to standardize IQ tests in the United States because of the existence of too many cultural differences. He cited numerous questions in current tests to which different children would give different correct answers.

When a child is asked on a Wechsler test how to respond when hit by a much smaller child, the correct answer would indicate restraint. However, for children in some neighborhoods, the correct answer would be to hit back because that is what they are taught.

SOME CHILDREN cannot answer a question requiring awareness of checking accounts because their parents do not have such accounts. Other children can fail to serialize a group of pictures into a story because they have different perceptions of a key figure — the policeman.

The case, originally filed in 1971, is being heard without a jury by Judge Robert F. Peckham. In 1974, he issued a preliminary injunction barring the tests for retarded child classification in California.

The state is the defendant and will contend that the disproportionate number of blacks was because intelligence impairments "are more frequently found among persons of lower socioeconomic status."

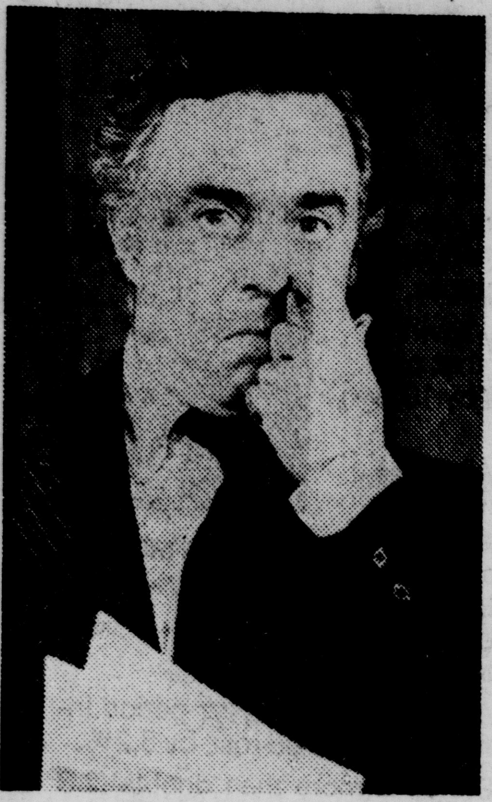
Stalled funds bill may force Labor-HEW aid cutoff



JOSEPH CALIFANO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Administration officials warned Wednesday as many as several million unemployed, disabled and poor persons may be deprived of benefits by an unprecedented stalemate in Congress over abortions.

Thousands of federal workers also will receive reduced paychecks because the issue of federally subsidized abortions has stalled a $60.1 billion appropriation for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

Never before has Congress stalled on a Labor-HEW bill without providing some funding through a continuing resolution, officials said. The agencies' spending authority expired Sept. 30.

HEW SEC. Joseph Califano and Labor Sec. Ray Marshall pleaded with creditors to be "considerate and humen" with federal workers who cannot pay their bills. Marshall said it will be very hard for low-wage workers.

No federal workers have promised to strike without full pay.

"As bad as that is," Marshall said, "There's the even more serious problem of people not getting the benefits we provide." He suggested the situation ultimately could affect as many as three million persons receiving unemployment compensation.

Marshall said Kansas, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Arizona already have announced they will be forced to stop paying unemployment compensation.

ALTHOUGH UNEMPLOYMENT benefits are funded separately, Marshall said these states cannot meet administrative costs for disbursing benefits without money from the Labor-HEW bill.

HEW officials said the funding problem will not hurt recipients of Social Security or welfare payements. But they said they will be forced to curtail other smaller benefit programs — including black lung compensation.

Some 135,000 HEW employes and 14,000 at the Labor Dept. were expecting paychecks early next week, and officials said they will be cut in half unless the appropriations bill goes through this week.

Marshall and Califano announced these steps to help federal workers:

- The National Federal Credit Union Administration will encourage all federal credit unions nationwide to give "maximum possible assistance" to HEW employes.
- More than 17,000 banks and other lenders who normally receive payments from government workers were asked to "exercise a lenient collection policy."
- Local utility companies and credit institutions in major cities with federal workers were notified of the problem.

'Total person' can handle all woes: Peale

by DAVE IBATA

Norman Vincent Peale

The "total person" shows no fear over his problems, the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale told a convention of Illinois Realtors in Rosemont Wednesday.

Peale, 79, New York City minister and author of "The Power of Positive Thinking," delivered the keynote address at the opening session of the convention of the Illinois Assn. of Realtors.

Peale spoke on "The Total Person and How He or She Gets Positive Results" at the gathering, which is meeting through Friday at the Sheraton O'Hare Hotel and the O'Hare Ramada Inn, both in Rosemont.

The total person "does not show any fear at that phenomenon known as a problem," Peale said. "Every problem contains the seed of its own solution."

Only the dead are without problems, Peale said, and a person becomes strong by resistance to discouragement and struggling with life's difficulties.

"The more problems you have, the more alive you are," Peale said. "And if any of you here today have no problems at all, you're in great jeopardy."

Peale described the types of problems one faces.

"First and foremost there is worry," he said. "Then we have the problem of fear, which may be defined as worry in depth. And then we have anxiety."

Peale said many of the woes of modern society arise out of anxiety.

"But you are positive thinkers," Peale told the Realtors, "and you know with the help of the good God you can overcome your personal problems.

"There isn't any problem you or I in this life cannot meet successfully if we do not meet the problem with an emotional response," Peale said. "If an individual will think coolly, dispassionately, objectively, intellectually and spiritually, he can handle any old problem he'll face up to in this life."

Stotts trial to start in November

The trial of Larry R. Stotts, accused of fatally stabbing a Mount Prospect grocery clerk Feb. 20, is expected to begin the first week of November.

Cook County Circuit Court Associate Judge Jerome T. Burke said Wednesday a date will be set after final pretrial motions are completed in a hearing scheduled Oct. 26 in the Des Plaines branch of the Cook County Circuit Court.

Stotts, 19, of 1701 Dennis Pl., Mount Prospect, allegedly killed Mrs. Nargis Alvi, 27, by stabbing her in the K & G Food Mart, 1760 Algonquin Rd., Mount Prospect. Mrs. Alvi, stabbed twice in the chest, had been dragged into a storage cooler before police arrived.

World Series."

He was getting all of the publicity he needed. Reporters and photographers surrounded him and he talked about the program, about how it is nothing against religion, about how he believes the Illinois Constitution protects people from taxation if they make their home a church and hold regular "services."

"WE'RE DOING this," he said, "because we have no choice."

A couple wearing matching brown leather jackets walked in, and immediately a few members of the press broke away from Roche and went toward them.

They were not disgruntled taxpayers, however. They had just seen all the cameras and were wondering what was going on. Meanwhile, Roche continued to fend off repetitive questions.

"The taxpayers — we have all the power. We have the money," he said, adding politicians tend to forget they are "our" employes.

"What if nobody paid their taxes? Who'd pay for fire protection and police service and all those things?" a reporter asked.

"THAT'S THEIR problem — the politicians," Roche replied. "We don't worry about that."

He was not enjoying himself, but he was trying to make the best of it, while his wife took a chair off by herself near a wall.

Another "minister," Joseph Johnston of Mount Prospect, slipped in. He had come to listen, he said. But he ended up entertaining.

"Go ahead, my children," he said gregariously, inviting questions. He finished each statement with a few "my sons."

"It's fun. It's like twisting the tiger'sutail," Johnston said. "I'm surprised Johnny Roche didn't have more of a crowd."

Roche by now had been corralled by an irate radio reporter who had come "all the way from Chicago" and was demanding an exclusive interview in return.

IT WAS approaching 9 p.m., and most of the reporters had filtered out. Roche played with the keys in his pocket and tried to come up with a reason for the zero turnout.

He has held two other "ordination" meetings, and both had been attended by more than 50 persons. At the one in Hanover Park, he said, he apparently was a "victim" of someone who wanted to sabotage the meeting as a way of discrediting the cause.

The organizer in Hanover Park, who had promised a good crowd, apparently had been under some kinds of pressures, Roche said. Not even the organizer had showed up.

"I goofed. It's a flop," Roche said finally. "It's a shame. I'll do better next time.

How do you figure our saving-spending habits?

DONALD F. MORTON
Chairman & President

The percent of personal income directed to personal savings in the year ending March 31, 1977, declined by 25%, according to figures available from various government sources.

The declining portion allocated to savings is more revealing when it is realized that personal income in the United States rose by 10% IN THE SAME PERIOD.

In fact, the personal savings allocation was the only index registering a decline in the one-year period. Largest percentage increases went to personal taxes (up 18.7%) and durable goods expenditures (up 15%). Non-durable goods expenditures increased 8.3%, and expenditures on services rose 12.4% in relation to income.

Consumer installment credit extended in the one-year period increased 8.5% and consumer installment credit repaid rose by 5.2%.

Personal income in the United States is more than double (2.3 times) what it was in 1967, according to Consumer Price Index figures. Personal taxes are 2.65 times 1967 levels, and expenditures for services and durable goods are 2.5 times what they were ten years ago. By contrast, personal savings are less than 1.5 times what they were in 1967.

It is interesting to observe personal saving trends in relation to the recessions of 1970 and 1973-74. In the first quarter of 1969, personal saving had dropped to 35% below the personal income level. With the 1970 recession it climbed sharply until by mid-1971 it was 10.5% above the steadily rising personal income. Again in mid-1972, personal savings were 24.5% below the income index, whereas by mid-1975, the percentage allocated to savings had risen to 27.5% above the income index. By the end of 1975, it had plummeted below the income index, and its downward trend has persisted to the present.

Keep in mind that this does not mean that gross savings have declined but rather that the portion of total income directed to savings has suffered. Whenever Americans are afraid of the future, they tend to save. With the return of confidence, they spend. An understandable though short-sighted view!

With that kind of reasoning, Noah would have built the ark after the flood.

by DAVE IBATA

Norman Vincent Peale

The "total person" shows no fear over his problems, the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale told a convention of Illinois Realtors in Rosemont Wednesday.

Peale, 79, New York City minister and author of "The Power of Positive Thinking," delivered the keynote address at the opening session of the convention of the Illinois Assn. of Realtors.

Peale spoke on "The Total Person and How He or She Gets Positive Results" at the gathering, which is meeting through Friday at the Sheraton O'Hare Hotel and the O'Hare Ramada Inn, both in Rosemont.

The total person "does not show any fear at that phenomenon known as a problem," Peale said. "Every problem contains the seed of its own solution."

Only the dead are without problems, Peale said, and a person becomes strong by resistance to discouragement and struggling with life's difficulties.

"The more problems you have, the more alive you are," Peale said. "And if any of you here today have no problems at all, you're in great jeopardy."

Peale described the types of problems one faces.

"First and foremost there is worry," he said. "Then we have the problem of fear, which may be defined as worry in depth. And then we have anxiety."

Peale said many of the woes of modern society arise out of anxiety.

"But you are positive thinkers," Peale told the Realtors, "and you know with the help of the good God you can overcome your personal problems.

"There isn't any problem you or I in this life cannot meet successfully if we do not meet the problem with an emotional response," Peale said. "If an individual will think coolly, dispassionately, objectively, intellectually and spiritually, he can handle any old problem he'll face up to in this life."

Stotts trial to start in November

The trial of Larry R. Stotts, accused of fatally stabbing a Mount Prospect grocery clerk Feb. 20, is expected to begin the first week of November.

Cook County Circuit Court Associate Judge Jerome T. Burke said Wednesday a date will be set after final pretrial motions are completed in a hearing scheduled Oct. 26 in the Des Plaines branch of the Cook County Circuit Court.

Stotts, 19, of 1701 Dennis Pl., Mount Prospect, allegedly killed Mrs. Nargis Alvi, 27, by stabbing her in the K & G Food Mart, 1760 Algonquin Rd., Mount Prospect. Mrs. Alvi, stabbed twice in the chest, had been dragged into a storage cooler before police arrived.

Chicago, HEW in accord on 12-year school dispute

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A settlement, announced Wednesday in a 12-year old dispute between the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare and the Chicago school system, will include a teacher desegregation plan and provisions for student instructions in 20 languages.

HEW Sec. Joseph Califano said the plan could serve as a model for other school systems.

"The Chicago settlement should be a signal to the nation that there are alternatives to divisive litigation that drags on for years while teachers and students suffer from the harm inflicted by segregated faculties and inadequate attention to the needs of those children whose first language is not English," he said.

THE SETTLEMENT was announced at a news conference in Washington and in Chicago.

The plan provides for desegregation of faculty and principals and a comprehensive bilingual education program for children, HEW said.

It sets a goal of achieving a racial-ethnic composition of the faculty in each Chicago school that will vary no more than 10 per cent above or below the racial-ethnic composition of the faculty across all schools.

City school faculty is 54 per cent white and 46 per cent minority, including blacks and Hispanics.

THE DESEGREGATION should be completed "within a year or two," Califano said.

He said the 10 per cent goal would be achieved in stages — within a year — with a 12.5 per cent goal the interim objective.

The dispute dates back to 1965 when the U.S. education commissioners under President Lyndon Johnson moved to deny federal funds for Chicago schools because of alleged discrimination in city schools.

Rep. Ralph Metcalfe, D-Ill., who appeared at HEW for the announcement, said it represented "a great day" for Chicago and an assurance that race would not be a factor in the selection of employes and teachers for city schools.

HEW statistics for the 1974-75 school year, latest available, put Chicago's school system as the nation's third largest with more than 500,000 students. New York and Los Angeles are the largest, in that order.

The agreement removes the threat of loss of most federal aid. A question remains on the city's eligibility for funds under the emergency school aid program.

Califano said the settlement would eliminate the "grounds for ineligibility for federal funding" but did not say when Chicago schools would become eligible.

Since the first Nobel Peace Prize was awarded in 1901, the choices of the Nobel committee have often proved that peace can be controversial.

Most recently the awards to Martin Luther King Jr., former German Chancellor Willy Brandt, and former Sec. of State Henry Kissinger prompted criticism from one political faction or another.

This year, however, the Nobel Peace Prize for 1976 has been awarded to two women who have been working to end the senseless killing in Northern Ireland and the 1977 prize has gone to Amnesty International, a worldwide organization which fights political oppression.

Those awards ought to be noncontroversial since the work of Betty Williams and Mairead Corrigan in Northern Ireland and of Amnesty International on a worldwide basis are good examples of the ideals the Peace Prize was meant to promote.

In Northern Ireland, a land often described by the cliche "strife-torn," Mrs. Williams and Miss Corrigan, one a Protestant and the other Catholic, have brought sanity to public discussion. They formed the Northern Ireland Peace Movement which has united both Catholics and Protestants who are sickened by the continuing violence in that country.

If the peace movement has not yet ended the killing in Northern Ireland, it has at least focused public attention on the deep desire of ordinary people for peace. That in itself is a worthy accomplishment.

In contrast to the individual focus of the 1976 award, the 1977 award honors an organization with 180,000 members in 107 countries. Since its founding in 1961, Amnesty International has campaigned on behalf of those persecuted for their political beliefs, ethnic origins and religion. It is the foremost advocate of political prisoners and exposes instances of torture wherever it finds them.

The existence of organizations like Amnesty International and individuals like Mrs. Williams and Miss Corrigan serve as reminders of how far the world still is from the ideal of peace.

But such examples as the 1976 and 1977 peace prize winners also provide inspiration that however violent the world, there are still those who work toward the ideal.

Jurors correct in TV violence case

It was a bizarre murder trial.

Ronny Zamora, 15, was found guilty of first degree murder and robbery when jurors did not believe his highly publicized defense that "television intoxication" moved the boy to murder. His defense attorney Ellis Rubin said Zamora was addicted to television violence and as a result was insane at the time he murdered his 82-year-old neighbor.

Psychiatric witnesses testified that an emotionally unbalanced 15-year-old with a deprived background can be influenced by television. But that's where the logic of the defense ended.

The defense attorney argued that "television shows the greatest crime wave in the country," making violence acceptable. He said the verdict in favor of his client would be the beginning of the end for television violence.

Ironically, young Zamora became a television figure himself during the trial which was broadcast as part of a Florida experiment in media coverage of courts.

So if Rubin's logic is carried out to an opposite extreme, those viewing the trial ought to be deterred from similar criminal offenses because of the guilty verdict. And a steady diet of Perry Mason and Columbo — where they always get their man and justice is done — ought to really do the trick for our society.

That's ridiculous, isn't it?

We wonder if television didn't get a better defense than Zamora.

RTA paint job needed

The man who pays the fiddler gets to call the tune, so it should come as no surprise that the Regional Transportation Authority wants the buses and trains it subsidizes painted in bright, new RTA colors — blue, brown and burnt orange.

The Chicago Transit Authority is resisting the idea; other carriers, like the Chicago and North Western Ry., are silent.

RTA board members Pat O'Malley and Dan Baldino are right when they say that RTA logos and colors would do a lot to put the RTA into the public eye, especially in the suburbs where there is a strong feeling that the RTA does too little.

"If some of these major fleets, like the North Western and the CTA were in RTA colors, the view of the public of what we are doing would be substantially different," says Baldino.

The RTA should draw up a reasonable schedule for repainting and see that carriers follow it. Unless the RTA can call upon Santa's elves, every bus and railroad car obviously cannot be repainted overnight.

But a fresh coat of blue, brown and orange will not only spruce up some worn exteriors, it will remind us of where our RTA tax dollars are going.

Quebec premier qualifies as most exciting politician

Paul Greenberg

CALGARY, Alberta — In this period of blah politicians, who is the most dynamic, exciting figure on the North American continent, the one most likely to change the political geography of this part of the world?

My nomination, while still under the influence of his stirring speech to the National Conference of Editorial Writers here, is Rene Levesque — the leader of Quebec's separatist movement and, since its latest provincial election, of its government as well.

Rene Levesque has the greatest weapon an orator can hope for: A legitimate grievance long and deeply held. The historic oppression of French Canada by its British conquerors rallies French Canadians to his cause and can reduce his critics to an embarrassed defense, or even a guilty silence. That grievance gives Premier Levesque a license for excess; even his most outrageous demands meet a certain understanding.

ADD TO THIS LICENSE a thorough command of the orator's techniques in two languages. Rene Levesque's speech moves in dramatic rhythm from sweet moderation to sweeter revenge and back again. He can remember and compress every injustice to his people in an hour's time. He is by turns compromising, furious, barely controlled, visionary, practical . . . and he carries his audience along with him every step of the way, running over his time but making his listeners want more.

M. Levesque may have to stretch a distinction or two as he demonstrates why the French alone in Canada, as opposed to the Ukrainians, say, or the Indian tribes, are entitled to a separate nation of their own ("We were the first White North Americans to settle here") but he has the nationalist leader's conviction that his people is one and he is their prophet.

The Brits sharing the head table, who doubtless have been through this well-rehearsed outpouring many times before, remain composed. Their opposition is detectable only by a slight clenching of the teeth here, a barely lifted eyebrow there. They are too polite to heckle, or even snort. Were there ever two people less psychologically compatible than the British and French?

Not that the Anglicized Canadians fail to appreciate Rene Levesque. Again and again one hears them wish that he were on their side, for they seem to have no one to match him in vigor or passion. Or language. Rene Levesque is a kind of George Wallace a la Francaise. Both leaders have a personal magnetism that towers over their cause. Although the comparison is scarcely fair to M. Levesque's elevated language.

WITH EVERYTHING official in Canada now written in both English and French (a tardy attempt to pacify the French) one is reminded of the stateliness of the French language. What is pompous in English becomes epochal in French, even if it is only a guide to a nature trail.

But no matter what language Rene Levesque were to use, whether Swahili or German, especially German, it would be clear what he was up to. His speech has definite movements, like a symphony, going from introductory themes downstream to powerful climaxes, always leaving the impression of great and righteous power justly restrained.

It is a virtuoso performance that would make George Wallace, even in his heyday, sound a bit choppy. It is only an impression, but the Southern newspapermen in the audience seemed the most skeptical. Perhaps we are more used to M. Levesque's type in politics.

The one appeal Rene Levesque seems incapable of making is that to reason. Listening to him one feels part of a movement, not an individual. It is not so much a matter of agreeing or disagreeing as of being swept along by his force. His appeal is all too familiar.

THE PEOPLE OF Quebec suffer under foreign domination and punitive restrictions. The people of Quebec will therefore decide their own fate in a free and open plebiscite, the rules for which will be set down by his government to make certain that insidious outside forces are not given undue influence. Have no fear of turmoil; he and his party are strong enough to keep the really rowdy elements in control.

"I repeat again," he declares, his voice bristling with hostility, "that there is no hostility in anything I'm saying." Recalling every slight to his people, he says of his goal of an independent Quebec: "It is not vengeful." Having denounced half a dozen conspiracies against his oppressed but noble folk by the British, the Americans, the bankers, the oil companies, he assures his listeners: "I am not conspiratorial minded." One misses only a denunciation of the Versailles Treaty.

Rene Levesque knows his goal precisely — an independent Quebec — and he has explained it over and over again through ten years of speeches, books, articles, campaigns. He has a vision the other side lacks. His critics seem by turns divided, conciliatory, and only faintly disturbed.

For the moment Canada seems a melange of national characteristics and loose government held together only by a layer of British discipline. How deep that layer goes, and how wisely it is used, may determine whether there will continue to be one Canada or two, or several.

'Chamber wrong on underpass stand'

Having been a resident of Arlington Heights since 1943 and a business man for nearly 20 years and a member of the Chamber of Commerce, I must publicly disagree with the position the Chamber of Commerce is taking on the proposed underpass.

Certain vociferous groups have hampered progress in the downtown area for too long. Certainly such a project will hurt some businessmen including myself; however, I feel that the alternate plan 3 will by far benefit the over all village and its residents. The plan makes sense and the price is right.

I feel the financial institutions are needlessly alarmed. Their reputations are so strong that the proposed change would not only not harm them, but in the final analysis, the change will benefit them.

If I had a choice, I would be in favor of moving the railroad station about a mile east; however, I have been told that this is not possible at this time. This being the case, I wholeheartedly urge the trustees to muster the necessary guts to see that plan 3 is instigated and followed to a successful conclusion.

The Chamber of Commerce is not speaking for 100 per cent of their members. Our professional job boils down to selling the community — selling a way of life.

We seem to be ignoring the real issue which should be what is best for the residents of our village, not just the business men. A better traffic flow will certainly tempt many of our residents to patronize local business instead of outlying shopping centers.

I would think the main concern of our residents is how to travel from their homes to their jobs, schools and churches as quickly and safely as possible. I personally feel that the underpass will accomplish this better than any plan yet proposed.

Some points on teachers' pay rates

Now that you have published an article on city-suburban teacher salaries, let's have a follow-up on the following subjects:

1. Cost of administrator salaries in Northwest, North and West suburbs.

2. A cost analysis of those salaries compared to the number of teachers in their systems.

3. A tabulation of the number of years the administrators have been removed from student contact.

4. An hourly or daily analysis regarding teacher contact.

5. A comparison of the educational experiences and attainments of the administrators and the teachers whom they are to administer.

6. The number of administrators who have not been even state certified for their positions.

7. The number of people who have been "kicked" upstairs because of the Peter Principal.

8. The number of people who have been kept upstairs (earning $30-$45,000) because of what they have on others.

Perhaps if these facts were made known to the taxpaying public we would not be so quick to accuse the teachers of earning "all that money" for only teaching 130-150 students a day.

"YOU'RE FIRED, SMITH! TV INTOXICATION!"

Right to work past 65 becoming more and more recognized in U.S.

The right to retire on a pension at 65 is a 20th century idea, at least in the United States. Many people fought hard to pass the Social Security Act which ensured it in the 1930s and trade unions have labored to establish occupational pensions. Now the 23 million elderly seem to be turning on the hands that fed them.

Under pressure from senior citizens' lobbies, the California legislature has just passed a bill forbidding private employers to force their workers to retire at the age of 65; whether Gov. Jerry Brown will sign it is not known. Alaska already has such a law.

In Washington the House of Representatives passed a bill that would bar private employers from fixing a mandatory retiring age of less than 70 and would abolish the compulsory retiring age of 70 for federal employes. Hearings on a similar bill have begun in the Senate and both President Carter and Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall express sympathy with the bills' aims.

ONE OF THE CHIEF sponsors of the bill in the House (where there are 180 sponsors in all) is Rep. Claude Pepper, 77, who says that ageism — that is, discrimination against people because of their age — is as obnoxious as racism and sexism. Congress has been interested in discrimination in employment against middle-aged people for a decade; in 1967 it passed legislation banning it in the interest of people between 40 and 65.

Compulsory retirement under the age of 65 is thus illegal unless it is part of a valid pension scheme. Whether this proviso is itself legal is about to be considered by the Supreme Court, which has agreed to hear a case brought by a pilot who was compulsorily retired by United Airlines when he became 60.

No one knows how many people would go on working past 65 if they were allowed to, but many (presumably not those in the most dangerous or boring jobs) feel strongly that they should have the right to choose and that people should be judged on their performance in the job, not by the number of their birthdays.

OVER 30 MILLION elderly now live below the poverty line; Social Security, which can be under $3,000 a year for a single person, is not riches and no one can earn more than $3,000 a year without losing part of his benefits. Moreover, elderly people have longer life expectancy and better health than they did when the retirement age of 65 was set.

Another, more dubious, argument is that the financial ills of the Social Security System would be eased if at least some people postponed retirement until 68 or 70.

One member of the administration, Juanita Kreps, stirred up a hornet's nest by letting it be known that the administration was considering postponing the payment of social security benefits until the age of 68.

This greatly upset the majority of workers who have no occupational pensions and who feared that they would either have to work three more years or go without any assured income between 65 and 68. Joseph Califano, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, hastily disavowed the whole idea.

THE TREND, in fact, has been towards earlier, not later, retirement, although often as a result of union bargaining with employers in which the union's aim has been to make jobs for younger workers — an aim which seems justifiable in a single company, thought not for a vital economy as a whole.

The Social Security System itself allows people to begin drawing part of their pensions at 62 — and for years officials have been worried by the number of workers taking advantage of this provision.

A few big employers, including some insurance companies and, surprisingly, United States Steel, have done away with compulsory retirement at 65. But most employers still support it strongly. The trade union federation, the AFL-CIO, is, in theory, against compulsory retirement, but in practice only if the special arrangements for it in trade union contracts are exempted. Still, the hour seems to be coming when the right of elderly people to go on working past 65 will be recognized.

Right to work past 65 becoming more and more recognized in U.S.

The right to retire on a pension at 65 is a 20th century idea, at least in the United States. Many people fought hard to pass the Social Security Act which ensured it in the 1930s and trade unions have labored to establish occupational pensions. Now the 23 million elderly seem to be turning on the hands that fed them.

Hunter is hunted as Dodgers romp

by FRED McMANE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Burt Hooton, a bundle of nerves in his last start, showed the coolness of a cat burglar Wednesday night by pitching a five-hitter and the Los Angeles Dodgers skyrocketed four home runs to bomb the New York Yankees 6-1 and square the World Series at one game apiece.

Ron Cey, Steve Yeager, Reggie Smith and Steve Garvey provided the home run power as the Dodgers flexed the muscles which led the National League in homers this season and dealt a crushing jolt to Jim "Catfish" Hunter's comeback attempt.

After a travel day today, the best of seven series resumes in Los Angeles Friday night with left-hander Tommy John pitching for the Dodgers and right-hander Mike Torrez going for the Yankees.

THE DODGERS, who hit 191 homers this year, had no scouting report on Hunter but they liked what they saw almost immediately. They tatooed the former Cy Young Award winner for three homers in just 2 1-3 innings and made things easy for Hooton.

Cey hit a two-run homer in the first inning, Yeager added a solo shot in the second and Smith delivered a two-run blast in the third — all off Hunter — to give the Dodgers a commanding 5-0 lead. Garvey's homer came off reliever Sparky Lyle in the ninth inning.

"This is the way the Dodgers have played through the year," said Manager Tom Lasorda. "People said playing in this park (Yankee Stadium) would hurt our guys. But we had four guys who hit 30 or more homers, which had never happened before in major league history. We've got guys who can hit balls out of the Grand Canyon."

As excited as Lasorda was over his team's power display, he was even more pleased with the way Hooton performed.

IN HIS LAST start, Hooton was a disaster. Pitching in the third game of the playoffs against the Philadelphia Phillies, he became unraveled when an umpire's call went against him on a fourth ball and then walked three batters in a row and had to be taken out.

The Dodger right-hander had stated he learned his lesson from that episode and he proved it. He struck out eight and twice pitched out of ticklish situations — in the fourth and fifth innings — when he could easily have lost his composure.

"I had good stuff and I fought very hard," said Hooton. "I wasn't out to prove anything or prove anybody right or wrong. I was just out to do what I knew I could do, what I didn't do in Philadelphia.

"I learned a lesson in Philadelphia. I lost my head. It's something you learn when you're young, but sometimes you have to learn over again. I knew what I had to do tonight and I stuck with it."

USING HIS knuckle curve to perfection and showing a good fastball which kept the Yankee hitters off stride, Hooton did not allow an extra base hit and walked only one batter.

Yankees' Manager Billy Martin took a big risk in starting Hunter, who had not pitched since Sept. 10 because of an injury. But with his pitching staff depleted after a wearying playoff against Kansas City, Martin had no choice and was hoping for at least "five or six innings" from his former meal ticket.

But from the opening inning, it was apparent that the crowd was not going to see the "Catfish" pitch one of the classics that had characterized his past World Series' performances at Oakland.

Instead of seeing "Catfish," they saw "Shellfish."

Smith started Hunter's downfall by creaming a two-out double to right center in the first inning and Cey followed with a 400-foot homer into the left field bullpen.

WITH TWO OUT in the second inning, Yeager unloaded another bomb about 400 feet into the left field stands to make it 3-0.

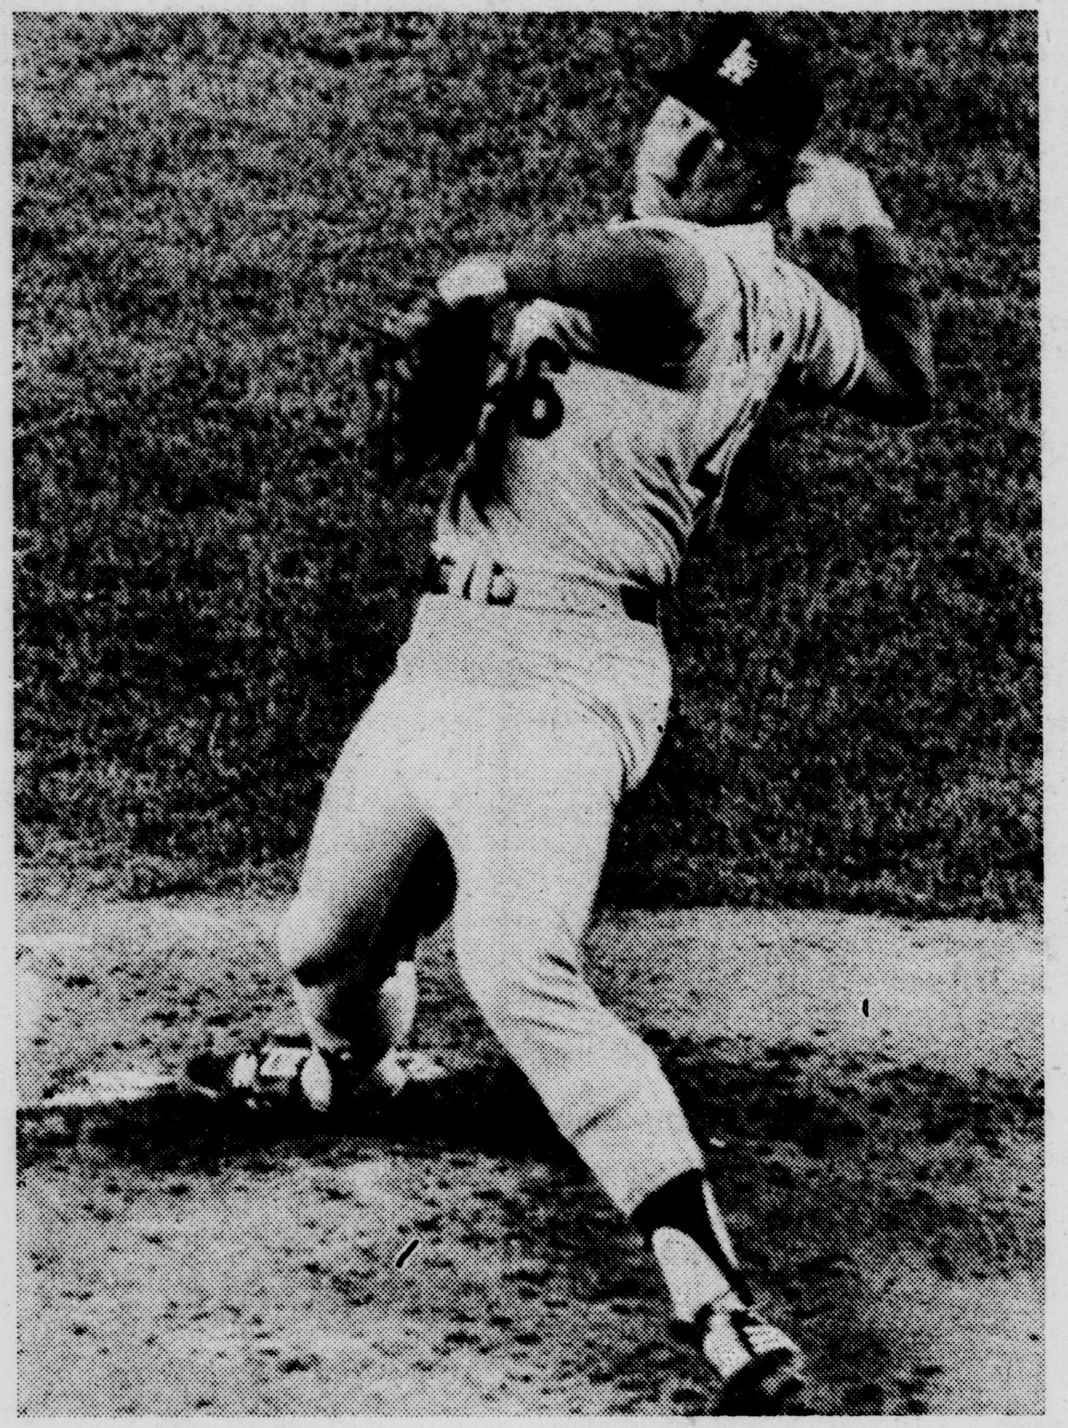
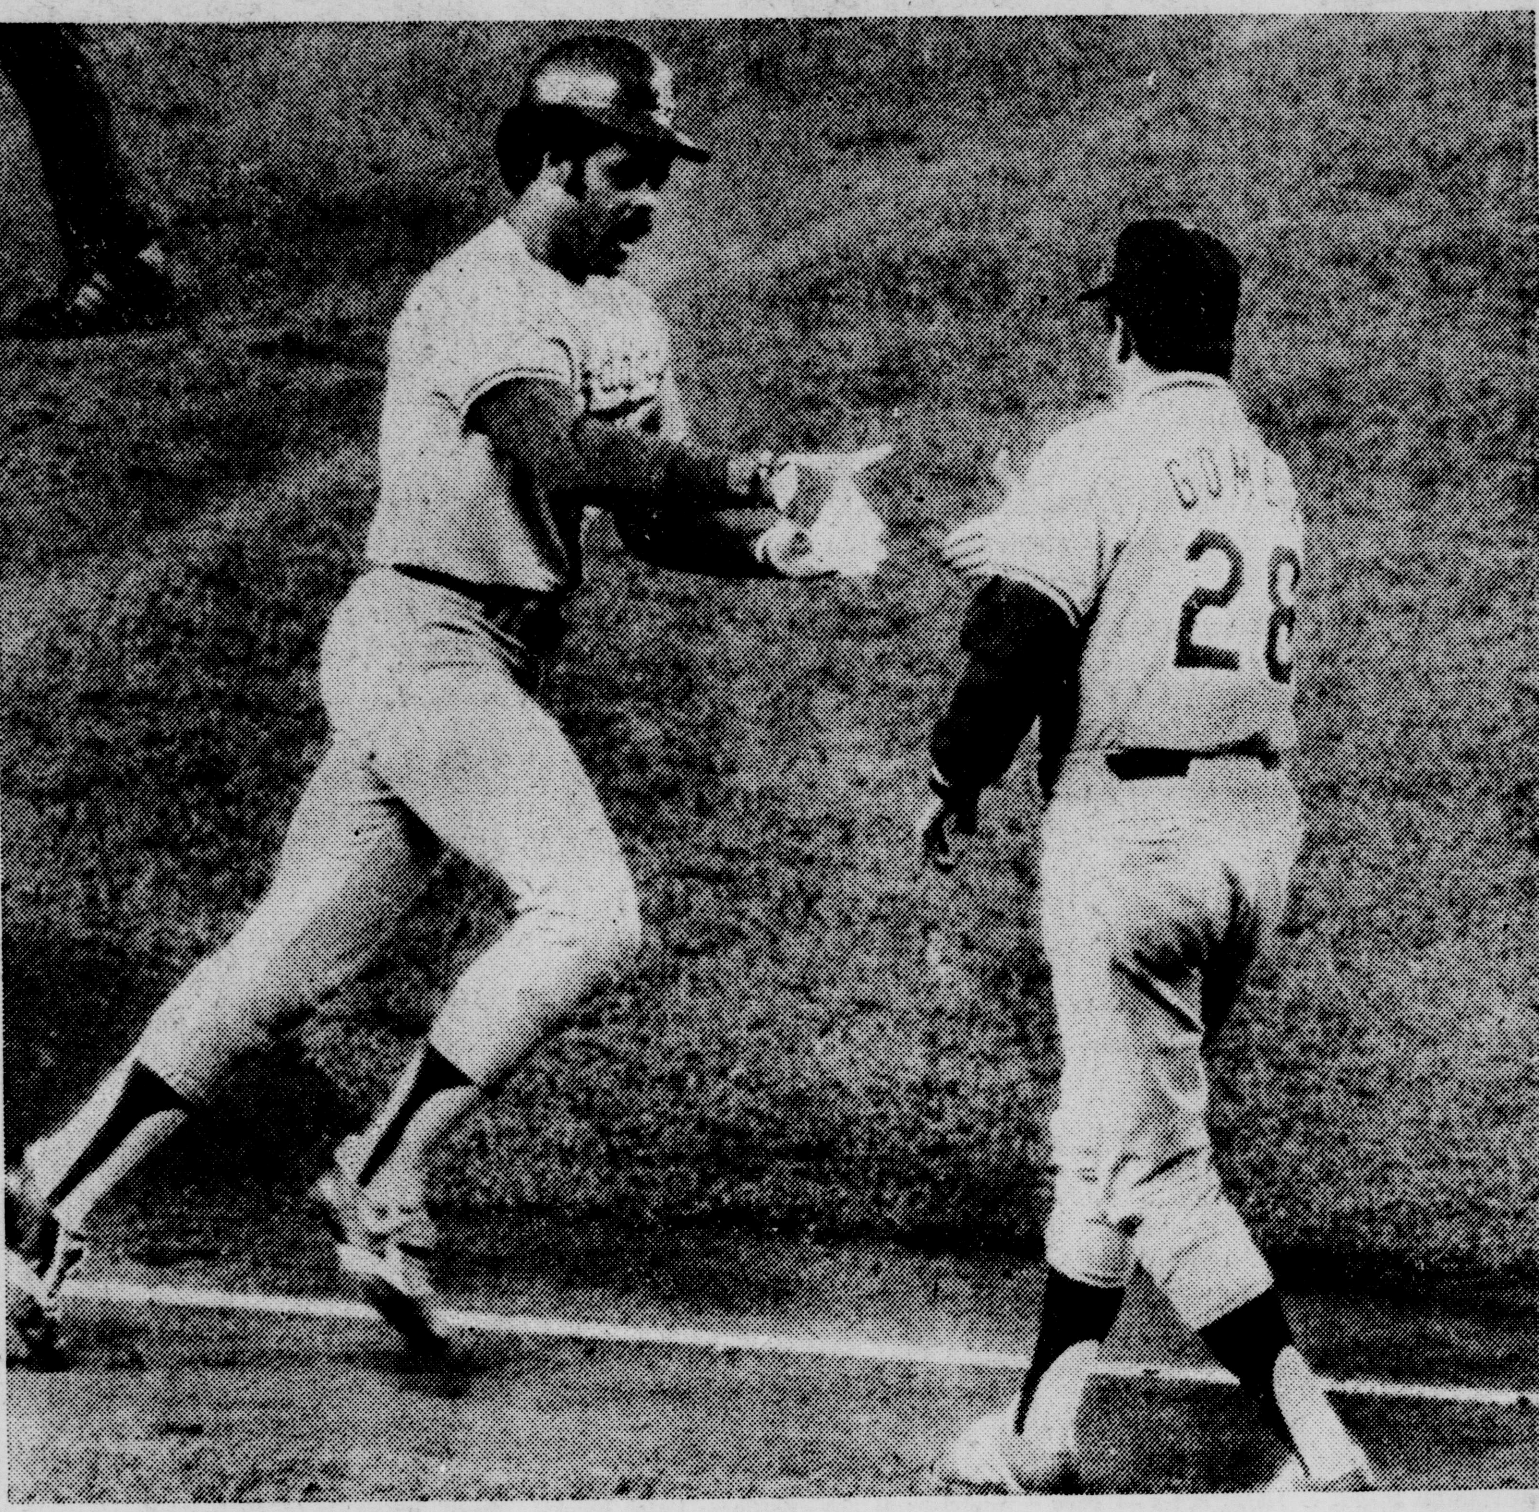
Following Smith's homer, Martin took pity on Hunter and the five-time 20-game winner left to a chorus of boos and catcalls from the hometown fans. Dick Tidrow came in and stopped the Dodgers before leaving for a pinch hitter in the fifth.

The only question now was whether Hooton could handle the pressure of his first World Series start.



ROOTIN' TOOTIN' Burt Hooton rares back and fires at the New York Yankees Wednesday, throttling the Bronx Bombers on just five hits and pacing the Los Angees Dodgers to a 6-1 triumph and evening the World Series at one game each. The Series resumes in Los Angeles Friday night.



LET'S SHAKE. Reggie Smith of the Dodgers has plenty of time to pause for congratulations from third-base coach Preston Gomez after the Los Angeles outfielder hit a tape-measure, two-run homer. It was one of three rocket shots off ace Yankee pitcher Jim "Catfish" Hunter and helped pace the Dodgers to a 6-1 triumph, evening the World Series at one game apiece.

Preseason penalty tally may show fight in Hawks

by RICK CHRISTOPHER

More than 100 minutes in penalties, two game misconducts and plenty of cuts and bruises very well could be a fitting conclusion and a promising sign to one of the most brutal preseasons the Chicago Black Hawks have experienced.

From a statistical standpoint, the Black Hawks have come up on the short end, as they did in their 25-minute mayhem with the Toronto Maple Leafs in a preseason finale to finish with a 1-3-3 record.

Defenseman Dale Tallon was suspended for a game for initiating the Black Hawk bench-emptying brawl.

"THE FIGHT may have been a good indication of our club this year," Black Hawk coach Bob Pulford said. "We stood up and were counted as one."

If the Black Hawks display of fisticuffs is any indication of their performance this season, the 1977-78 battle for the Conn Smythe Division trophy should be a knock-down-dragged-out fight.

And there's no better place to start the new rough-guy image than in the City of Brotherly Love. The Chicago Black Hawks open their National Hockey League campaign on the Philadelphia Flyers' home ice at 7:05 tonight.

Broadcasts of all home and away games can be heard on WCFL-AM (1000) with newly acquired Ron Oaks calling the play-by-play.

A CALIFORNIA-PRODUCT, Oaks has done broadcasts fo rthe Los Angeles Kings and the San Diego Mariners of the World Hockey Assn.

The Black Hawks will battle the league's leading penalty-getting team, the Flyers, who averaged 19.3 minutes of infractiolns per game. Last season, they accumulated 1,547 minutes, to surpass runnerup Detroit by 215.

The Black Hawks ranked seventh with 1,104 minutes, with captain-defenseman leading the charge. Keith Magnuson is expected to start against the Flyers despite missing the majority of the preseason with an injured right arm.

To physically shore up the Black Hawk image, Chicago obtained Bob (Battleship) Kelly from the Pittsburgh Penguins.

"Last year, the players around the league had the opinion that the Black Hawks were docile and could be run around the rink at will," Toronto head coach Roger Neilson said following the Maple Leaf's preseason tie game with the Hawks Sunday.

"Pulford has his team playing as tough as they can which should help the league gain respect for them as well as sell tickets for his club.

"They might have trouble scoring but they won't take a back seat to anyone. Their new brand of hockey means they'll be in every game and once you accomplish that the goals will come."

THE FLYERS HAD the third best goalie combination in the league last season behind Bernie Parent and Wayne Stephenson.

Parent had a 35-13-12 record in the net for a 2.71 goal against average. Philadelphia's Rick MacLeish leads the offensive attack from a year ago with 49 goals and 48 assists.

MacLeish finished third in the Art Ross Trophy battle for scoring leaders.

The first-year coach of the Black Hawks still has veterans Stan Makita, Phil Russel, Pit Martin and Tony Esposito to accent the new "rough guy" team.

But the big factors are the new names of Kelly, Jean Savard, and Doug Wilson.

Both rookies, Savard and Wilson have definitely made the 24-man Black Hawk team. Wilson was the top draft choice last summer and sixth over-all in the NHL selection of juniors. Savard was the Hawks second choice.

"They'll definitely be a crowd pleasing team and should win their division," Neilson said.

The Black Hawks think they have a fighting chance.

Rick Christopher

Byline report

The balcony seats aren't quite as full. The fierce battles between the bluelines have abated. The popcorn prices have risen like everything else.

Only at a National Hockey League game can you enjoy (or not enjoy) all this.

Sure, there's still plenty of competitive action at a hockey game and the enjoyment you can get from one night's viewing is still there. But not quite as intense as years past.

"IT USED TO BE a common figure of 16,666 for each home game. Now everytime I pick up a paper and look at the box score, the attendance mark barely reaches 8,000," Philadelphia Phillies' Richie Hebner said.

The 10-year veteran of major league baseball and native of Howard, Mass., was once sought after as a high school hockey player by the Boston Bruins.

The former left wing standout turned away several college scholarships and a contract with the Bruins. He received a $40,000 bonus to sign with the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1966.

"Little League, high school, American Legion ball . . . everywhere you look, someone is playing baseball," Hebner said. "I guess it was just the American thing to do."

HEBNER IS ONE of three professional players to leave the small eastern seaboard town of 37,000 behind. Skip Lockwood and Billy Travers have done the same.

Hebner's interest in hockey and the Boston Bruins has faded. The departure of familiar number 4, defenseman Bobby Orr, may be one reason.

Poor scheduling and high ticket prices, though, are the big factor. Many Bostonians would agree. A decline of 4,000 fans in home attendance coincided with Orr's move to the Chicago Black Hawks.

"It's strange not to see that number four skating up and down the rink," Hebner said. "He wanted to stay with the Bruins. The change in owners is what really triggered his leaving."

THE BLACK HAWKS' lone legend, Bobby Hull, departed to the World Hockey Assn. in 1972. Still the fans jammed the rafters of Chicago Stadium.

But inflated ticket prices have been hockey's biggest downfall. Mezzanine seats at the Chicago Stadium will run $10 each. Boxes are an additional $2.50.

First balcony seats are still a whopping $7.50 and binocular viewing can be had for $4.50 a person.

"It's unreal nowadays. If you take your wife on a date to a game, it will cost you nearly $20 just to get in," Hebner said.

"And if you're a real hockey nut, that can add up into some heavy bucks during the season. To me, it's not worth it, considering the brand of hockey you see."

HEBNER'S FAVORITE, the Montreal Canadiens, paid six visits to Boston's famed Gardens during the 12-team league days.

Four divisions and 18-teams now comprise the NHL's greatly expanded lineup.

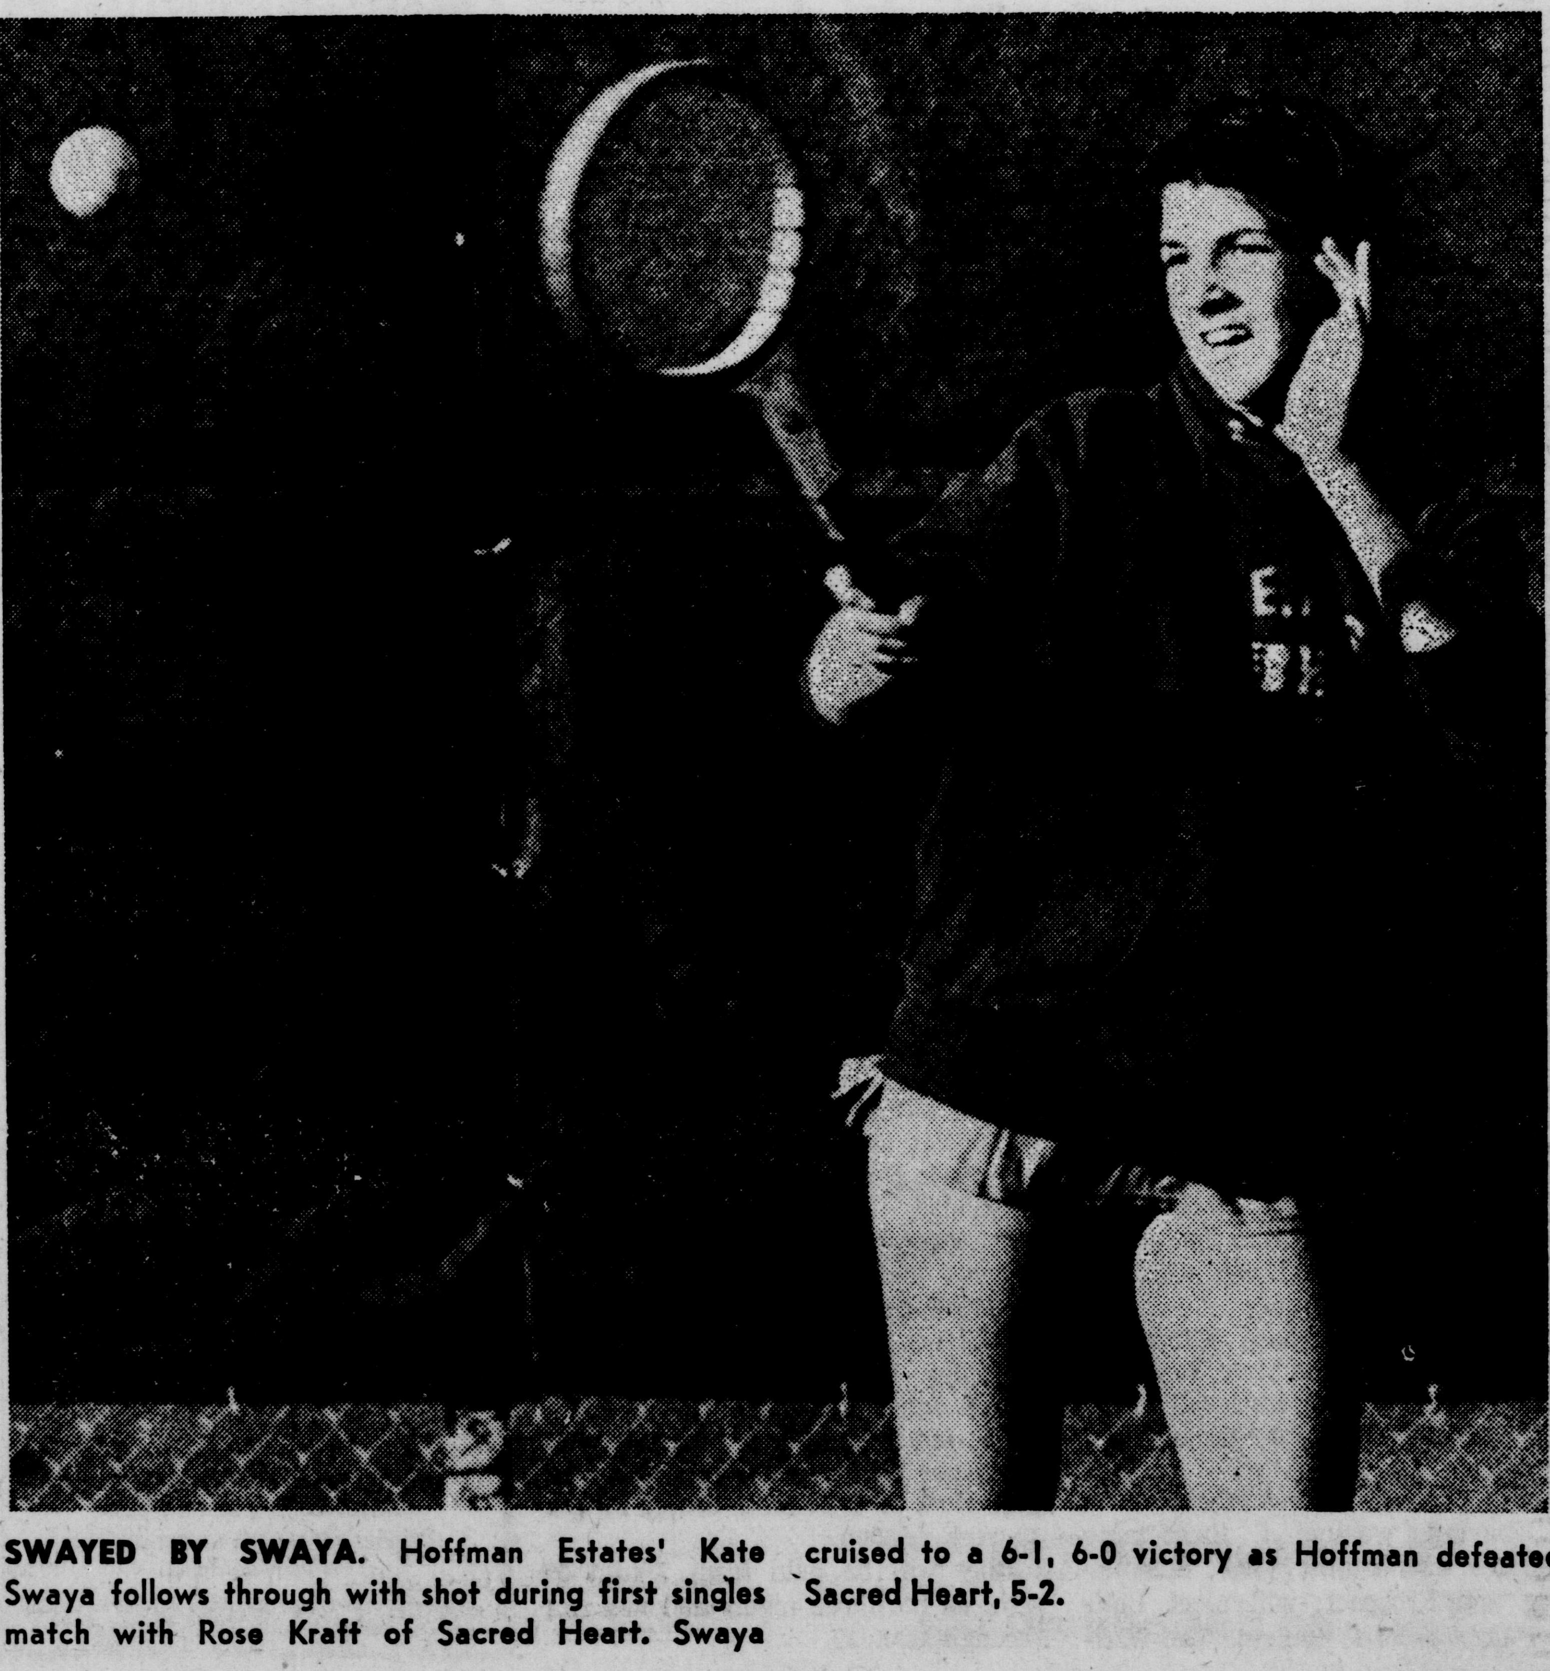
On the Black Hawks' home schedule this season the Stanley Cup champion Canadiens visit the Stadium only three times. Once in preseason, a November meeting and a final game in March. A four-month gap between two of the league's founding teams.

"There's just too many teams and, because of it, the better clubs don't come around as often," Hebner said. "It's ridiculous to pay those outrageous ticket prices to see a team that was 23 games below .500 the year before."

Last season, eight teams fell below the break-even mark. The Montreal Canadiens had a 60-8-12 record, the best in the NHL.

Two other clubs, Boston and Philadelphia had at least 48 wins. Their infrequent visits to the Stadium total five games.

Competitive hockey is still to be found . . . at least once a month.



SWAYED BY SWAYA. Hoffman Estates' Kate Swaya follows through with shot during first singles match with Rose Kraft of Sacred Heart. Swaya cruised to a 6-1, 6-0 victory as Hoffman defeated Sacred Heart, 5-2.

Wheeling to take volley at 1st-place Barrington

One Mid-Suburban League volleyball coach frankly admitted there is no team strong enough to put up a stiff challenge against newcomer Barrington this year — and so far the results prove it.

Since coming to the MSL this season, Barrington's girls have won five straight matches, only one of those victories going three games. The Broncos and Rolling Meadows are the only undefeated squads remaining in the conference.

Wheeling (4-1) will be the next team to take a shot at North Division-leading Barrington as league action continues tonight. Wheeling's only loss this season came in a three-game match with Hersey, a team that shares second place in the North with the Wildcats.

But Barrington, whose defense is one of the best in the state, is formidable. The Broncos closest call to defeat was a 20-3, 18-20, 20-7 victory over Fremd.

South Division-leading Meadows (5-0) having weathered three-game matches with Forest View, Schaumburg and Prospect, will meet Hoffman Estates (1-4) tonight. The Mustangs already have beaten their nearest challengers, Forest View and Prospect, once but must face them again later.

In other games tonight, Buffalo Grove (1-4) meets Fremd (0-5); Hersey (4-1) tackles Arlington (2-3); Schaumburg (2-3) will take on Elk Grove (2-3); and Forest View (4-1) plays Conant (0-5).

Prospect defeated Palatine 20-14, 20-12, in a crossover match Tuesday night. The two teams do not play MSL matches tonight.

TWO VOLLEYBALL programs are under way and sponsored by the Bartlett Park District. A 10-week session is planned.

A corecreational program meets Monday and Thursday nights at the Eastview junior high school on North Oak Street. Power volleyball is played Thursday evenings at the Bartlett Grade School on North Avenue.

The fee for the adult program is 75 cents per person per night; $5 for an individual or $7.50 for a couple for the 10-week session.

Play will be held from 7 to 9:00 p.m. on the three nights and will run through Dec. 12.

GOAL FIELD. Buffalo Grove goalie Tim Hill (1) leaps high in the air to deflect a shot while Huskie Jeff Petras (13) and Bison Ken Bartelt follow the action. Despite Hill's antics, Hersey registered a 4-2 triumph for their first MSL North Division win of the season.

District golf tournaments today

Golf teams from area high schools will be competing in district tournaments starting today.

Fremd, the Mid-Suburban League champs, will take part in the Lake Park tourney along with Forest View, Elk Grove, Hoffman Estates, Conant, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg.

Hersey, which won the conference meet, will host 13 schools, including Barrington, Buffalo Grove and Wheeling at Buffalo Grove Golf Club.

At the New Trier West District, local teams include Arlington, St. Viator, Maine West and Prospect.

From The Daily Herald wire services

NHL scoring champion Guy Lafleur scored two goals Wednesday night as the Montreal Canadiens opened up their defense of the Stanley Cup with a 7-3 victory over the persistent Minnesota North Stars.

In other season opening games the New York Rangers rolled past Vancouver 6-3 and Pittsburgh stopped St. Louis 4-2.

Lafleur, who last year led the NHL with 136 points, scored on a power play at 14:12 of the first period to give Montreal a 2-1 lead. The flashy right wing then scored the eventual winner 1:42 into the final period, giving the Canadiens a 4-2 bulge.

DOUG JARVIS pushed Montreal into a 5-3 lead at 6:17, Guy Lapointe scored the sixth Canadiens goal at 15:39, and, with 23 seconds remaining, Montreal captain Yvan Cournoyer — playing in his first regular contest since recovering from a back operation — got the final Montreal goal.

Right wing Jean Pronovost, Pittsburgh's newly-selected captain, scored two goals to lead the Penguins to a 4-2 victory over the St. Louis Blues.

Pronovost scored what proved to be the winning goal on a wrist shot from just outside the crease at 19:09 of the second period. Syl Apps centered the puck from behind the net and Pronovost tipped it past Blues goaltender Ed Staniowski. Apps also assisted on Pronovost's first goal, while Pittsburgh defenseman Ron Stackhouse assisted on both tallies.

Brian Spencer and Greg Malone rounded out the Penguins' scoring. Garry Unger and Rick Bourbonnais scored the Blues' goals.

Phil Esposito scored the first New York goal and assisted on three others to lead the Rangers to a 6-3 victory over the Vancouver Canucks.

ESPOSITO opened the scoring just 2:26 into the contest, snapping a wrist shot past Vancouver goalie Casare Maniago. The Ranger center's three assists moved him into fifth place on the all-time list with 740.

Ron Greschner added one goal and two assists for the Rangers, who also got goals from Dan Newman, Walter Tkaczuk, Don Murdoch and Pat Hickey.

John Davidson turned in a good game in the New York nets, turning away 22 of 25 Vancouver shots. He surrendered all the Canucks' goals on power plays — one by Rick Blight in the first period and two by Mike Walton in the third.

here's johnny! "I like the look of this vested Riviera suit, it has the luxurious appearance and feel of fine silk. Actually, the fabric's 100% texturized polyester that gently stretches, resists wrinkles and keeps its good looks wear after wear. The styling is contemporary, which means it gives you the pleasant assurance of being dressed in up-to-the-minute fashion. Isn't that what a suit should do for you? Try it on. Wheeling to take volley at 1st-place Barrington

One Mid-Suburban League volleyball coach frankly admitted there is no team strong enough to put up a stiff challenge against newcomer Barrington this year — and so far the results prove it.

Since coming to the MSL this season, Barrington's girls have won five straight matches, only one of those victories going three games. The Broncos and Rolling Meadows are the only undefeated squads remaining in the conference.

Wheeling (4-1) will be the next team to take a shot at North Division-leading Barrington as league action continues tonight. Wheeling's only loss this season came in a three-game match with Hersey, a team that shares second place in the North with the Wildcats.

But Barrington, whose defense is one of the best in the state, is formidable. The Broncos closest call to defeat was a 20-3, 18-20, 20-7 victory over Fremd.

South Division-leading Meadows (5-0) having weathered three-game matches with Forest View, Schaumburg and Prospect, will meet Hoffman Estates (1-4) tonight. The Mustangs already have beaten their nearest challengers, Forest View and Prospect, once but must face them again later.

In other games tonight, Buffalo Grove (1-4) meets Fremd (0-5); Hersey (4-1) tackles Arlington (2-3); Schaumburg (2-3) will take on Elk Grove (2-3); and Forest View (4-1) plays Conant (0-5).

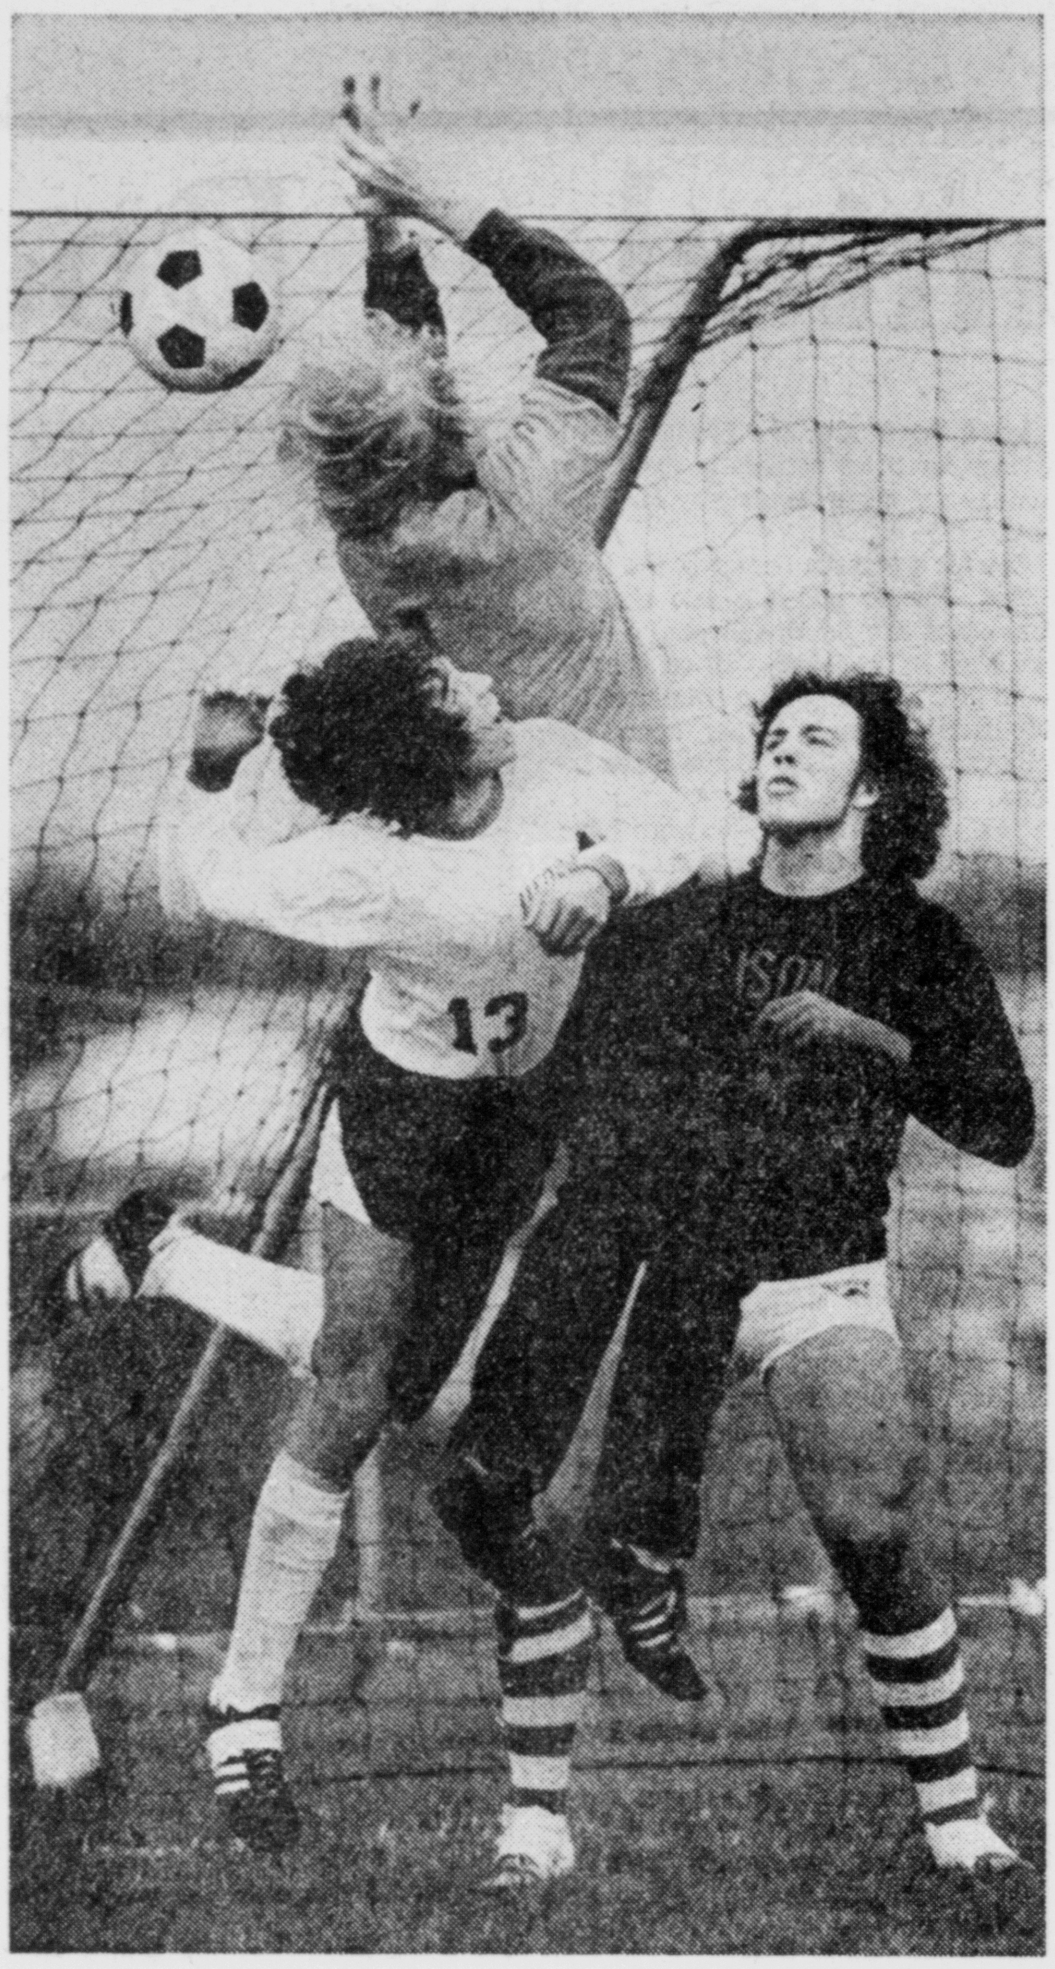
Prospect defeated Palatine 20-14, 20-12, in a crossover match Tuesday night. The two teams do not play MSL matches tonight.

TWO VOLLEYBALL programs are under way and sponsored by the Bartlett Park District. A 10-week session is planned.

A corecreational program meets Monday and Thursday nights at the Eastview junior high school on North Oak Street. Power volleyball is played Thursday evenings at the Bartlett Grade School on North Avenue.

The fee for the adult program is 75 cents per person per night; $5 for an individual or $7.50 for a couple for the 10-week session.

Play will be held from 7 to 9:00 p.m. on the three nights and will run through Dec. 12.



GOAL FIELD. Buffalo Grove goalie Tim Hill (1) leaps high in the air to deflect a shot while Huskie Jeff Petras (13) and Bison Ken Bartelt follow the action. Despite Hill's antics, Hersey registered a 4-2 triumph for their first MSL North Division win of the season.

District golf tournaments today

Golf teams from area high schools will be competing in district tournaments starting today.

Fremd, the Mid-Suburban League champs, will take part in the Lake Park tourney along with Forest View, Elk Grove, Hoffman Estates, Conant, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg.

Hersey, which won the conference meet, will host 13 schools, including Barrington, Buffalo Grove and Wheeling at Buffalo Grove Golf Club.

At the New Trier West District, local teams include Arlington, St. Viator, Maine West and Prospect.

From The Daily Herald wire services

NHL report

NHL scoring champion Guy Lafleur scored two goals Wednesday night as the Montreal Canadiens opened up their defense of the Stanley Cup with a 7-3 victory over the persistent Minnesota North Stars.

In other season opening games the New York Rangers rolled past Vancouver 6-3 and Pittsburgh stopped St. Louis 4-2.

Lafleur, who last year led the NHL with 136 points, scored on a power play at 14:12 of the first period to give Montreal a 2-1 lead. The flashy right wing then scored the eventual winner 1:42 into the final period, giving the Canadiens a 4-2 bulge.

DOUG JARVIS pushed Montreal into a 5-3 lead at 6:17, Guy Lapointe scored the sixth Canadiens goal at 15:39, and, with 23 seconds remaining, Montreal captain Yvan Cournoyer — playing in his first regular contest since recovering from a back operation — got the final Montreal goal.

Right wing Jean Pronovost, Pittsburgh's newly-selected captain, scored two goals to lead the Penguins to a 4-2 victory over the St. Louis Blues.

Pronovost scored what proved to be the winning goal on a wrist shot from just outside the crease at 19:09 of the second period. Syl Apps centered the puck from behind the net and Pronovost tipped it past Blues goaltender Ed Staniowski. Apps also assisted on Pronovost's first goal, while Pittsburgh defenseman Ron Stackhouse assisted on both tallies.

Brian Spencer and Greg Malone rounded out the Penguins' scoring. Garry Unger and Rick Bourbonnais scored the Blues' goals.

Phil Esposito scored the first New York goal and assisted on three others to lead the Rangers to a 6-3 victory over the Vancouver Canucks.

ESPOSITO opened the scoring just 2:26 into the contest, snapping a wrist shot past Vancouver goalie Casare Maniago. The Ranger center's three assists moved him into fifth place on the all-time list with 740.

Ron Greschner added one goal and two assists for the Rangers, who also got goals from Dan Newman, Walter Tkaczuk, Don Murdoch and Pat Hickey.

John Davidson turned in a good game in the New York nets, turning away 22 of 25 Vancouver shots. He surrendered all the Canucks' goals on power plays — one by Rick Blight in the first period and two by Mike Walton in the third.

Trevino seeks first Texas Open crown

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — Local favorite Lee Trevino and former U.S. Open winners Lou Graham and Hale Irwin head the field which begins play Thursday in one of the oldest tournaments on the PGA tour — the $150,000 Texas Open.

Johnny Miller, who won the Texas and U.S. Opens in 1973 and was expected to be among the favorites to win the tournament over the 6,565, par-70 Oak Hills course, withdrew from the tournament Wednesday because of a nagging shoulder injury.

Despite a shortage of rough because of a dry summer, pros playing early practice rounds at Oak Hills, hosting the tournament for the first time in 10 years, praised the course.

"Oak Hills is one of the best courses in the state," said Trevino, who has never won the Texas Open in his homestate despite an impressive collection of victories elsewhere. "It's in great shape and it's going to be a great tournament."

Humphrey urges NCAA probe

MINNEAPOLIS — Sen. Hubert Humphrey Wednesday urged a Senate committee to press an investigation into the dispute between the University of Minnesota and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The NCAA has placed the entire Minnesota men's athletic program on probation because the University refused to declare ineligible for participation two basketball players.

Humphrey's statement, issued through his Washington office and distributed by his staff in Minneapolis, said he had written a letter to Chairman Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., of the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation.

"It is my belief that such an investigation should be held and I would deeply appreciate it if your Committee would look into the matter," the Minnesota Democrat said.

Flyers fined, four players suspended

MONTREAL — The National Hockey League suspended three Philadelphia players and a Boston Bruin for up to three games Wednesday and fined the Flyers $3,000 for a vicious brawl between the two teams in an exhibition game last week.

"We have to stick with our policy of dealing severely with incidents that can prove dangerous when players use their sticks or skates," NHL executive vice president Brian O'Neill said.

"We've already established automatic fines against clubs and maybe we'll have to make them steeper."

O'Neill suspended both Paul Holmgren of the Flyers and Boston's Wayne Cashman for the first three gam of the NHL season. Philadelphia's Jimmy Watson was suspended for two games and Mel Bridgman received an automatic one game suspension for a game misconduct penalty.

The NHL officials also fined the Philadelphia club $3,000, noting it was the second time in pre-season exhibition play the Flyers had been involved in a bench-clearing incident.

Namath hurt, Rams promote Hayden

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Pat Haden will start at quarterback in place of Joe Namath for the Los Angeles Rams Sunday against New Orleans, coach Chuck Knox said Wednesday.

Namath took a beating Monday night when the Rams lost to the Chicago Bears 24-23 and Knox said his left knee has an inflammation that will force him to miss practice for a couple of days.

Namath was examined Wednesday morning by Dr. Clarence Shields and then it was announced that Haden would start against the Rams instead of the 34-year-old passer who had been No. 1 in all regular games this season. Haden came into the Bear game late and threw a 26-yard touchdown pass to Dwight Scales with 32 seconds left.

Team of mystery archers doesn't scare Meadows

by JEFF NORDLUND

Freeburg High School remains as much a mystery as it was last year to Rolling Meadows girls archery coach Ken Bates, but he's still optimistic his team will bring back a state title this weekend.

Defending champion Freeburg will be one of 10 teams competing for this year's title at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston Friday and Saturday. Area teams competing include Meadows and Maine West.

Freeburg registered the highest district score in the state last weekend with 2,443 points, but downstate weather was better. High winds played havoc with the archers' arrows up north.

"FREEBURG'S AVERAGE score for its four counting archers works out at about 610 per girl, and I know my girls can do better than that," Bates said prior to traveling to Charleston with his team.

"Freeburg's top score was 640 (by Annette Sanders) and I think Cheri (Bates, Ken's daughter) and Nancy (Namovicz can shoot better than that," Bates said. "We're in a very good situation.

"There may not be as much competition downstate as up here, though, and Freeburg could get better when the opponents improve," he said. "Last year, we went into the state meet with the best scores, but Freeburg's girls came out and shot 640s."

In addition to Cheri Bates and Namovicz, Meadows will be sending Carol Nelson, Georgia Oman, Rhonda Ragen, Cathy Sadler and alternate Julie Bates (another daughter of the coach).

MAINE WEST, led by high-scoring Sharon Vaughn, will also be shooting for Freeburg. Vaughn's 656-point performance at districts was the highest individual score in the state. Other Maine West shooters are Cindy Tomasczewski, Marge Hahn and Mary O'Donnel.

Several area individuals will also be making the trip to EIU to compete for the state's top single prize. Patty Johnson of Elk Grove, Jenny Krock of Arlington, Laura Weber of Fremd and Michelle and Maureen Frank of Hersey will be shooting for that honor.

Maine West scored the second highest district total in the state with 2,384, followed by Rolling Meadows with 2,378. Following Vaughn and Sanders was Elk Grove's Johnsen with 623 among top individual district scores from last weekend.

Girls bid in state golf

Cathy Hockin of Lake Park High School will be one of the first golfers to teeoff in this year's Girls State Final Golf Tournament.

The preliminary round for the tourney, which will be held Friday at Illinois State University in Normal, will also feature Forest View's Judy Pleickhardt and Wheeling's Cheryl Maihack. Both girls qualified in last Friday's district tournaments.

At the same time, Hockin was the individual leader with a 76 in the Falcon-hosted district.

The state meet will have each golfer playing 18 holes Friday and another 18 Saturday. A total of 138 golfers will represent 64 different schools.

Synthetic oil endorsed

SYNTHETIC MOTOR oils were given a big - but little noted - endorsement in Detroit last week when a Ford Motor Co. vice president said tests of the lubricants proved they were everything the petroleum companies said they were.

But Ford stopped short of recommending that motorists use the oils in their cars during the 12-month-12,000 mile warranty period.

At last week's press preview of Ford's 1978 model cars, Robert B. Alexander, vice president-car development group, said the company tested the claim of Mobil Corp. that its Mobil One oil can go 30,000 miles without change "and verified it as right."

Alexander was answering a question about extended oil change intervals recommended by Detroit. Changes, recommended every 2,000 miles not too many years ago, are now recommended every 7,500 to 10,000 miles, so Alexander was asked whether it was possible to use a synthetic and not change at all the first year.

But Howard Freers, Ford's vice president in charge of engine and chassis development, quickly added that to keep a warranty valid, Ford still recommended changing oil at 10,000 miles on subcompacts and 7,500 miles on large cars.

Girls bid in state golf

Cathy Hockin of Lake Park High School will be one of the first golfers to teeoff in this year's Girls State Final Golf Tournament.

The preliminary round for the tourney, which will be held Friday at Illinois State University in Normal, will also feature Forest View's Judy Pleickhardt and Wheeling's Cheryl Maihack. Both girls qualified in last Friday's district tournaments.

At the same time, Hockin was the individual leader with a 76 in the Falcon-hosted district.

The state meet will have each golfer playing 18 holes Friday and another 18 Saturday. A total of 138 golfers will represent 64 different schools.

CDM LUBRICANTS PRESENTS . . .

FRIDAY & SATURDAY
Oct. 14th & 15th

100% SYNTHESIZED LUBRICANT
"The Outperformer" SL-1
UNIVERSAL LUBRICANTS
NON-POLLUTANT

It's a fact - synthetics are the lubricants of the future. Better Mileage, Longer Drain Intervals, Less Frequent Tune Ups are some of the advantages to synthetic lubricants. Detroit now confirms their tests in the article on the right which appeared in the Chicago Tribune, Sept. 5, 1977.

Drop in and have our technicians explain the facts about synthetics and why they belong in your car.

SL-1 is the premium 10W40 Synthetic Lubricant and is the only one with a written guarantee.

Have your oil changed to SL-1 today. Save Money — Save Petroleum — Save your Engine.

Synthetic oil endorsed

SYNTHETIC MOTOR oils were given a big but little noted - endorsement in Detroit last week when a Ford Motor Co. vice president said tests of the lubricants proved they were everything the petroleum companies said they were.

But Ford stopped short of recommending that motorists use the oils in their cars during the 12-month-12,000 mile warranty period.

At last week's press preview of Ford's 1978 model cars, Robert B. Alexander, vice president-car development group, said the company tested the claim of Mobil Corp. that its Mobil One oil can go 30,000 miles without change "and verified it as right."

Alexander was answering a question about extended oil change intervals recommended by Detroit. Changes, recommended every 2,000 miles not too many years ago, are now recommended every 7,500 to 10,000 miles, so Alexander was asked whether it was possible to use a synthetic and not change at all the first year.

But Howard Freers, Ford's vice president in charge of engine and chassis development, quickly added that to keep a warranty valid, Ford still recommended changing oil at 10,000 miles on subcompacts and 7,500 miles on large cars.

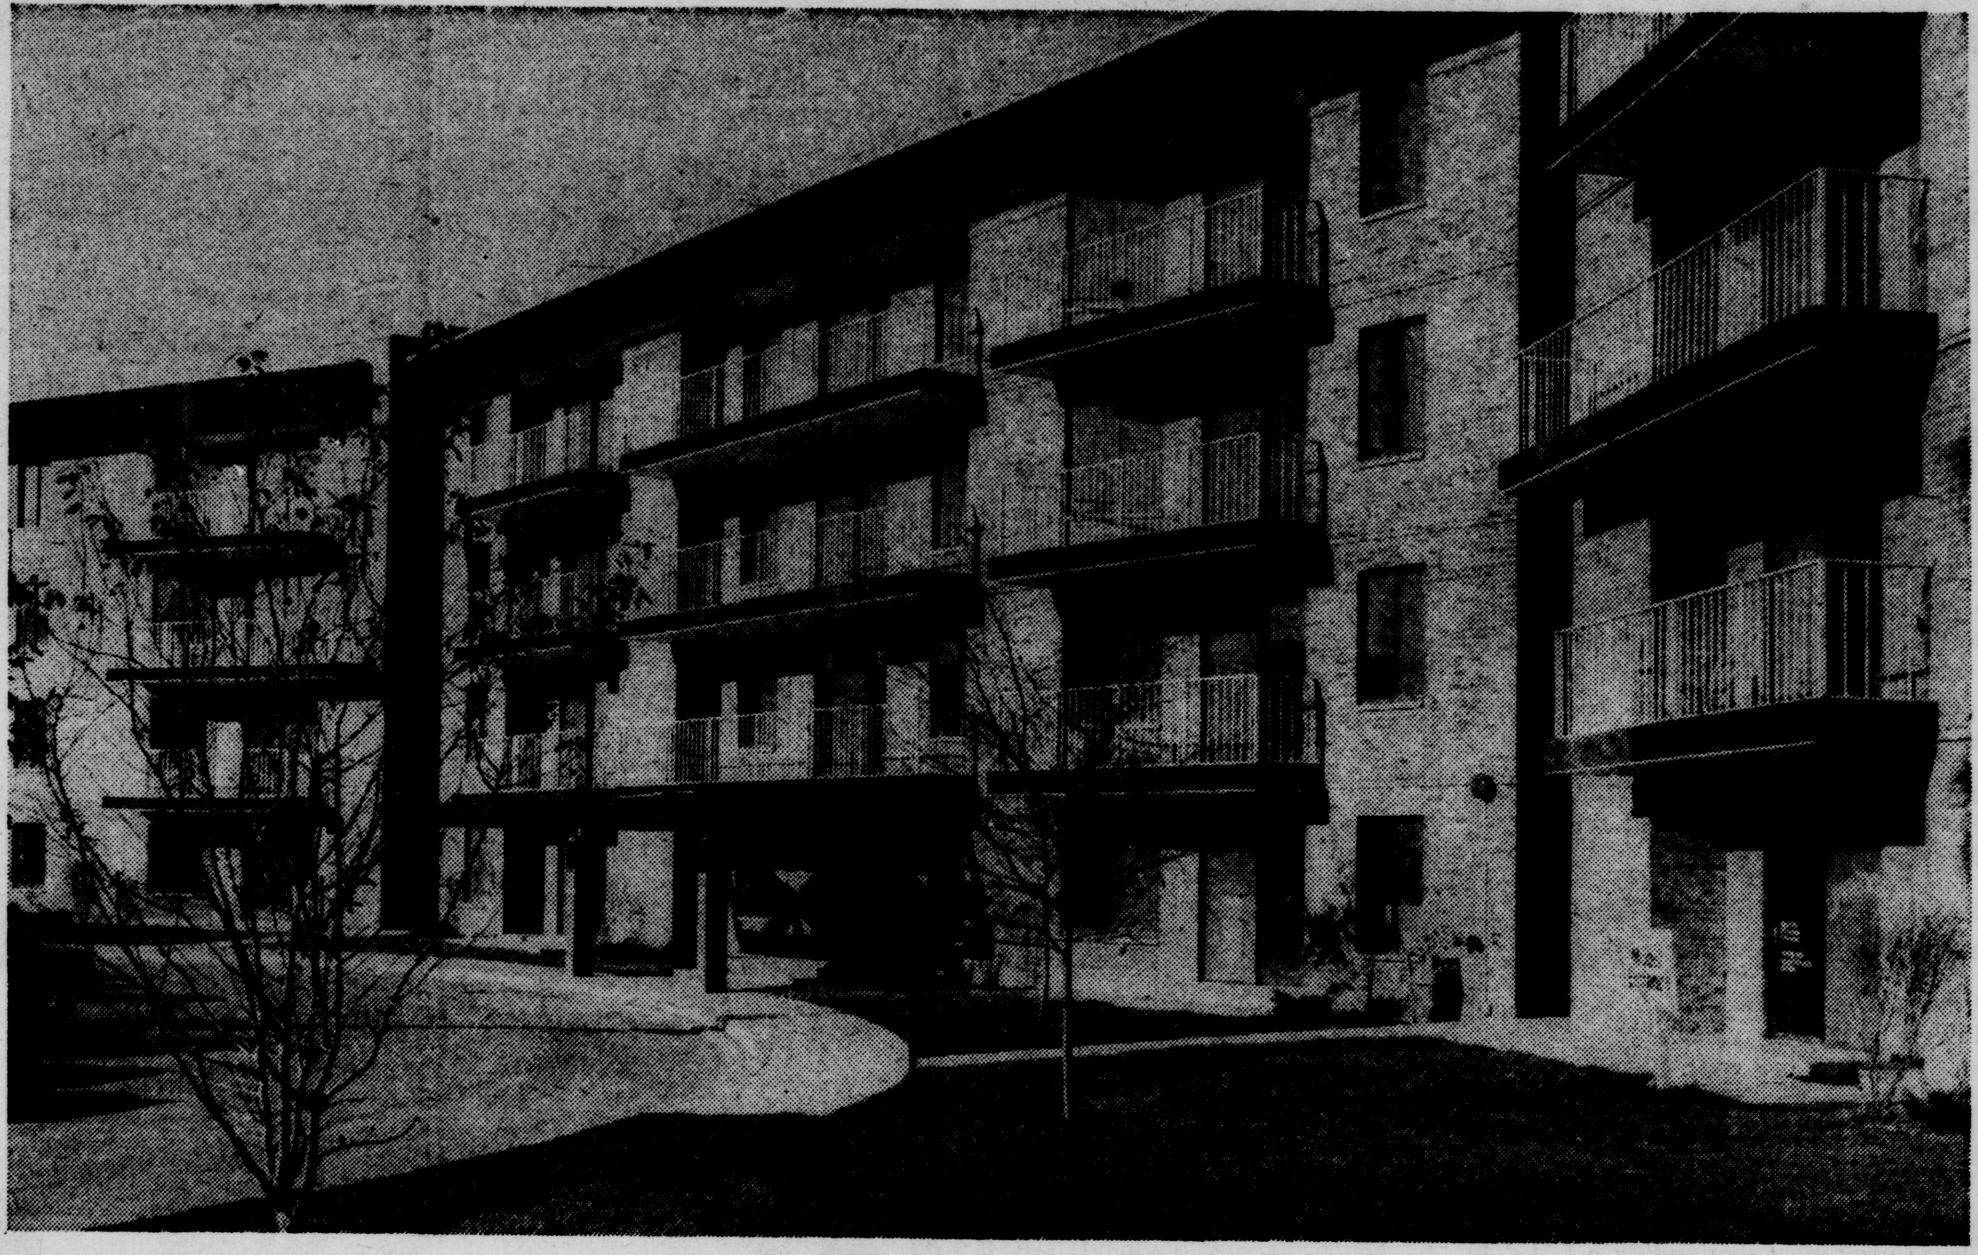
Condominium conversions

Higher vacancy rates in the NW suburbs are discouraging apartment complexes from shifting to condominiums



RENTAL APARTMENTS such as these in the Northwest suburbs will be spared Chicago's condominium conversion craze — at least for the immediate future. The reason? Relatively high vacancy rates, said realty spokesmen.

by DAVE IBATA

High vacancy rates are discouraging condominium conversions in the Northwest suburbs.

Conversions of rental properties — more frequent in Chicago and the North Shore suburbs — are "probably five years away" in the Northwest suburbs, said David Mohl, president of the Multi-Family Housing Assn. of Illinois.

Developers have built too many apartment units in the suburbs, creating a poor market for conversions, Mohl said.

"YOU CAN'T DO successful conversions unless you have good occupancy rates, not only in the building, but in the neighborhood," he said.

Mohl said prospective condominium buyers realize that if, in the near future, they want to sell their units, they'll have a "buyer's market" — and consequently, reduced resale values — in the overbuilt Northwest suburbs.

Mohl estimated the suburbs are about 10 per cent overbuilt. He said rental properties in Chicago have about 99 per cent occupancy rates, while rental apartments in the suburbs average 95 per cent occupancy.

William Sally, vice president of the property management division of Baird & Warner, Chicago, gave slightly different figures.

SALLY SAID occupancy rates in the suburbs average 92 to 93 per cent, compared to rates of 97 per cent in Chicago.

However, he said this is an improvement over the late 1960s and early 1970s when there was a glut of apartments.

"When Chicago had a 5 per cent vacancy rate, the Northwest corridor had a 12 per cent vacancy factor," Sally said.

Apartment complexes built during those boom years usually contained a mix of 60 per cent two-bedroom units, 30 per cent one-bedroom units and 10 per cent studios, Sally said.

As a result, the suburbs suffered a glut of two-bedroom apartments, he said.

"THE MAJORITY of vacancies you have are still working off that glut of 1969, 1970, 1971," he said, adding "I wouldn't call it a glut any more."

Mohl cited Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Palatine as suburbs overflowing with apartment buildings. While the financially healthy complexes report 95 per cent occupancy, Mohl said, the poorly managed developments have occupancy rates as low as 70 per cent.

Consequently, suburban apartments experience a higher turnover rate than their counterparts in Chicago, Mohl said.

"People have more freedom to move around," he said. "There're also more singles in the suburbs than there used to be."

BECAUSE OF high vacancies, one also finds a dearth of new construction of rental apartments in the Northwest suburbs.

"I think you'll see multi-family construction, but it will be in townhouses, quadrominiums and condos," Sally said.

Another factor that discourages new construction of rental properties is economics; builders realize apartments offer them a poor return on their dollars.

"Rents are so cheap now, it's not really practical to build as rental apartments," Sally said. He said a national survey showed a 25 per cent increase in rents would be necessary to make rental apartments economically viable.

In such a competitive market, some landlords give costly concessions that might include reduced security deposits, liberal pet and decorating privileges, a free month's rent, free television sets or even free weekend vacations.

HOWEVER, MOHL said, "They're not reducing the rents. They (landlords) keep thinking eventually the apartments will fill up, and they want them to have higher rents when they do fill up."

Sue Lueder, of the Apartment Information Service in Mount Prospect, a tenant-referral service, said the range of rents in the Northwest suburbs currently is:

- For a one-bedroom apartment, as low as $230; $255 to $275 average; and $300 to $315 for the most expensive.
- For two-bedroom apartments, as low as $250 to $265; $300 to $325 average; and $350 for the most expensive.

Rent increases averaged between $10 and $25 this year, Ms. Lueder said. In those electrically heated apartments in which tenants pay their heating bills, rents may be about $30 lower than comparable units in which the landlord foots the heating costs.

INCREASINGLY, one will find apartments in which tenants will pay for heating, Sally said. He said national studies have shown a tenant will use 30 per cent less energy if he must pay for it.

More prospective tenants are opting for older, "basic" apartments, Ms. Lueder said. She said many tell her they seek, above all else, quality maintenance, and can skimp on such luxuries as dishwasher, kitchen disposals and elaborate recreation facilities in exchange for lower rents.

New houses up 8% over 1976

Lumber prices blamed for rising home costs

by MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Building or buying a new home is likely to cost you about eight per cent more this year than it would have last year.

The National Assn. of Home Builders provides that figure. A spokesman says the median price of new homes sold during the first seven months of this year was $47,900, compared with $27,600 five years ago.

The home builders group contends rising costs are threatening to squeeze many would-be home buyers out of the market. A new recession in the housing industry could result.

THE GROUP BLAMES the price of lumber that went up 20 per cent during the month of August alone. It has risen 90 per cent in the past two years.

(However, lumber prices reportedly dropped 20 per cent in September because of a seasonal decline in housing starts.)

It hints broadly that timber conservation on federal lands, complicated by confused federal policies, is at fault for restricting the supply of wood and driving prices up. The group says Congress is already tinkering with classifying millions of additional acres of federal lands in such a way that they cannot be logged.

The builders' statements probably signal the start of another round of a long-standing battle between conservationists and the lumber and home-building industry.

ENVIRONMENTALISTS SAY the timber industry has denuded its privately held lands and now wants to "scalp" public lands to meet consumer demands for more wood.

The National Forest Products Assn. denies this. It claims huge volumes of timber are rotting away on federal land, most of which are National Forests controlled by the Agriculture Dept.

Both sides seem to agree there is no shortage of timber. They disagree on how to go about getting it.

Douglas Scott of the Sierra Club's Seattle office said he thinks the housing industry is unfairly singling out the price of wood. Scott says it really is a small factor compared with labor and other home-building costs.

HE SAID TIMBER now being harvested from public lands in Alaska is being sold to Japan.

Scott contended the answer is better management, including thinning out forests so trees will grow bigger, and using money that would have been spent on road-building to improve forest harvesting techniques and management.

"It is true one could harvest a great deal of timber from National Forests if one said these are no different than the timber farms of industry, if you disregarded recreation, watershed, wlidlife and so on," Scott said. "But the American people have said 'no' to that in no uncertain terms.

"When we talk about areas where decent trees are located, these are areas all over the West which are used today by local people and people from all over the country for wilderness outing, hunting and fishing, as well as for scenic value and the protection of watershed.

"If we scalped all of that, the devastation in the West would be akin to what happened in the Lake States in the 1800s when the timber barons rolled through."

SCOTT ALSO SAID much of the additional land Congress is thinking about making into wilderness areas is not timber land, and a big chunk is Alaskan tundra.

Jack Muench, chief of the economics division at the National Forest Products Assn., said:

"The federal government controls 58 per cent of the softwood saw timber in this country. If there is any increase in the lumber and plywood supply, the timber has to come from public lands."

He also contended that there would be no wild swings in lumber prices if the government stopped using housing "as a sort of whipping boy for monetary adjustment." He referred to making mortgage money harder or easier to get and causing jumps in housing starts.

Both Muench and Scott agreed the Forest Service is undermanned and unable to carry out forest management that could produce better, more selective yields.

"It's just like a store," Muench said. "You can't sell anything if you don't have the clerks."

the Chicago area, Ms. Lueder said, is the number of persons seeking short-term leases of three to six months' duration.

She said about 25 per cent of prospective tenants seek such leases, often because they are families new to the Chicago area who arrive with the desire to eventually purchase their own home.

"THERE'S A shortage of short-term leases — they're few and far between," Ms. Lueder said. "Very, very few (landlords) will do it — but you can get a transfer clause, or a sublet clause, in the lease."

However, such concessions may disappear as apartment units fill up in the Northwest suburbs.

Sally said, "It's changing from a buyer's market to a seller's market."

Sally said occupancy rates in the Northwest suburbs probably will reach 97 to 97½ per cent during the next 24 to 30 months.

Sally said that among the benefits that may vanish will be liberal regulations on pets and decorating. More landlords may start demanding a full month's rent as a security deposit, and many may start charging for parking privileges, he said.

Mohl said within two years existing vacancies in area rental apartments will be filled — unless another apartment building boom hits the Northwest suburbs.

But the chances of that are extremely remote, industry spokesmen say.

the Chicago area, Ms. Lueder said, is the number of persons seeking short-term leases of three to six months' duration.

She said about 25 per cent of prospective tenants seek such leases, often because they are families new to the Chicago area who arrive with the desire to eventually purchase their own home.

"THERE'S A shortage of short-term leases — they're few and far between," Ms. Lueder said. "Very, very few (landlords) will do it — but you can get a transfer clause, or a sublet clause, in the lease."

However, such concessions may disappear as apartment units fill up in the Northwest suburbs.

Sally said, "It's changing from a buyer's market to a seller's market."

Sally said occupancy rates in the Northwest suburbs probably will reach 97 to 97½ per cent during the next 24 to 30 months.

Sally said that among the benefits that may vanish will be liberal regulations on pets and decorating. More landlords may start demanding a full month's rent as a security deposit, and many may start charging for parking privileges, he said.

Mohl said within two years existing vacancies in area rental apartments will be filled — unless another apartment building boom hits the Northwest suburbs.

But the chances of that are extremely remote, industry spokesmen say.

Real Estate class offered in area

Basic Real Estate Transactions, a 30-hour course required for the Illinois licensing exam, will meet eight weeks on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8:30 to 10:30 p.m. A home-study program also is offered for those unable to attend classroom sessions.

How much can you afford to buy or rent?

A chart published in "Real Estate Roundup," a monthly newsletter for the realty industry prepared by Jones Frankel Co., follows a method used by banks and savings and loan associations to determine how much a prospective renter or home buyer can afford.

The figures are based on the rule, still used by savings institutions, that a buyer can afford a house that costs 2½ times his annual income, and that rent payments should not exceed 25 per cent of a family's gross income.

Income	Buying power	Rental power

Minority quota provisions challenged by builders

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A coalition of building contractors has filed a suit contending a federal law requiring that at least 10 per cent of government-allocated funds be spent with minority businesses is unconstitutional.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court last week, seeks to halt planned distribution of $63 million in federal funds scheduled for 57 projects in Los Angeles City and County.

It says a substantial number of contractors want to bid on the projects, "but have serious reservations in light of questions regarding the legality of minority quota provisions" contained in the Public Works Employment Act.

CONGRESS PASSED the act in May, setting forth the requirement that 10 per cent of the funds applied under the act be spent on minority business enterprises. A minority business was defined as one owned by individuals of whom 50 per cent are members of a minority group.

Since then, the U.S. Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration issued guidelines stating that prime contractors would be required in certain cases to hire minority business enterprises from locations "far from the project."

According to the suit, the guidelines further provide that prime contractors will be expected to use minority businesses "with less experience than available non-minority enterprises and contractors should expect to provide technical assistance to minority businesses as needed."

Waiver to the 10 per cent minority quota, the suit said, are to be granted only under "exceptional circumstances."

The alleged reverse discrimination against white contractors, the suit says, violates Fifth Amendment guarantees to equal protection under the law and due process.

‘How much rent should I charge?’

Don G. Campbell

About real estate

What's the "fair market price" of something? It's easy enough to figure: Compute the costs of manufacturing, promotion, shipping and distribution and add a fair mark-up for the maker and the retailer. Presto! There it is . . . Right?

Now, scrap all of the above. Put the product on the market and see what someone will pay for it. There's the "fair market price."

Dear Mr. Campbell: How much rent should I charge for an upper apartment consisting of living room, kitchen, two bedrooms, no utilities and no garage?

I'm building a 2-family house in the suburbs and will occupy the lower apartment of seven rooms and garage myself. The cost of the home is $83,000 with a $40,000 mortgage and $1,500 a year in real estate taxes. How do I figure it so the rent helps pay for the house?—Ms. M.W.

There are all sorts of exotic ways to figure out what you should be getting for the apartment, but it boils down to a far more simple equation: How much is a prospective tenant willing to pay for it?

The only way you can determine that is to study the market. Put yourself in the role of a would-be renter and answer ads (in person, not by phone) for apartments in comparable neighborhoods and with comparable facilities.

The newness of your unit is a plus. The lack of a garage is a minus. As long as you're in the process of building, it might be worthwhile to add a carport for the apartment.

Dear Mr. Campbell: A friend is trying to talk me into going in with him on the purchase of a vacation home by the ocean. He says we can both use it for our vacations and then rent it out the rest of the time. He says the tax advantages (since it's an income property) are very attractive and that it is a great investment. What do you think?—Mr. W.S.

It can be a good investment, but before you decide, check with a good tax attorney or certified public accountant. Several tax changes last year have altered the ground rules a bit, so it's not as open and shut as it used to be. Since I don't know your present tax situation, it's impossible to be more specific.

Dear Mr. Campbell: What do you think of a neighbor who builds a cinder block fence on our property line and paints only his side of it? He left my side unfinished and it's an ugly grey.—Mrs. J.G.M.

If he's that kind of a neighbor, you are probably better off being separated from him by the fence. The simple solution is to buy a few gallons of paint and finish the job. After all, his investment is much greater than yours.

Dear Mr. Campbell: There was a bad home fire near where I live recently, and it got me worried about the insurance on my personal belongings. Do insurance companies take inflation into account?—Mrs. H.K.O'C.

That's a good score on which to get worried. Rarely does a policy holder get around to updating his or her coverage, but it's something that should be done about every three years.

Some policies are available that have built-in escalator clauses to compensate for inflation, but most don't.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I know you have said that a single-family home, as a rental, is a bad investment. Are there any exceptions to this? I'm thinking about doing it.—Mr. T.G.V.

There isn't a rule in the world that doesn't have hundreds of exceptions.

It's not so much a bad investment as it is that, normally, there are a lot more productive ones around. It's not quite the same thing.

If you live nearby (so you can keep an eye on the place), and if you're handy enough that you can do most of the maintenance work yourself, and if the rental market is good in your community, a single-family house can be a very satisfying investment.

Dear Mr. Campbell: Defective wiring in my apartment caused a fire with considerable damage to the walls. There was very little damage to my things. My landlord insists that I am responsible for the damages. I say that he is, particularly since he rented the place to me in a dangerous condition. Who's right? — Mr. B.B.N.

Beats me. A lot depends on how the lease is written and if you, as the tenant, are relieved of responsibility for damage caused by fire, the elements or other "acts of God."

If such an exemption isn't clearly spelled out, then you could be responsible for returning the premises to him essentially as you found them (reasonable wear and tear expected).

The landlord might be held responsible if you could prove that he knew the wiring was both defective and dangerous — and that's a real nut to prove. Take your lease to a good lawyer.

'How much rent should I charge?'

Don G. Campbell

About real estate

What's the "fair market price" of something? It's easy enough to figure: Compute the costs of manufacturing, promotion, shipping and distribution and add a fair mark-up for the maker and the retailer. Presto! There it is . . . Right?

Now, scrap all of the above. Put the product on the market and see what someone will pay for it. There's the "fair market price."

Dear Mr. Campbell: How much rent should I charge for an upper apartment consisting of living room, kitchen, two bedrooms, no utilities and no garage?

I'm building a 2-family house in the suburbs and will occupy the lower apartment of seven rooms and garage myself. The cost of the home is $83,000 with a $40,000 mortgage and $1,500 a year in real estate taxes. How do I figure it so the rent helps pay for the house?—Ms. M.W.

There are all sorts of exotic ways to figure out what you should be getting for the apartment, but it boils down to a far more simple equation: How much is a prospective tenant willing to pay for it?

The only way you can determine that is to study the market. Put yourself in the role of a would-be renter and answer ads (in person, not by phone) for apartments in comparable neighborhoods and with comparable facilities.

The newness of your unit is a plus. The lack of a garage is a minus. As long as you're in the process of building, it might be worthwhile to add a carport for the apartment.

Dear Mr. Campbell: A friend is trying to talk me into going in with him on the purchase of a vacation home by the ocean. He says we can both use it for our vacations and then rent it out the rest of the time. He says the tax advantages (since it's an income property) are very attractive and that it is a great investment. What do you think?—Mr. W.S.

It can be a good investment, but before you decide, check with a good tax attorney or certified public accountant. Several tax changes last year have altered the ground rules a bit, so it's not as open and shut as it used to be. Since I don't know your present tax situation, it's impossible to be more specific.

Dear Mr. Campbell: What do you think of a neighbor who builds a cinder block fence on our property line and paints only his side of it? He left my side unfinished and it's an ugly grey.—Mrs. J.G.M.

If he's that kind of a neighbor, you are probably better off being separated from him by the fence. The simple solution is to buy a few gallons of paint and finish the job. After all, his investment is much greater than yours.

Dear Mr. Campbell: There was a bad home fire near where I live recently, and it got me worried about the insurance on my personal belongings. Do insurance companies take inflation into account?—Mrs. H.K.O'C.

That's a good score on which to get worried. Rarely does a policy holder get around to updating his or her coverage, but it's something that should be done about every three years.

Some policies are available that have built-in escalator clauses to compensate for inflation, but most don't.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I know you have said that a single-family home, as a rental, is a bad investment. Are there any exceptions to this? I'm thinking about doing it.—Mr. T.G.V.

There isn't a rule in the world that doesn't have hundreds of exceptions.

It's not so much a bad investment as it is that, normally, there are a lot more productive ones around. It's not quite the same thing.

If you live nearby (so you can keep an eye on the place), and if you're handy enough that you can do most of the maintenance work yourself, and if the rental market is good in your community, a single-family house can be a very satisfying investment.

Dear Mr. Campbell: Defective wiring in my apartment caused a fire with considerable damage to the walls. There was very little damage to my things. My landlord insists that I am responsible for the damages. I say that he is, particularly since he rented the place to me in a dangerous condition. Who's right? — Mr. B.B.N.

Beats me. A lot depends on how the lease is written and if you, as the tenant, are relieved of responsibility for damage caused by fire, the elements or other "acts of God."

If such an exemption isn't clearly spelled out, then you could be responsible for returning the premises to him essentially as you found them (reasonable wear and tear expected).

The landlord might be held responsible if you could prove that he knew the wiring was both defective and dangerous — and that's a real nut to prove. Take your lease to a good lawyer.

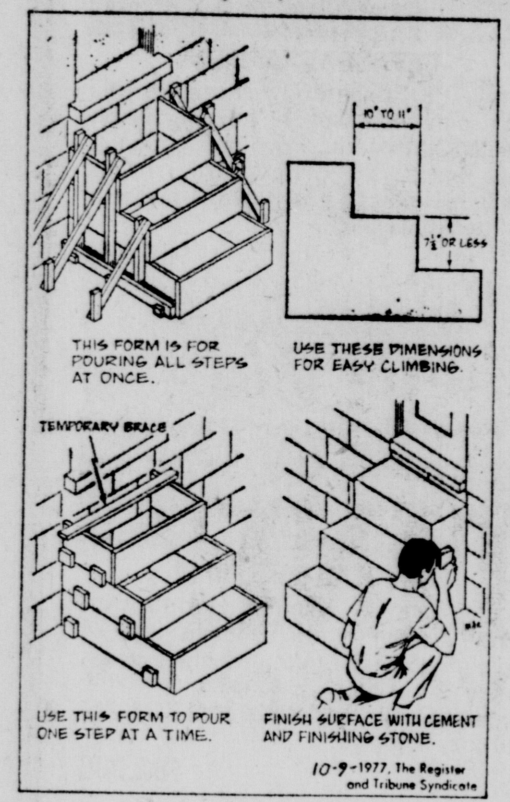
Wood forms are key to building concrete steps

Dear House Doctor: Could you tell me how I should go about replacing the wood stairs on my back porch with concrete steps? —R. P.

The most important part of building concrete steps is the construction of the wood form. Wet concrete is very heavy and exerts great pressure on the sides of the form. If it is not well braced, this pressure will cause the frame to burst open.

Two designs for the forms are illustrated. One is intended for pouring one step at a time where the concrete is to be mixed by hand. This form is placed on top of the step below after the concrete in the first step has cured for 24 hours.



10" TO 11"
7½" OR LESS
THIS FORM IS FOR POURING ALL STEPS AT ONCE.
USE THESE DIMENSIONS FOR EASY CLIMBING.
TEMPORARY BRACE
USE THIS FORM TO POUR ONE STEP AT A TIME.
FINISH SURFACE WITH CEMENT AND FINISHING STONE.

10-9-1977, The Register and Tribune Syndicate

The other form is for pouring all steps at once, such as when you buy concrete from a batching plant.

THE EASIEST steps to climb have tread between 10 and 11 inches wide and a rise not exceeding 7½ inches. If the rise dimension presents a problem, make the rise from the earth to the first tread any available dimension less than 7½ inches and hold the remaining risers to the 7½ inches.

It is convenient to use 1 by 3-inch boards for the sides of the forms. However, if the stairs will be wider than four feet, it is best to use 2 by 8-inch boards.

You can conserve on concrete by placing broken concrete blocks, bricks or large stones within the forms. However, the concrete surrounding them must not be less than six inches thick.

Mixing the concrete by hand can be laborious job, but, in most cities, power-operated mixers can be rented by the day. With either method, the mix should consist of one part Portland cement, 2¼ parts damp, loose sand, and three parts gravel. Mix the dry ingredients thoroughly and then add water to make a wet, but not soupy, mix.

When the one-step-at-a-time method is used, the surface that will be covered by the next step should be left very rough so as to improve the bonding.

When the forms are removed after no less than 48 hours, the surface covered by the forms will appear unfinished. Use a carborundum concrete finishing stone plus a mixture of cement and water to smooth it off.

Outpatients' clinic

H.L.C. There are several paints made for application to asphalt shingle roofs where the granules have been washed away but where the roof is otherwise in good condition.

Mrs. E. S. W. — Interior vinyl paint should never be used in a bathroom. High gloss, oil-base enamel is far less subject to mildew stains and can be easily cleaned.

L. H. S. — I do not know of any finish for a table top that will produce a higher gloss and have the durability of polyurethane varnish. This varnish is normally applied over a white shellac prime coat.

Herman Baum

The house doctor

Dear House Doctor: How can I remove asphalt tiles from my garage floor? —E. H.

The adhesive can be softened by heating the tiles with a blowtorch. this is a dangerous operation, though, as the tiles will ignite if they become too hot. I recommend you have a flooring contractor do this part of the job.

Dear House Doctor: There is a musty odor coming from my central air conditioning system. Could it be coming from my unfinished basement? —Miss V. R. S.

A central air conditioning system does not normally have an air intake in a basement. Instead, I suggest you check the drip pan located beneath the coils inside the cooling unit. Sometimes, a fungus will form in this pan and the drain line that conducts the water outdoors. The pan should be cleaned and a disinfectant poured into the drain line.

Dear House Doctor: What do you think of a woman wallpapering a room in her home? —Mrs. B. B. D.

My grandmother would have been horrified by the thought. Of course, she would never have imagined that women would work for fire and police departments, serve in the armed forces, pilot commercial airliners, and invade man's domain so completely that even nouns in the language containing the word "man" are in disrepute.

Of course you can wallpaper a room, and the wallpaper manufacturers even trim and prepaste the paper to make the job easier.

There are a few rules to be followed, though, and these are contained in an illustrated bulletin you may have by sending 30 cents in coin (no checks or stamps, please) and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to The House Doctor, in care of Real Estate, Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Ask for Bulletin No. K-249. I must have the stamped return envelope to fill your order.

Dear House Doctor: How do you clean window screens that have turned dark. I tried washing them with kerosene, but it did no good. —H.T.

I assume the screens are made of metal such as aluminum or copper, and are not plastic. Remove the screens and place them on a flat surface, such as a concrete walk or drive. Scrub them with a pad No. 2 steel wool and kitchen scouring powder. (A Kitchen steel wool pad is too soft to do a good job.)

When you turn the frames over so the recessed side is down, it is necessary to place a wood board beneath the area being scrubbed so as not to stretched the wire.

30% of families who moved in '77 cite home as reason

Thirty per cent of the families who moved during the first six months of 1977 did so to buy a home of their own, according to a study by the Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., Boston.

Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of the mortgage insurance firm, said his group's study showed that "better housing, job requirements and family changes rank as the top three reasons for moving — but with housing as the runaway leader."

"For many families, moving means owning a home of their own for the first time," Goss said. "Almost half — 47.8 per cent — of all movers who bought a home had previously been renting shelter."

The IMIC study, which covered 1976 and the first half of 1977, found:

- Movers tend to be younger than average: 70 per cent of households were headed by individuals under 35 years of age.
- Median value of dwellings purchased by these movers was $37,500 — significantly higher than the $33,300 median for all owned homes.
- Of those who had been renting, 27.4 per cent bought their new dwelling.
- Of the first-time owners, almost one-half — 49.1 per cent — were under 35 years of age: 30.1 per cent being 25 and 29; 19 per cent between 30 and 34.
- Movers who had been renting a single-family home were most likely to buy — 32 per cent became owners. Conversely, less than one-fifth of those living in structures of five units or more purchased their new domicile.
- On the average, families trading up from one owned home to another bought shelter worth $16,000 more than their previous dwelling.

Potential health hazard in wood foundations: state

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Dr. Paul Q. Peterson, Illinois Dept. of Public Health director, said recently his department does not support the use of wood foundations in the construction of dwellings because of health and construction concerns.

Peterson said there is a potential health hazard associated with the use of wood treated with arsenic compounds.

"Questions have recently been raised regarding both the potential health hazard associated with arsenic exposure and the structural integrityofarsenictreated wood foundations," Peterson said.

ONE OF THE MAJOR battles in the state concerning wood foundations is being fought in Peoria, where nine apartment buildings are going up on the South Side to house low- and middle-income families. One of the complaints of a citizens group in Peoria has been that the arsenic may filter into the ground. A spokesman for the department said the Peoria situation was a factor in the department releasing its opinion on wood foundations.

"The copper chromate arsenate used to treat the wood," Peterson said, "represents an adequate reservoir of arsenic which can be leached and could cause serious poisoning."

He said there does not appear to be a problem of contamination through the soil but said there is a "potential for the formation of highly toxic chemicals on the surface of the wood."

Peterson said the department also is concerned about quality control in the treatment of the wood and the possible improper installation leading to premature failure and deterioration of wood foundations.

"There has not been a sufficient amount of controlled testing of either the products or the construction techniques of wood foundations to support their use," Peterson said. "In addition, the climatic and soil conditions in Illinois generally are not conducive to the use of wood foundations."

Peterson said an advisory opinion stating the department's position has been distributed to local agencies in the state that have construction approval authority.

S&Ls set records for August

The savings and loan business set August mortgage lending and savings records last month, the U.S. League of Savings Associations has reported.

Net savings flows hit an August record of an estimated $2.9 billion.

Figures for the first eight months of the year show a savings deposit increase of $35.4 billion. In dollar terms this was the largest gain ever for the period.

The U.S. League estimates are based on monthly reports received from member associations throughout the country. August trends were based on data received from 816 associatios, holding 40.5 per cent of the total assets of the business.

"DESPITE THE upward trend in short-term interest rates during August, savings association deposit growth remains strong," said Norman Strunk, executive vice president of the league. "In addition, associations were undoubtedly aided by the uncertainty of rates on medium term government securities."

Mortgage loan closings also reached a record for the month of August: An estimated $10.5 billion — topping by 35.5 per cent the prior August record set in 1976.

During the first eight months of this year, savings associations have closed $69.5 billion in mortgage loans. This was 36.5 per cent higher than the level for the same period of 1976 and more than double the amount for the same months of 1975.

Strunk said that the heavy volume of loan closings this year already exceeds the total for all of 1975 ($55 billion) and is fast approaching the 1976 full-year total of $78.8 billion, the largest annual volume ever.

Free booklet on home buying

A free booklet describing how a couple can prepare to purchase a new home is available from the Illinois Savings and Loan League.

The 28-page booklet, "Planning and Saving Your Way to Home Ownership," is available from participating savings institutions, or by writing the league at 220 E. Adams St., Springrield, Ill. 62701.

Topics covered by the booklet include, "Your money plan," "How much is enough?" "Starting to look and making the choice," and "The final choice."

The booklet also discusses savings plans, new vs. used homes, townhomes and condominium apartments, and the purchase contract.

Peterson said there is a potential health hazard associated with the use of wood treated with arsenic compounds.

"Questions have recently been raised regarding both the potential health hazard associated with arsenic exposure and the structural integrityofarsenictreated wood foundations," Peterson said.

ONE OF THE MAJOR battles in the state concerning wood foundations is being fought in Peoria, where nine apartment buildings are going up on the South Side to house low- and middle-income families. One of the complaints of a citizens group in Peoria has been that the arsenic may filter into the ground. A spokesman for the department said the Peoria situation was a factor in the department releasing its opinion on wood foundations.

"The copper chromate arsenate used to treat the wood," Peterson said, "represents an adequate reservoir of arsenic which can be leached and could cause serious poisoning."

He said there does not appear to be a problem of contamination through the soil but said there is a "potential for the formation of highly toxic chemicals on the surface of the wood."

Peterson said the department also is concerned about quality control in the treatment of the wood and the possible improper installation leading to premature failure and deterioration of wood foundations.

"There has not been a sufficient amount of controlled testing of either the products or the construction techniques of wood foundations to support their use," Peterson said. "In addition, the climatic and soil conditions in Illinois generally are not conducive to the use of wood foundations."

Peterson said an advisory opinion stating the department's position has been distributed to local agencies in the state that have construction approval authority.

S&Ls set records for August

The savings and loan business set August mortgage lending and savings records last month, the U.S. League of Savings Associations has reported.

Net savings flows hit an August record of an estimated $2.9 billion.

Figures for the first eight months of the year show a savings deposit increase of $35.4 billion. In dollar terms this was the largest gain ever for the period.

The U.S. League estimates are based on monthly reports received from member associations throughout the country. August trends were based on data received from 816 associatios, holding 40.5 per cent of the total assets of the business.

"DESPITE THE upward trend in short-term interest rates during August, savings association deposit growth remains strong," said Norman Strunk, executive vice president of the league. "In addition, associations were undoubtedly aided by the uncertainty of rates on medium term government securities."

Mortgage loan closings also reached a record for the month of August: An estimated $10.5 billion — topping by 35.5 per cent the prior August record set in 1976.

During the first eight months of this year, savings associations have closed $69.5 billion in mortgage loans. This was 36.5 per cent higher than the level for the same period of 1976 and more than double the amount for the same months of 1975.

Strunk said that the heavy volume of loan closings this year already exceeds the total for all of 1975 ($55 billion) and is fast approaching the 1976 full-year total of $78.8 billion, the largest annual volume ever.

Advances made in carpet patterns

by NANCY IRAN PHILLIPS

Certain industrywide advances are noted in the patterns of carpets shown throughout the market at the Merchandise Mart.

Looms have been replaced with tufting machines and American consumers are reaping the benefits of improvements in floor covering manufacture, said Mike Masland, president of the Carpet and Rug Institute; A. B. Edge III, chairman of the institute's marketing affairs committee; and Lawrence C. Merthan, executive vice president of the organization.

Advances made in carpet patterns

by NANCY IRAN PHILLIPS

Certain industrywide advances are noted in the patterns of carpets shown throughout the market at the Merchandise Mart.

Looms have been replaced with tufting machines and American consumers are reaping the benefits of improvements in floor covering manufacture, said Mike Masland, president of the Carpet and Rug Institute; A. B. Edge III, chairman of the institute's marketing affairs committee; and Lawrence C. Merthan, executive vice president of the organization.

HOW IS this possible in an inflated economy?

The spokesmen explain that it is because so many improvements have been made in backing, dyeing, latex binding, and fiber content of the carpets, as well as in manufacturing techniques.'

Carpets are no longer made solely of dyed wools and woven on a loom, they said. They are tufted and printed of man-made fibers designed especially for carpet needs, giving new dimensions to finished patterns and decreasing production costs.

Their advice to consumers is to take care in selecting a carpet and to find out for themselves. They recommend avoiding telephone deals of "three rooms of carpet for $110." And they urge the consumer "to know the store and that it has a service department.

"Decide what color you want, then check the prices in various stores," they said. "When you're checking prices, also check the feel of the carpet. You'll know the good ones by their hefty feeling," Masland said.

A word to the wise— put complaint in writing

Bernard Meltzer

On real estate

If a man bought a new car and it wasn't working properly, and if he took it apart in an effort to locate the trouble, no doubt he would jeopardize the warranty. The same holds true for real estate.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We moved into a beautiful new house last January and love everything about it, except for one important thing. The heating system just wasn't capable of keeping the house warm enough. We also found that the electrical fuses were constantly blowing.

Though we complained to the builder for months, he never came around to look into it. He said he was very busy and that we should find someone to correct the problem. He even offered to pay the bill.

Now that winter is approaching, we don't know what to do. We don't want to go through that again. As you know, we had a bitter cold winter last year, and the thought of walking around with heavy sweaters on is too much. Shall we take his advice and call in someone on our own to rectify this? — Shouldn't he do it?

Your house obviously has a poorly designed and installed heating and electrical system. Your builder's suggestion about your securing your own mechanic is a dodge. If you follow his suggestion the builder can tell you that your man ruined the system.

You must make a demand in writing to the builder for the necessary corrections. If he does not reply you will have to obtain legal advice.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am a woman who lives alone, except for my cat. I manage to get things done without a man. However, one little thing has come up that I can't seem to solve.

When removing a burned out bulb the other day, it broke off in my hand, leaving the shattered base inside. I've tried and tried, but I can't budge it. Is there some little secret in knowing how to accomplish this? — Stymied.

The first thing you must remember to do is disconnect the fixture. Then wad up a brown paper bag into a ball, press firmly against the socket, turn and you will free the base.

It's as simple as that!

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am thinking about buying a four-family dwelling in a not-too-bad neighborhood. It's not a top notch neighborhood, but neither is it deteriorated. It's an older building, but in very good condition. I would not have to make a very substantial down payment, and this appeals to me.

Would you advise me to make this sort of investment? You're the expert, and I'm only a beginner, so I'm depending on your advice. — Not quite sure.

I have found that many older, lower-priced four-family units in fairly good neighborhoods do well in earnings. You say you would not have to make a very substantial down payment. The reason for this is that the total prices of many of the older, four-family buildings can be purchased for the $30,000 or $40,000 price range, approximately.

If you look into it carefully and the building in which you are interested falls into the above category, I would say, "Full steam ahead."

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My husband recently inherited a pretty sizable amout of money from his uncle, who had never married. My husband was his only nephew.

In about five years my husband will be retiring. He feels he should invest this windfall he has received for our future. Someone has been trying to interest him in a nursing home. We are told that this form of investment has been very good in recent years.

Do you think we should take the plunge? — Ready to zing!

Investment in nursing homes can be very lucrative indeed. But it is a lot more complicated than you might think. It is extremely important for a would-be investor to research the entire field of Medicare and Medicaid.

All local, state and federal regulations must be learned and complied with. All local zoning laws must be checked. These things are a must, for failure to comply with any of the laws or regulations could result in a disastrous loss in this very specialized type of investment.

If you are willing and able to thoroughly investigate the above, then take the plunge!

Dear Mr. Meltzer: The Toilet in one of bathrooms keeps running all the time. Knowing what plumbers charge these days, I'd like to be able to fix it myself, if it isn't too complicated.

Do you think it might be something minor, and if so, what can I do about it? — Dripping water.

A running toilet is caused by the tank ball not sitting properly in the outlet. Or the tank ball may be worn out and may need to be replaced. A tank ball seat may require cleaning. The tank ball guide may be bent, corroded or misaligned.

If the tank ball itself needs replacement, you must unscrew it from the bottom end of the guide and install a new one. If the tank ball seat needs to be cleaned, you must empty the tank, dry it, sand the dried seat with emery paper until smooth.

If, however the guide is corroded, you must sand the wire with emery paper until smooth. A guide which is out of alignment can be repositioned by loosening the screws, and then tightening them again.

9.04% interest rate cited as average

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Home buyers shopping for both new and used houses paid an average interest rate of 9.04 per cent for mortgage loans between early August and early September, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said.

The average effective interest rate on loans extended for purchasing formerly occupied homes dropped from 9.05 per cent to 9.04 per cent during the 30-day period, the board said.

However, the rate for purchasing newly-built houses rose from 9.02 per cent to 9.04 per cent.

Loan counseling available

A home loan counseling program is still available through the Chicago regional office of the Veterans Administration.

Donald R. Ramsey, director, says the program is voluntary, but the VA is encouraging veterans to use the free counseling service before purchasing a home.

"The service is available to all veterans who are planning to buy a new or existing home with the help of their GI Bill home loan guaranty," he said. "Both veterans and non-veterans who are buying a VA-acquired property are invited to use the counseling service also."

The counseling will be provided by VA loan specialists who are trained in all procedural requirements involved in purchasing a home.

Counseling will cover fair housing opportunities, basic income and credit requirements, the budgetary implications of home ownership, problems that arise after the home is acquired in connection with payment problems, insurance, taxes and foreclosures.

Counseling is provided at the VA regional office, 536 S. Clark St., Chicago, 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. To make an appointment, call 353-9440.

Private mortgages make gains

The government, long the leader in the home mortgage insurance business, has finished second to private enterprise for a three-month period ending Aug. 31.

According to the Mortgage Insurance Companies of America, Washington, D.C., the industry trade association, private mortgage insurance companies insured 188,190 mortgages nationwide on single-family houses, while the Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration combined insured 172,792 for the three months ending in August 1977.

In addition, private mortgage insurance companies topped the government agencies for June and July, marking the first time the private sector moved ahead of the FHA and VA.

Private mortgage insurance enables married couples, unmarried couples, single men or single women to buy a house with a downpayment as low as 5 per cent.

Private mortgages make gains

The government, long the leader in the home mortgage insurance business, has finished second to private enterprise for a three-month period ending Aug. 31.

According to the Mortgage Insurance Companies of America, Washington, D.C., the industry trade association, private mortgage insurance companies insured 188,190 mortgages nationwide on single-family houses, while the Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration combined insured 172,792 for the three months ending in August 1977.

In addition, private mortgage insurance companies topped the government agencies for June and July, marking the first time the private sector moved ahead of the FHA and VA.

Private mortgage insurance enables married couples, unmarried couples, single men or single women to buy a house with a downpayment as low as 5 per cent.

BUSINESS

GM official raps goverment influence

by JOHN N. FRANK

Midwest industries such as steel and electronics can become competitive with foreign producers if governments stop interfering in the daily operation of business, Thomas A. Murphy, chairman of the board of General Motors Corp., says.

"The future economic growth of the Midwest will be determined in a very large measure by the way government at various levels responds to this plea," Murphy said in delivering the opening statement of the two-day Midwest Economic Growth Conference in Chicago.

"Government overregulation would be dramatically reduced if government would concern itself with those things it does best, such as setting the rules and objectives for the rest of us in society to follow, and refrain from doing those things it has never been successful at in its long history, such as attempting to direct the course of the free market in channels it arbitrarily deems best for social or political reasons," Murphy said.

WITH FOREIGN labor costs drastically lower than American labor costs, the only way for American manufacturers such as General Motors to remain competitive is to get more productivity out of its operations, Murphy said.

Such productivity can be achieved by large capital investment in new plants and equipment, he said. But industry recently has had to divert capital to meet fderal, state and local environmental codes and such diversion has hurt American business, Murphy said.

Other speakers at Wednesday's sessions agreed with Murphy that government intervention in private enterprise has been the main cause for recent steel layoffs and the Zenith layoffs in the Chicago area.

"Steel claims it is being hurt by imports, that is not the case," said Herbert E. Strawbridge, chairman of the Higby Co., which operates six department stores in the Cleveland area. "Steel is being hurt by the government's intervention with the economic system."

DISCUSSING RECENT attempts by Southern and Western states to woo businesses from the older Midwest and Eastern regions, Murphy said he views such regional competition as good for business because it forces all areas to reevaluate and improve themselves.

General Motors is still committed to growth in the Midwest, Murphy said, making at least 80 per cent of its expenditures in this region.

"For us, the grass is still a rich, verdant green here in the nation's heartland," he said.

Strawbridge said Southern and Western states soon will run out of adequate supplies of water and cheap energy needed to maintain major businesses.

"The sunbelt is in trouble. It has become too successful for its own good, too many people, too much industry, too much farming and insufficient water to make power. Combining increasing pay (in Southern regions) with enlarged energy costs coupled with lack of water spells trouble. And trouble in the sunbelt spells opportunity for the Midwest," Strawbridge said.

THE ECONOMIC health of the Midwest tied to the nation's economic well-being, and except for agriculture, the national economy is in better shape than recent downward trends in the stock market reflect, conference speakers agreed.

Recent record wheat and corn crops around the world will mean lower income for America's farmers, said Dale E. Butz, executive director of the Illinois Agriculture Assn. and the brother of the former U.S. Sec. of Agriculture Earl Butz.

"In the short run I'm a little pessimistic about what I see in Midwest agriculture. We're going to see a substantial drop in the income levels that we've grown accustomed to," Butz said of Midwestern farmers. Lower farmer incomes will translate into smaller orders for new machinery and other farm equipment, he said.

Business briefs

Consumer buying decreases 1.2%

Consumer purchasing dipped 1.2 per cent in September, the first decline since the beginning of summer, the U.S. Commerce Dept. said Wednesday. The downturn was led by a 2.9 per cent drop in the sale of automotive products, mostly new and used cars. Retail sales had risen a revised 1.5 per cent in August and 0.8 per cent in July. The back-to-back increases had boosted the spirits of government economists, hopeful that consumers would show enough confidence in the economy to spend money. The September drop was the first since a 1.3 per cent decline in June, the department said.

Steel industry to tell its side

The steel industry will have its day in court Thursday when the Carter administration listens to explanations for the current crisis in the domestic steel industry. Robert Strauss, the president's special trade representative, indicated that it may be a few weeks before the task force, which will meet at the White House, will come up with "some hard facts and alternative solutions." Those problems resulted in more than 21,000 announced layoffs since early August, although most major steelmakers expect no new layoffs in the fourth quarter. Some 60,000 steelworkers whose jobs have been affected by imports are receiving federal assistance. The Senate Wednesday approved by voice vote a resolution to reaffirm support for laws that protect American industries from unfair competition, with special emphasis placed on the steel industry. U.S. steel industry executives Wednesday charged that European and Japanese producers are flooding the American market with underpriced steel and said they will ask President Carter to do something about it.

Unemployment forecast dim

In a bleak forecast on Western economies, the International Labor Organization Wednesday predicted the number of jobless in industrialized nations will reach 16 million by the end of the year. "After a brief spell of improvement in job prospects earlier this year there has been a relapse," the organization said. "Unemployment could be up one million to 16 million by the end of the year," it added.

Yankee ingenuity makes comeback

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Some good news for a change: the American gift for innovation is coming back to life, promising a brighter and more interesting economic future.

Technological progress long has been a key ingredient in rising standards of living for U.S. Families. Since World War II, we have come to take for granted the dramatic benefits of such innovations as the so-called wonder drugs, television, jet planes and computers. But that trend has been in trouble lately.

A notable falloff in business priorities for research and development has been evident in the past decade. In real terms, discounting the effects of inflation, total research spending dropped 6 per cent between 1968 and 1975. In previous years such spending had increased 30 per cent.

What caused the more recent lowering of enthusiasm for basic research activity? The causes aren't hard to find: inflation chomped deeply into corporate profits. The government bit harder, too, and stepped up its regulation of, and interference with, all phases of private enterprise. Big corporations, noting the high failure rates and long payback periods for new products, emphasized minor improvements in old products, instead. Small entrepreneurial companies found it harder and harder to obtain investment capital for untried ideas.

That's the bad news. Here's the good: in the past two years, spurred by the increased emphasis on energy-related research, industry again has been turning its attention to basic research and development. Total corporate and government-sponsored spending last year reversed the long downtrend and moved up 17 per cent. A further 11 per cent increase is expected this year.

Moreover, according to such careful students of corporate activity as Boston's David L. Babson & Co., all signs point to a continuation of this revitalized trend. "Greater research efforts are needed to help offset the growing costs and more limited availability of energy and raw material, as well as to counter the strong upward trend in labor costs," the firm notes.

There are, Babson says, "many new ideas on the drawing boards," and it isolated several areas where investors and consumers alike could look for significant contributions:

- Energy. Despite governmental indecision that in some cases has worked against technological progress, the escalation of fuel prices since 1973 has given industry a strong incentive to experiment. Already, innovative approaches are being used in exploring for new oil and gas.
- Electronics. The development of semiconductor technology has spawned a vast array of new products, from the $5 million computer to the $6.88 calculator. In the next few years, inexpensive computers will find applications in the home (controlling heating, lighting and alarm systems), in the car (controlling skids, diagnosing engine trouble and monitoring fuel consumption) and in the office (electronically coordinating a host of present business-machine functions).
- Communications. A glass fiber now can be made to carry the same information as a copper wire cable, with reduced size and weight and less vulnerability to outside electrical interference. The market, currently only a few million dollars, might reach $1.5 billion by 1990.
- Printing. Electronic publishing in which copy is typed on a video display screen, edited and then stored in a computer, is helping to revolutionize newspaper and magazine technology, and significantly restrain previously paralyzing cost increases.
- Health care. In 1976, 15 newly synthesized drugs were introduced in the United States. Computerized X-ray scanners and ultrasonic detectors now are commonly used to help diagnose internal illnesses.
- Food and agriculture. An array of innovations, including progress toward "superstrains" of corn and wheat, promises to feed the hungry and imporve everybody's nutrition.

Midwest industries such as steel and electronics can become competitive with foreign producers if governments stop interfering in the daily operation of business, Thomas A. Murphy, chairman of the board of General Motors Corp., says.

Consumer buying decreases 1.2%

Consumer purchasing dipped 1.2 per cent in September, the first decline since the beginning of summer, the U.S. Commerce Dept. said Wednesday. The downturn was led by a 2.9 per cent drop in the sale of automotive products, mostly new and used cars. Retail sales had risen a revised 1.5 per cent in August and 0.8 per cent in July. The back-to-back increases had boosted the spirits of government economists, hopeful that consumers would show enough confidence in the economy to spend money. The September drop was the first since a 1.3 per cent decline in June, the department said.

Steel industry to tell its side

The steel industry will have its day in court Thursday when the Carter administration listens to explanations for the current crisis in the domestic steel industry. Robert Strauss, the president's special trade representative, indicated that it may be a few weeks before the task force, which will meet at the White House, will come up with "some hard facts and alternative solutions." Those problems resulted in more than 21,000 announced layoffs since early August, although most major steelmakers expect no new layoffs in the fourth quarter. Some 60,000 steelworkers whose jobs have been affected by imports are receiving federal assistance. The Senate Wednesday approved by voice vote a resolution to reaffirm support for laws that protect American industries from unfair competition, with special emphasis placed on the steel industry. U.S. steel industry executives Wednesday charged that European and Japanese producers are flooding the American market with underpriced steel and said they will ask President Carter to do something about it.

Unemployment forecast dim

In a bleak forecast on Western economies, the International Labor Organization Wednesday predicted the number of jobless in industrialized nations will reach 16 million by the end of the year. "After a brief spell of improvement in job prospects earlier this year there has been a relapse," the organization said. "Unemployment could be up one million to 16 million by the end of the year," it added.

U.S. looks good to economic world

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — On economic issues, the United States has a good image in the rest of the world. As others see us, the Carter administration has managed economic policy wisely by doing what no other nation has done—sustaining economic recovery while keeping inflation under control.

That's the picture I geet from conversations with a representative group of officials and private bankers at the joint annual meeting of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund. If Carter's popularity has suffered at home because of the Bert Lance affair, it's still strong abroad.

While Carter may get flak from congressinal critics who think his economic policies are too timid, they have a few supporters in the financial establishment in foreign countries.

The bankers liked his brief appearance at the opening session of the joint meeting.

FORMER IMF Managing Director Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, who was refused a third term in 1973 by a then hostile U.S. administration, noted as he surveyed the scene here the other day: "There is a fantastic change. The Americans are again friendly with the international institutions. That's a very welcome turnaround from the days of (former treasury secretaries) Connally and Simon."

The international financial community also is pleased that Carter, once totally unknown to them, has proved to be a moderate or conservative Democrat, rather than a liberal and a big spender.

Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal gets higher marks from the international financial set than he does in New York.

In fact, only the potentially serious U.S. trade deficit, that Blumenthal estimated could run as high as $30 billion this year, looms as a point of contention between the United States and the rest of the world. The U.S. deficit is yet anther symbol of correct American economic policy that is applauded by most other nations.

THE UNITED States helps others meet the burden of the outrageous cost of oil when it buys such a large volume of goods from the rest of the world. It is the opposite, in a way, of what the Japanese are doing — pushing their oil deficit on the rest of the world.

Stocks plunge to 22-mo. low

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks plunged Wednesday to a 22-month low in a selling stampede triggered primarily by speculation interest rates would rise sharply during the next year. Trading was active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 7.88 points Tuesday, dropped another 8.40 points to 823.98, the lowest level since its close of 821.63 on Dec. 8, 1975. The average, which had been off more than 10 points earlier in the session, is down 180.67 points so far this year.

The selling was widespread. The New York Stock Exchange Common Stock Index fell 0.52 to 51.57, its lowest since it finished at 51.41 on Jan. 16, 1976, and the average price of a share dropped 31 cents.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, fell 0.89 to 94.04, the lowest level since it finished at 93.95 on Jan. 7, 1976.

Declines routed advances, 1,254 to 250, among the 1,883 issues crossing the composite tape.

Published reports that the prime rate, now at 7½ per cent, soon will move up to 7¾ per cent and will average about 8.85 per cent in the fourth quarter of 1978 were the major force behind the heavy selling.

South plays 'H' to make

We haven't mentioned the code word ARCH for some time. "A" stands for Analyze the lead, "R" for Review the bidding, "C" for Count winners and losers and the all important "H" for How can I make my contract.

South lets West hold the first trick with his jack of hearts; wins the second in dummy and undoubtedly notes that East has dropped the queen to unblock.

If he doesn't stop to use that letter "H," he attacks diamonds. East takes his ace and knocks out South's ace of hearts. Now South counts to only eight tricks and needs a club finesse for his ninth. The finesse loses and so does South. He is down one, since West cashes two hearts.

If South counts his tricks early, he sees the needs for two club tricks and should take an immediate finesse in that suit. It loses, but since East holds the ace of diamonds, West can't get in to cash two hearts and South collects his nine tricks.

What would happen if West held both the king of clubs and ace of diamonds? No play would work and South would have to pay off.

Ask Andy

Many reasons for all those itchy allergies

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Arnese Lucks, age 11, of Vancouver, B.C., Canada, for her question:

HOW DOES AN ALLERGY DEVELOP?

Since man's earliest days he has most likely been bothered by allergies. It wasn't until the early 1900s, however, that doctors were able to understand the specific causes and characteristics of allergies. Today there is a specialized field of medicine that handles only this problem area. A doctor in this branch of medicine is called an allergist.

A allergy is simply a body reaction that takes place in a person who is sensitive to certain substances.

You can develop an allergy at any time. Most discover that first symptoms show up during childhood. About 15 percent of the population in North America today suffers from allergies that require medical assistance.

Asthma, hay fever and a year-around nasal allergy called perennial allergic rhinitis are the most common types of allergy. Allergic headaches, digestive disturbances and eczema are other types.

An allergy is caused by a substanced called an allergen. The allergens that cause most respiratory allergies can be household dust, family pets, mold spores, pollen or even dandruff. Chocolate, cow's milk, eggs, wheat and some seafoods can also trigger some allergies.

An allergy will develop when the body of an allergic person reacts to some certain allergen or allergens. Some allergens are capable of stimulating the body to produce a protein called an antibody. The allergens and the antibodies can then act together to release certain substances from the body cells into the bloodstream and other body fluids. Called H-substances, they can bring about reactions in other cells or tissues. The chief H-substance is called histamine and it can cause allergic reactions in both men and animals.

When an H-substance is released into the body it usually affects certain allergic target tissues. Most of these tissues are capillaries, mucous glands, muscles of the stomach and muscles of other organs except the heart. The location of the body tissue determines the specific allergic disease.

In general, histamine causes capillaries to enlarge, mucous glands to secrete and smooth muscles to tighten.

Such allergies as hay fever, asthma, eczema and some types of allergic headaches tend to run in families but do not seem to follow strict genetic laws. It can be said, therefore, that allergies tend to be familial rather than directly inherited.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Randy D. McCracken, age 14, of Kernersville, N.C., for his question:

WHAT IS MAN'S OLDEST WRITTEN MESSAGE?

Sometime before 3000 B.C. the Sumerians who lived in the southern part of Mesopotamia became the first people to reach the stage of primitive writing. They had symbols for items and numbers but had difficulty with writing abstract ideas.

About 3000 B.C. the Egyptians developed the word-syllabic system of writing called hieroglyphics.

Then about 1300 B.C. the Chinese began writing a highly developed form. Where the writers of the Middle East had only a few hundred word signs, the Chinese had as many as 50,000 different ones. The early Chinese even had signs for the syllables in proper names and in foreign words.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Ask Andy

Many reasons for all those itchy allergies

HOW DOES AN ALLERGY DEVELOP?

Since man's earliest days he has most likely been bothered by allergies. It wasn't until the early 1900s, however, that doctors were able to understand the specific causes and characteristics of allergies. Today there is a specialized field of medicine that handles only this problem area. A doctor in this branch of medicine is called an allergist.

A allergy is simply a body reaction that takes place in a person who is sensitive to certain substances.

You can develop an allergy at any time. Most discover that first symptoms show up during childhood. About 15 percent of the population in North America today suffers from allergies that require medical assistance.

Asthma, hay fever and a year-around nasal allergy called perennial allergic rhinitis are the most common types of allergy. Allergic headaches, digestive disturbances and eczema are other types.

An allergy is caused by a substanced called an allergen. The allergens that cause most respiratory allergies can be household dust, family pets, mold spores, pollen or even dandruff. Chocolate, cow's milk, eggs, wheat and some seafoods can also trigger some allergies.

An allergy will develop when the body of an allergic person reacts to some certain allergen or allergens. Some allergens are capable of stimulating the body to produce a protein called an antibody. The allergens and the antibodies can then act together to release certain substances from the body cells into the bloodstream and other body fluids. Called H-substances, they can bring about reactions in other cells or tissues. The chief H-substance is called histamine and it can cause allergic reactions in both men and animals.

When an H-substance is released into the body it usually affects certain allergic target tissues. Most of these tissues are capillaries, mucous glands, muscles of the stomach and muscles of other organs except the heart. The location of the body tissue determines the specific allergic disease.

In general, histamine causes capillaries to enlarge, mucous glands to secrete and smooth muscles to tighten.

Such allergies as hay fever, asthma, eczema and some types of allergic headaches tend to run in families but do not seem to follow strict genetic laws. It can be said, therefore, that allergies tend to be familial rather than directly inherited.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Randy D. McCracken, age 14, of Kernersville, N.C., for his question:

WHAT IS MAN'S OLDEST WRITTEN MESSAGE?

Sometime before 3000 B.C. the Sumerians who lived in the southern part of Mesopotamia became the first people to reach the stage of primitive writing. They had symbols for items and numbers but had difficulty with writing abstract ideas.

About 3000 B.C. the Egyptians developed the word-syllabic system of writing called hieroglyphics.

Then about 1300 B.C. the Chinese began writing a highly developed form. Where the writers of the Middle East had only a few hundred word signs, the Chinese had as many as 50,000 different ones. The early Chinese even had signs for the syllables in proper names and in foreign words.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Diet workshop— think yourself thin

"NO HOT FUDGE sundae for me," says Ms. Lois Lindauer, founder of the Diet Workshop Inc. Hot fudge may be out but a milkshake, done the diet way, is definitely in.

by JOYCE LOFSTROM

Lois Lindauer talks to herself in the shower every morning. In fact, she finds three good aspects about herself or her life to concentrate on throughout the day. And for Lois Lindauer, founder of the Diet Workshop, those private morning conversations help keep her thin.

"I went through life as a fat teen," she says, "but I pretended I was like everyone else." She considered herself an "assumed" teen-ager, but looked and dressed like the high school faculty — "No one ever asked me for a pass in the hallway," she says.

As a bride, she wore a size 16 wedding dress, dieting "fastidiously" to squeeze into the gown. But now, 40 pounds lighter and 12 years later, Lois Lindauer is living the philosophy of positive thinking.

SHE STARTED the Diet Workshop in 1965 as a result of her success in a suburban Long Island weight group. The first class began in Boston; now about 50,000 persons are enrolled in classes throughout the United States and other countries.

"We think of ourselves as the program that cares," Ms. Lindauer says. "You have to do that."

With the motto, "We Care," the Diet Workshop is a 50-50 proposition. "We give information and inspiration to members. They must return by questioning, sharing and following the diet."

Ms. Lindauer pinpoints motivation and perseverance as two necessary components for weight loss. "Losing weight means more than just shedding pounds. You have to decide to lose and to stay thin."

Any decision takes energy — whether to be fat or to diet. "And if you spend the energy on negative activities, you don't have time to concentrate on the positive."

MS. LINDAUER admits her theory alludes to the philosophy of Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, but the power of positive thinking and action has found its way into the Diet Workshop with behavior modification as one of the four diet components.

Behaviorists or psychologists practicing the behavior modification theory of psychology believe what a person does is determined by situations. When the situation is repeated, so is the behavior.

For the dieter, watching television or a difficult day at work often leads to thoughts of food. "Food is company," Ms. Lindauer says. But with behavior modification, persons become more aware of what they are doing and finding ways to control it. "It's as important as the diet itself."

Members of the Diet Workshop follow a 1200-calorie diet plan and perform a series of sit-down exercises during the weekly meeting. Participants who reach their goal weight follow a four-week maintenance program and then become lifetime members or graduates of the workshop.

"ONE OF THE reasons the program has been successful is because the person in the front of the room has had a weight loss experience," Ms. Lindauer says. All group leaders have lost weight through the workshop or other plans. During the training period, they receive instruction on nutrition and working with groups.

Dr. Morton B. Glenn, a former nutrition consultant to the United Nations and past president of the American College of Nutrition, has worked as the workshop consultant since 1968.

Planning can be the dieter's best ammunition both for losing weight and maintaining the loss.

Ms. Lindauer says, "Set yourself up for success." If the refrigerator is the first target once in the door, leave notes around the house. "There may be notes everywhere," she says, as reminders for when and where not to eat.

"I know I can fail so I don't test myself," she says. As a result, candy, cakes, cookies and nuts do not appear in the Lindauer family's Boston apartment. But temptation is as old as Adam and Eve and even a dieter's family sometimes enjoy samples of the forbidden fruits. Nevertheless, family members weigh on a regular basis with Lois checking the scales daily.

WHEN NOT AT HOME, Ms. Lindauer is visiting Diet Workshop franchises, writing books or lecturing. And anyone on the go, even the skinnies of the world, has experienced frustrations when dining out.

Restaurants have forgotten they are a service industry, Ms. Lindauer says. She suggests fresh vegetables instead of rolls as before dinner appetizers, meat portion control with sizes suited to appetites, more fresh fruits and vegetables and low-calorie dressings.

Some think of diet as a four-letter word that brings visions of starvation, fasting or egg and grapefruit meals. But for Lois Lindauer, diet means positive thinking, balanced eating and a set of scales. She recently moved her hospital-type scales from a 10-room home to her apartment. It was a hard decision to make because of space she says. "But they'll always be there."

Crash diets dangerous to teens

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Most suburban teen-agers are vigorous, healthy and naturally slender.

A few really are fat. For their own health and self-esteem, these youngsters should lose weight. But it should be done slowly, permanently with a physician's help, say health professionals who deal with teens. Otherwise they may harm their developing bodies.

Then there are those adolescent girls who are convinced they are too heavy but in reality are just right. They think they should resemble models or movie stars regardless of inherited shapes. Or perhaps they want to please or attract a boyfriend, or get a critical mother off their backs.

"We have five or six such girls every year," said Nancy Dallia, physical education and health teacher for 22 years and now resource teacher at Prospect High School.

BOTH MS. DALLIA and Mrs. Barbara Palmberg, school nurse, advise these girls as well as overweight students at Prospect.

Some young women weigh exactly what they should for their height and bone structure, said Mrs. Palmberg, but they're still prone to fad and yo-yo dieting — and to the dangers and disappointments of unsupervised fast weight reduction. Weight doesn't stay off and such dieting habits may last a lifetime with resultant poor nutrition.

Yo-yo dieting can trigger serious health problems, including temporary or prolonged cessation of menstrual periods in young females. And even extreme — but not rare — hysterical aversion to food (anorexia nervosa), noted Dr. Leigh Rosenblum, Park Ridge internist and vice president of medical services at Lutheran General Hospital.

Dr. Rosenblum is adamant against fad diets.

"I am against all fad dieting. Fast weight losses cause metabolic changes. All the glands change," he explained. Rather than trying new and different diets, "Change your eating habits!" he advised.

The right eating habits begin in childhood, said Mrs. Frances Johnston, dietitian at Northwest Community Hospital. Children need well-balanced meals consisting of the four basic good groups, she said.

"Young mothers should realize children often don't like certain foods, but they should serve them anyway. Don't give up! Educate those kids," she said.

And what if youngsters know what they should eat for good health, but go out with friends to eat junk foods? Don't worry.

"There's nothing wrong with MacDonald's hamburgers, it's good beef, or with pizza and sugar-free pop, for example. Enjoy it! Just don't live on it!" suggested Mrs. Johnston.

Mrs. Joy Herlehy, clinical nurse specialist who works with teens at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, agrees.

"An occasional binge in junk foods not only won't hurt kids, but actually may be good for them," she said.

Her reasoning? Teens need peer support.

CRASH DIETING she considers "stupid." Injudicious dieting and poor nutrition in teen-age years may cause health problems later, Mrs. Herlehy said including low hemoglobin and fatigue in future pregnancies, other blood problems, gastro-intestinal trouble and retarded growth.

And when weight is lost too quickly, she added, the first five pounds to go normally are water. If fast weight loss continues, important body elements are lost including protein, a basic food substance.

"Proteins are needed in the repair of body tissue. The body won't heal as fast without them," she said.

Health professionals agree that losing weight slowly is the only safe way.

WEIGHT CHARTS are helpful when interpreted correctly, but adolescents often can't determine their right weight, said Mrs. Herlehy.

A young girl, especially, will chose the lowest weight for her height despite her bone size, for example.

To be on the safe side — and in the long run to save money — teens should see their family doctor, she said. "Explain why and where you want to lose, and let the doctor determine the safe way to do it."

What about diet pills or commercial diet plans to lose weight?

Supervised weight loss programs with balanced nutrition and those providing emotional support like Weight Watchers can be helpful for some teens. But peer pressure, parental support, team efforts (school nurses, physicial education teachers, counselors and dietitians) at school are working well, said Barbara Palmberg and Nancy Dallia, who are part of such a team.

DIET PILLS AREN'T much good, and those with amphetamine are dangerous.

"Over-the-counter diet pills often seen advertised are not curative like penicillin," said Keith Campagna, professor of pharmacy at University of Illinois Medical Center in Chicago.

Such pills contain a mild diuretic (an agent causing greater quantities of urine to be passed) no more effective than caffeine. Some contain antihistamines, which suppress the appetite a little, he explained.

"Save money and grief and don't take drugs. Increase your exercise and self control — and keep occupied," Campagna advised.

Some boys are overweight, too, and Barbara Palmberg helps monitor their blood pressure when necessary, she said. She also is aware that some athletes follow conditioning procedures.

Wrestlers may go on crash diets to reach a certain weight class, for example, she said.

Rapid weight loss may cause muscle weakness, so athletes could be defeating their purpose — as do their female classmates when they lose weight too fast.

Deaf scientist tours to dispel stereotypes

A deaf physicist soon will set out on a nationwide tour to dispel some of the myths about handicapped persons and help break down educational barriers facing deaf, blind and crippled children.

Robert Menchel will serve as an example of hundreds of handicapped persons who have surmounted manmade obstacles to carve out successful careers in science.

"There are so many stereotyped ideas about what the handicapped person cannot do, rather than what they can do," Menchel said. "I'm going to try and change those ideas.

"SCIENCE has offered me a very good career, but I have had to overcome one barrier after another when people would say you can't do this, you can't go to high school, you can't go to college, you can't take that course.

"What he will be doing is going out and telling the children that they can do this, that there is no reason why they can't do it."

Menchel, who lost his hearing at the age of 7, is a senior physicist for the Xerox Corp. in Penfield, N.Y. He will go on leave with full pay for a year to speak to handicapped children and their teachers, counselors and parents in a program sponsored by the American Assn. for the Advancement of Science.

Although Menchel's itinerary is not completed, he hopes to visit at least 26 states.

"HANDICAPPED people suffer most, not because of the physical infirmities that they may have, but because of the reduced expectation that society has of them," said Cheryl Davis, a paraplegic, who works for the association.

"Handicapped people provide a real potential and a very much untapped human resource," she said. "There is so much talent there that is going to waste. It's terribly important to widen the opportunities for handicapped persons."

New federal regulations require handicapped children to be educated within the mainstream of public schools to the greatest extent possible. They also require all institutions that accept federal aid to make their facilities accessible to the disabled.

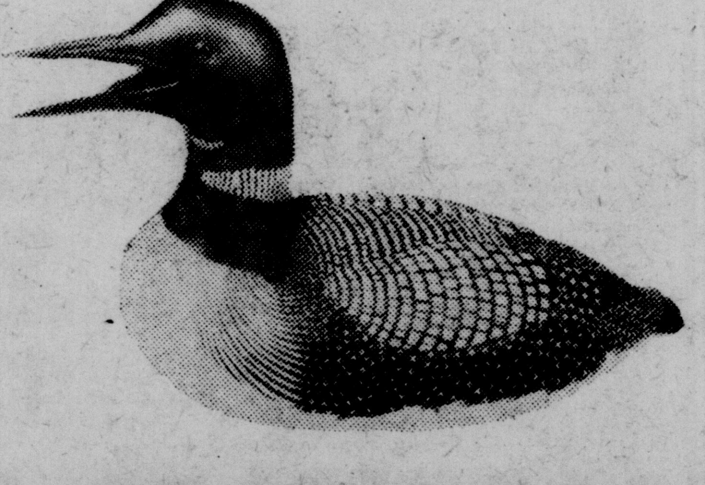
Decoy exhibit at Countryside Mall glorifies fowl

I have had two encounters involving loons, one pleasant, one not so. I was visiting Nancy, who lives part of the year in a remote neck of the woods in northern Wisconsin, when one long-shadowed twilight I saw and heard the loon across the still surface of the lake. The sight and sound was haunting and lonely, but beautiful.

The second encounter was a near-disaster. Nancy had found a loon egg in an abandoned nest in autumn, discarded because it had failed to hatch, and she brought it into the cottage for the children to examine. It lay on the kitchen counter, and I touched the olive brown speckled egg, about the size of a goose egg, with a tentative finger. The egg exploded all over the kitchen with an aroma which can best be compared to Essence of Midnight in a Sewer. I spent a lot of time cleaning up the mess.

Now I have a healthy respect for loons and their eggs. So does a small group of naturalists and wood carvers that enjoys the challenge of sculpting in wood the beauty and mystique of the loon. And not only loons, but all waterfowl and shorebirds.



THESE ARE surely and honestly American folk art of the highest form, beginning with the crude, primitive shapes made by early Indian tribes and carried on today. One of these master carvers is Joe Wooster from Ashley, Ohio, who has earned more than 2,000 awards in the past two decades. He is known especially for his loon carvings and his admiration of this bird is intense. As he puts it, "Loons have no desire to team up with man; they are loners, proud and aloof inhabitants of their waters."

You can see these decoys, both decorative and service or "working" classes of carvings, at the first annual Decoy and Contemporary Carving Exhibit at Countryside Mall in Palatine on Saturday and Sunday.

Interested craftsmen are welcome to demonstrate their techniques at the show. In addition, there will be a contest for junior amateurs, 18 years and under, in two divisions: floating working class decoys and novice decorative decoys. Ribbons will be awarded.

THE EVENT promises to be an exciting one for anyone interested in selling, showing or trading decoys and for those who appreciate the craftsmanship of decoy carving.

Demonstrations of the art will be continuous, by well known carvers including Wooster. Related items will include folding "paper" birds, antique decoys and metal shore birds.

Diet workshop— think yourself thin

"NO HOT FUDGE sundae for me," says Ms. Lois Lindauer, founder of the Diet Workshop Inc. Hot fudge may be out but a milkshake, done the diet way, is definitely in.

by JOYCE LOFSTROM

Lois Lindauer talks to herself in the shower every morning. In fact, she finds three good aspects about herself or her life to concentrate on throughout the day. And for Lois Lindauer, founder of the Diet Workshop, those private morning conversations help keep her thin.

"I went through life as a fat teen," she says, "but I pretended I was like everyone else." She considered herself an "assumed" teen-ager, but looked and dressed like the high school faculty — "No one ever asked me for a pass in the hallway," she says.

As a bride, she wore a size 16 wedding dress, dieting "fastidiously" to squeeze into the gown. But now, 40 pounds lighter and 12 years later, Lois Lindauer is living the philosophy of positive thinking.

SHE STARTED the Diet Workshop in 1965 as a result of her success in a suburban Long Island weight group. The first class began in Boston; now about 50,000 persons are enrolled in classes throughout the United States and other countries.

"We think of ourselves as the program that cares," Ms. Lindauer says. "You have to do that."

With the motto, "We Care," the Diet Workshop is a 50-50 proposition. "We give information and inspiration to members. They must return by questioning, sharing and following the diet."

Ms. Lindauer pinpoints motivation and perseverance as two necessary components for weight loss. "Losing weight means more than just shedding pounds. You have to decide to lose and to stay thin."

Any decision takes energy — whether to be fat or to diet. "And if you spend the energy on negative activities, you don't have time to concentrate on the positive."

MS. LINDAUER admits her theory alludes to the philosophy of Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, but the power of positive thinking and action has found its way into the Diet Workshop with behavior modification as one of the four diet components.

Behaviorists or psychologists practicing the behavior modification theory of psychology believe what a person does is determined by situations. When the situation is repeated, so is the behavior.

For the dieter, watching television or a difficult day at work often leads to thoughts of food. "Food is company," Ms. Lindauer says. But with behavior modification, persons become more aware of what they are doing and finding ways to control it. "It's as important as the diet itself."

Members of the Diet Workshop follow a 1200-calorie diet plan and perform a series of sit-down exercises during the weekly meeting. Participants who reach their goal weight follow a four-week maintenance program and then become lifetime members or graduates of the workshop.

"ONE OF THE reasons the program has been successful is because the person in the front of the room has had a weight loss experience," Ms. Lindauer says. All group leaders have lost weight through the workshop or other plans. During the training period, they receive instruction on nutrition and working with groups.

Dr. Morton B. Glenn, a former nutrition consultant to the United Nations and past president of the American College of Nutrition, has worked as the workshop consultant since 1968.

Planning can be the dieter's best ammunition both for losing weight and maintaining the loss.

Ms. Lindauer says, "Set yourself up for success." If the refrigerator is the first target once in the door, leave notes around the house. "There may be notes everywhere," she says, as reminders for when and where not to eat.

"I know I can fail so I don't test myself," she says. As a result, candy, cakes, cookies and nuts do not appear in the Lindauer family's Boston apartment. But temptation is as old as Adam and Eve and even a dieter's family sometimes enjoy samples of the forbidden fruits. Nevertheless, family members weigh on a regular basis with Lois checking the scales daily.

WHEN NOT AT HOME, Ms. Lindauer is visiting Diet Workshop franchises, writing books or lecturing. And anyone on the go, even the skinnies of the world, has experienced frustrations when dining out.

Restaurants have forgotten they are a service industry, Ms. Lindauer says. She suggests fresh vegetables instead of rolls as before dinner appetizers, meat portion control with sizes suited to appetites, more fresh fruits and vegetables and low-calorie dressings.

Some think of diet as a four-letter word that brings visions of starvation, fasting or egg and grapefruit meals. But for Lois Lindauer, diet means positive thinking, balanced eating and a set of scales. She recently moved her hospital-type scales from a 10-room home to her apartment. It was a hard decision to make because of space she says. "But they'll always be there."

Crash diets dangerous to teens

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Most suburban teen-agers are vigorous, healthy and naturally slender.

A few really are fat. For their own health and self-esteem, these youngsters should lose weight. But it should be done slowly, permanently with a physician's help, say health professionals who deal with teens. Otherwise they may harm their developing bodies.

Then there are those adolescent girls who are convinced they are too heavy but in reality are just right. They think they should resemble models or movie stars regardless of inherited shapes. Or perhaps they want to please or attract a boyfriend, or get a critical mother off their backs.

"We have five or six such girls every year," said Nancy Dallia, physical education and health teacher for 22 years and now resource teacher at Prospect High School.

BOTH MS. DALLIA and Mrs. Barbara Palmberg, school nurse, advise these girls as well as overweight students at Prospect.

Some young women weigh exactly what they should for their height and bone structure, said Mrs. Palmberg, but they're still prone to fad and yo-yo dieting — and to the dangers and disappointments of unsupervised fast weight reduction. Weight doesn't stay off and such dieting habits may last a lifetime with resultant poor nutrition.

Yo-yo dieting can trigger serious health problems, including temporary or prolonged cessation of menstrual periods in young females. And even extreme — but not rare — hysterical aversion to food (anorexia nervosa), noted Dr. Leigh Rosenblum, Park Ridge internist and vice president of medical services at Lutheran General Hospital.

Dr. Rosenblum is adamant against fad diets.

"I am against all fad dieting. Fast weight losses cause metabolic changes. All the glands change," he explained. Rather than trying new and different diets, "Change your eating habits!" he advised.

The right eating habits begin in childhood, said Mrs. Frances Johnston, dietitian at Northwest Community Hospital. Children need well-balanced meals consisting of the four basic good groups, she said.

"Young mothers should realize children often don't like certain foods, but they should serve them anyway. Don't give up! Educate those kids," she said.

And what if youngsters know what they should eat for good health, but go out with friends to eat junk foods? Don't worry.

"There's nothing wrong with MacDonald's hamburgers, it's good beef, or with pizza and sugar-free pop, for example. Enjoy it! Just don't live on it!" suggested Mrs. Johnston.

Mrs. Joy Herlehy, clinical nurse specialist who works with teens at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, agrees.

"An occasional binge in junk foods not only won't hurt kids, but actually may be good for them," she said.

Her reasoning? Teens need peer support.

CRASH DIETING she considers "stupid." Injudicious dieting and poor nutrition in teen-age years may cause health problems later, Mrs. Herlehy said including low hemoglobin and fatigue in future pregnancies, other blood problems, gastro-intestinal trouble and retarded growth.

And when weight is lost too quickly, she added, the first five pounds to go normally are water. If fast weight loss continues, important body elements are lost including protein, a basic food substance.

"Proteins are needed in the repair of body tissue. The body won't heal as fast without them," she said.

Health professionals agree that losing weight slowly is the only safe way.

WEIGHT CHARTS are helpful when interpreted correctly, but adolescents often can't determine their right weight, said Mrs. Herlehy.

A young girl, especially, will chose the lowest weight for her height despite her bone size, for example.

To be on the safe side — and in the long run to save money — teens should see their family doctor, she said. "Explain why and where you want to lose, and let the doctor determine the safe way to do it."

What about diet pills or commercial diet plans to lose weight?

Supervised weight loss programs with balanced nutrition and those providing emotional support like Weight Watchers can be helpful for some teens. But peer pressure, parental support, team efforts (school nurses, physicial education teachers, counselors and dietitians) at school are working well, said Barbara Palmberg and Nancy Dallia, who are part of such a team.

DIET PILLS AREN'T much good, and those with amphetamine are dangerous.

"Over-the-counter diet pills often seen advertised are not curative like penicillin," said Keith Campagna, professor of pharmacy at University of Illinois Medical Center in Chicago.

Such pills contain a mild diuretic (an agent causing greater quantities of urine to be passed) no more effective than caffeine. Some contain antihistamines, which suppress the appetite a little, he explained.

"Save money and grief and don't take drugs. Increase your exercise and self control — and keep occupied," Campagna advised.

Some boys are overweight, too, and Barbara Palmberg helps monitor their blood pressure when necessary, she said. She also is aware that some athletes follow conditioning procedures.

Wrestlers may go on crash diets to reach a certain weight class, for example, she said.

Rapid weight loss may cause muscle weakness, so athletes could be defeating their purpose — as do their female classmates when they lose weight too fast.

The doctor says

Chronic gastritis is often difficult to heal

My husband has been under a doctor's care for over two months for chronic gastritis. He is on a bland diet and he takes a white pill four times a day.

He is getting no better and has pains all the time. Could you explain what gastritis is? He stays on a diet but he is losing weight. He was 167 and is now 154.

Always remember that "itis" means inflammation. Gastritis, then, means inflammation of the stomach. The lining may show areas of increased redness and erosion and small hemorrhagic spots.

Gastritis may be an acute self-limited disease as may occur with some forms of food poisoning or after alcohol ingestion. These are best treated with a bland diet such as Jell-O, milk, puddings and such foods with no starches and, of course, avoiding the factor that caused it, such as alcohol.

Acute gastritis from food poisoning is usually caused by some bacteria. The duration of the illness is short and the bland diet plus measures to support the patient, such as fluids if needed, are given temporarily.

Chronic gastritis is a bit more difficult. The condition persists and may or may not cause pain. It, too, is treated by a bland diet and sometimes antacids and medicines to prevent the formation of acid digestive juices.

There are many causes for gastritis, including underlying liver disease. An offending agent may cause the inflammation by direct contact inside the stomach or by way of the blood stream after it is absorbed. Authorities do not agree whether alcohol causes gastritis by dissolving the protective layer over the stomach lining or by way of the blood stream. Aspirin has a direct action on the lining. The combination of alcohol and aspirin is particularly apt to cause irritation and acute gastritis.

I am sorry to say the treatment of chronic gastritis is a great deal more difficult than treatment of acute gastritis. Other than the bland diet and measures to neutralize the acid formed by the stomach there is a limited number of things that can be done. You have to let nature gradually heal the condition. Of course, avoiding alcohol, aspirin and following a proper diet are musts in such cases. The proper diet means also eliminating all coffee in all forms, tea, colas, cocoa and chocolate.

A medicine with hormonal type action (dexamethasone) is sometimes used and that may be what your husband's doctor is giving your husband.

Cigarets should also be eliminated.

Reader sees the tricks of Halloween treats

Dear Roberta: Seeing the candy displays in the grocery and drug store reminds me of one of my pet peeves: "trick or treat" candy on Halloween. I agree with you, Mrs. Bush. But, after all, it's up to parents to see to it that their kids don't gorge themselves with Halloween candy.

Dear Roberta: Is salting the water to stop boiling eggs from cracking just an old wives' tale? It doesn't work for me. —Deborah Ungar

Salt helps most when you start out eggs in cold water. If you slip them into boiling water, you ought to prick a small hole in the large end of each egg first. My mother kept a pin in the curtain over the sink for eggs. Those less sure of hand can, like me, use an "egg piercer" (found in a department store housewares department). This method also works for eggs begun in cold water, of course.

Nosy mother an irritation

Dear Marian,

Today was the last straw. I can't take my mother any more. I was talking on the phone to one of my friends about the day's plans. After I got off the phone, my nosy mother started asking me questions about a girl we were talking about. I had to tell her or she would get mad at me. I was so mad I stormed out of the house and went about my business. What can I do?

Sometimes during the day, for no reason at all, my nosy mother comes into my room without knocking and asks me what I'm doing. I need my privacy, but I don't have it with her around. If I leave a note that says I'm busy a certain day, she asks me what I'm doing that day.

I can't tell her she is nosy because my sisters told her that and they were gounded for a week. How can I tell her to keep out of my room and phone conversations? I know she is concerned, but this is too far!

Nosed Out

Dear Nosed,

You aren't really definite in your complaints so it is hard to answer you. I will say this, however. If your mother listens in on your phone conversations, that is, picks up the extension phone, or goes through your mail and possessions, or gives you a real grilling on whom you are talking about, yes, she is too nosy and you should sit down and have a quiet talk with her without losing your temper and explain to her how you feel.

However, if she wants to know where you are going and with whom, and a little bit about your friends and your life, she is just doing her job as a good parent. Remember, she spent your whole life taking care of you and loving you and she can't turn it off just because you have reached the age where you feel the need for more independence.

Dear Marian,

I know school is just starting, but it seems all my teachers are on my case. I told my chemistry teacher I thought he made a miskate and he threw me out of the room. Take my English teacher, please, she's driving me up the wall. It seems like overnight she went from Dr. Jekyll to Mr. Hyde.

Get Off My Case

Dear Case,

If you are having trouble with all of your teachers, I think your problem might be your attitude. When you point out what you think is a mistake, are you polite about or do you act as if you think the teacher is a moron? Think over your attitudes and actions in the classroom and perhaps you will realize that you've been bugging them as much as they've been bugging you.

• • •

If you have a problem, a question or just want someone to listen, write to Marian in care of Suburban Living, The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Only first names or initials will be used. Marian reserves the right to condense letters.

Drama series heading for 2nd season

When her critics were insisting that original television drama by unknown American writers would never work, Barbara Schultz wasn't listening.

A stonewall of skepticism wasn't about to keep the former executive producer of "CBS Playhouse" from injecting television drama with a new daring and vitality.

She did it without big name actors or writers, she did it on public television without sure-footed support from big sponsors; she did it as a weekly series simply titled "Visions."

Much to Ms. Schultz and her critics' surprise, the series is headed into its second season at 10:30 p.m. Friday on Channel 11 with nine nominations from the Television Critics Circle and a prestigius Peabody Award for distinguished service in radio and TV.

ALTHOUGH THE SECOND season is a triumphant return for the series, Ms. Schultz says the struggle is not yet over.

"The struggle continues in a funny way. This season we have the best written material we've ever had, and yet, I think young writers are only begining to realize the possibilities we have. We have only begun to encourage writers to try their hand at television and have only begun to build up a corps of serious writers for the medium," she said.

Ms. Schultz has received more than 3,000 unsolicited scripts for "Visions" during the past year. Many of them are good, only a handful have been used, and more of them, she hopes, will include comedy as well as serious drama.

The enthusiastic response from writers has helped Ms. Schultz continue her dream of creating a genuinely American outlet for good television drama without having to rely on British television.

"THE SHOWS LIKE 'CBS Playhouse' of the 1960s only used established playwrights and actors. Other than that, all of the good, long-form drama on television has been strictly an English contribution. I wanted the unknown Americans to give it a try," she said.

The try was not only successful, but it was curiously drenched in an often deep and sometimes depressing look at the American condition. Last season's stories frequently dealt with alienation and they always appealed to the deepest of human emotions.

This season of 17 weeks will be no different for "Visions" which premieres with Murray Mednick's first play for television, "Iowa."

A fiercely independent grandmother in a nursing home against her will, a prodigal daughter returning home after suffering a nervous breakdown, a second daughter who is restless to explore new worlds and the middle-aged parents, torn by guilt and argument, reunite in the family's Southern California home.

A COOL REUNION, swelling with mixed emotion, slowly gives way to the spontaneous weaving of memories and the eventual burst of uninhibited feelings.

It is the kind of story in which you may see a reflection of your inner self and the secret carings and conflicts of your own family.

In its new season, "Visions" will explore everything from an Eskimo hunter's adventure to the troubles of an illegal alien in California.

Bethel Leslie stars as the mother in 'Iowa.'

One-time unknown television writers like Elizabeth Clark, who wrote last season's drama "All I Could See From Where I Stood" and Conrad Bromberg who authored last season's "Two Brothers" episode of "Visions," will graduate to writing scripts for commercial television.

And hopefully, after the second season, "Visions" will become a staple on public television.

BUT THAT HOPE is somewhat in doubt. The National Endowment for the Arts and the Ford Foundation have largely financed the "Visions" series to date, but without financial support from individual public broadcasting stations in the third season, "Visions" may be canceled.

The lack of a reoccurring storyline and characters, and an element of newness and unpredictability each week seems to pose a risk for large sponsoring corporations who "are afraid to involve themselves in the series," Ms. Schultz said.

But, with any kind of luck, sponsoring corporations and appreciative viewers won't hesitate to express their support for the worthwhile drama "Visions" brings to weekly television by making an effort to see it stays right where it belongs.

TV NOTES:

- A little back tracking is in order. Monday night's National Football League game in Chicago between the Bears and the Los Angeles Rams was indeed exciting football. It was also a perfect example of network cameramen obsessed with the low cleavage and short pants of the Honey Bears. Those attractive but overgrown cheerleaders were on camera almost as much as the players. ABC turned a professional football confrontation into a girly show under the lights and turned a lot of viewers off.
- Channel 7's redesigned news set of natural wood is smart and sophisticated but, somehow, didn't preclude John Culea Monday night from presenting a report on night harness racing in rhyme. The set may change, but the station's still got that "let us entertain you" format.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

- A change in programming on ABC this week because of the World Series includes tonight's airing of "Three's Company" at 8 p.m., "Redd Foxx" at 8:30 p.m. and "Soap" at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 7.
- Flannery O'Connor's "The Displaced Person" at 9 p.m. on Channel 11 is about a Polish refugee who struggles with a new lifestyle on a Southern farm.

Vaughn is convincing but 'F.D.R.' lacks depth

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Review/theater

If science or the supernatural somehow provided the opportunity, who among us would not jump at the chance to see Franklin Delano Roosevelt deliver a fireside chat in person?

Robert Vaughn has, with a wheelchair, a cigarette holder and a big chin, created the closest thing to Roosevelt we are ever likely to see, in a new one-man show, "FDR," which opened Tuesday at The Studebaker.

It is a mild thrill to sit back and pretend this is in fact the man who led our country through depression and world war. Vaughn's cheery likeness to F.D.R. makes it easy for us to suspend our disbelief: his gestures are sure, and he delivers the lines with appropriate authority. Even his chin juts at the correct angle.

But the portrait that emerges is merely convincing, and far from illuminating. For those who more than 30 years later still hold a strong love for Roosevelt, this historical phantasm is enough. Just to reminisce about one of the greatest leaders we ever had is no small joy.

If President Roosevelt were truly to be resurrected for an evening, however, he would not doubt have a great deal more to tell us — not only about his times, but about his self — than we learn from "FDR."

The problem lies in the script. Author Dore Schary had more luck with "Sunrise at Campobello," the story of Franklin Roosevelt's early struggle with polio and his eventual personal victory when he decides to rejoin the human race and run for governor of New York.

Schary's current play is less dramatically appealing, perhaps because it concentrates on the less common struggle of leading a nation through hard times.

Schary apparently felt the necessity to sketch a background to Roosevelt's presidential years, and he begins with a brief gloss over Franklin's early troubles. Schary never stops glossing, however, and seems hesitant to come to terms with any one moment in Roosevelt's life, or with any one aspect of his character.

A good example is the scene where the president first hears the news about Pearl Harbor. Schary, unabashed Roosevelt-lover that he is, completely dismisses the vicious rumor that the president had any prior knowledge of the attack. But he fails to give Vaughn enough material to work with, he fails to set the scene completely, and the horror of Vaughn's reaction to the news ends up lacking depth.

Roosevelt served as a reminder that greatness strikes in the most unlikely places — even the upper class. "FDR" gives little clue to why greatness struck so strongly here, or how, once it did, it affected the man behind the pince-nez.

MATCHMAKER Etel Billig, left, tells Golde, played by Dolores Rothenberger,that she has found a perfect match for her eldest daughter in "Fiddler on the Roof" now playing at Candlelight Dinner Playhouse, Summit. Ticket reservations 458-7373.

Ask these pharmacists why they recommend NaturSlim... ...and use it themselves!

Pharmacist Dick Wieser, owner of the Skyline Plaza Pharmacy in Daly City, California expresses his opinion on the NaturSlim Weight Control Program: "As a pharmacist for over 23 years, I have seen many weight loss products come and go. None, have ever produced the interest and results that NaturSlim has."

..."I have the responsibility to provide my customers with the very best products—NaturSlim is! I would recommend NaturSlim to anyone with a minimum amount of will power. It's the easiest and safest way to lose weight that I know of today!"

Pharmacist Dan Smith of Burger's Drug Store in St. Charles, Illinois is a NaturSlim "believer" after losing 18 pounds in just two weeks. After hearing so much about the NaturSlim program from customers and seeing the excellemt results they were having, Dan decided to try it himself.

"In my many years as a pharmacist, I've seen and tried numerous weight-loss plans, but none have worked as well for me as NaturSlim. And NaturSlim is very nutritional too!"

After three months, Dan has not regained any of the lost pounds either, as so often happens when "rebounding" from starvation diet plans. He maintains his weight by taking NaturSlim once daily... and eating normally otherwise.

Dan says, "It was surprisingly easy, too! I didn't have to attend any weigh-ins, starve myself or do any special exercises." With the NaturSlim program, there are no shots, drugs or long lists of forbidden foods. In fact, you are encouraged to eat a normal, well-balanced dinner every day. The next time you are in the St. Charles area, stop by Burger Drugs and see Dan yourself. He'll tell you personally about NaturSlim!

Diane Mermigas

Drama series heading for 2nd season

When her critics were insisting that original television drama by unknown American writers would never work, Barbara Schultz wasn't listening.

A stonewall of skepticism wasn't about to keep the former executive producer of "CBS Playhouse" from injecting television drama with a new daring and vitality.

She did it without big name actors or writers, she did it on public television without sure-footed support from big sponsors; she did it as a weekly series simply titled "Visions."

Much to Ms. Schultz and her critics' surprise, the series is headed into its second season at 10:30 p.m. Friday on Channel 11 with nine nominations from the Television Critics Circle and a prestigius Peabody Award for distinguished service in radio and TV.

ALTHOUGH THE SECOND season is a triumphant return for the series, Ms. Schultz says the struggle is not yet over.

"The struggle continues in a funny way. This season we have the best written material we've ever had, and yet, I think young writers are only begining to realize the possibilities we have. We have only begun to encourage writers to try their hand at television and have only begun to build up a corps of serious writers for the medium," she said.

Ms. Schultz has received more than 3,000 unsolicited scripts for "Visions" during the past year. Many of them are good, only a handful have been used, and more of them, she hopes, will include comedy as well as serious drama.

The enthusiastic response from writers has helped Ms. Schultz continue her dream of creating a genuinely American outlet for good television drama without having to rely on British television.

"THE SHOWS LIKE 'CBS Playhouse' of the 1960s only used established playwrights and actors. Other than that, all of the good, long-form drama on television has been strictly an English contribution. I wanted the unknown Americans to give it a try," she said.

The try was not only successful, but it was curiously drenched in an often deep and sometimes depressing look at the American condition. Last season's stories frequently dealt with alienation and they always appealed to the deepest of human emotions.

This season of 17 weeks will be no different for "Visions" which premieres with Murray Mednick's first play for television, "Iowa."

A fiercely independent grandmother in a nursing home against her will, a prodigal daughter returning home after suffering a nervous breakdown, a second daughter who is restless to explore new worlds and the middle-aged parents, torn by guilt and argument, reunite in the family's Southern California home.

A COOL REUNION, swelling with mixed emotion, slowly gives way to the spontaneous weaving of memories and the eventual burst of uninhibited feelings.

It is the kind of story in which you may see a reflection of your inner self and the secret carings and conflicts of your own family.

In its new season, "Visions" will explore everything from an Eskimo hunter's adventure to the troubles of an illegal alien in California.

One-time unknown television writers like Elizabeth Clark, who wrote last season's drama "All I Could See From Where I Stood" and Conrad Bromberg who authored last season's "Two Brothers" episode of "Visions," will graduate to writing scripts for commercial television.

Bethel Leslie stars as the mother in 'Iowa.'

And hopefully, after the second season, "Visions" will become a staple on public television.

BUT THAT HOPE is somewhat in doubt. The National Endowment for the Arts and the Ford Foundation have largely financed the "Visions" series to date, but without financial support from individual public broadcasting stations in the third season, "Visions" may be canceled.

The lack of a reoccurring storyline and characters, and an element of newness and unpredictability each week seems to pose a risk for large sponsoring corporations who "are afraid to involve themselves in the series," Ms. Schultz said.

But, with any kind of luck, sponsoring corporations and appreciative viewers won't hesitate to express their support for the worthwhile drama "Visions" brings to weekly television by making an effort to see it stays right where it belongs.

TV NOTES:

- A little back tracking is in order. Monday night's National Football League game in Chicago between the Bears and the Los Angeles Rams was indeed exciting football. It was also a perfect example of network cameramen obsessed with the low cleavage and short pants of the Honey Bears. Those attractive but overgrown cheerleaders were on camera almost as much as the players. ABC turned a professional football confrontation into a girly show under the lights and turned a lot of viewers off.
- Channel 7's redesigned news set of natural wood is smart and sophisticated but, somehow, didn't preclude John Culea Monday night from presenting a report on night harness racing in rhyme. The set may change, but the station's still got that "let us entertain you" format.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

- A change in programming on ABC this week because of the World Series includes tonight's airing of "Three's Company" at 8 p.m., "Redd Foxx" at 8:30 p.m. and "Soap" at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 7.
- Flannery O'Connor's "The Displaced Person" at 9 p.m. on Channel 11 is about a Polish refugee who struggles with a new lifestyle on a Southern farm.

Vaughn is convincing but 'F.D.R.' lacks depth

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Review/theater

If science or the supernatural somehow provided the opportunity, who among us would not jump at the chance to see Franklin Delano Roosevelt deliver a fireside chat in person?

Robert Vaughn has, with a wheelchair, a cigarette holder and a big chin, created the closest thing to Roosevelt we are ever likely to see, in a new one-man show, "FDR," which opened Tuesday at The Studebaker.

It is a mild thrill to sit back and pretend this is in fact the man who led our country through depression and world war. Vaughn's cheery likeness to F.D.R. makes it easy for us to suspend our disbelief: his gestures are sure, and he delivers the lines with appropriate authority. Even his chin juts at the correct angle.

But the portrait that emerges is merely convincing, and far from illuminating. For those who more than 30 years later still hold a strong love for Roosevelt, this historical phantasm is enough. Just to reminisce about one of the greatest leaders we ever had is no small joy.

If President Roosevelt were truly to be resurrected for an evening, however, he would not doubt have a great deal more to tell us — not only about his times, but about his self — than we learn from "FDR."

The problem lies in the script. Author Dore Schary had more luck with "Sunrise at Campobello," the story of Franklin Roosevelt's early struggle with polio and his eventual personal victory when he decides to rejoin the human race and run for governor of New York.

Schary's current play is less dramatically appealing, perhaps because it concentrates on the less common struggle of leading a nation through hard times.

Schary apparently felt the necessity to sketch a background to Roosevelt's presidential years, and he begins with a brief gloss over Franklin's early troubles. Schary never stops glossing, however, and seems hesitant to come to terms with any one moment in Roosevelt's life, or with any one aspect of his character.

A good example is the scene where the president first hears the news about Pearl Harbor. Schary, unabashed Roosevelt-lover that he is, completely dismisses the vicious rumor that the president had any prior knowledge of the attack. But he fails to give Vaughn enough material to work with, he fails to set the scene completely, and the horror of Vaughn's reaction to the news ends up lacking depth.

Roosevelt served as a reminder that greatness strikes in the most unlikely places — even the upper class. "FDR" gives little clue to why greatness struck so strongly here, or how, once it did, it affected the man behind the pince-nez.

Hearty meals by the bowlful

Favorite foods change with the seasons as cooler autumn weather brings yearnings for hearty and warming meals, such as a bowl of homemade soup. Soups come in several varieties — so pick and choose to match the appetites in your home.

- Stock or broth — The type of liquid left after meat, fish and vegetables are simmered with water, usually from 4 to 6 hours. Use beef, browned in fat, for brown stock; chicken and veal for white stock.
- Cream soup — A thicker soup made with a milk or cream base, little fat and strained vegetables, meat or fish.
- Bisque — Shellfish make the base for a soup of broth, milk and seasonings.
- Puree — Cooked foods, especially vegetables, pushed through a sieve into their own stock are the basics for this soup.
- Chowder — A thick, unstrained combination of meat, fish or vegetables plus salt pork, milk and seasonings.
- Bouillon — Concentrated unsalted beef stock.
- Consomme — A cleared double-strength brown stock. Clearing or clarifying soup stock reduces cloudiness and the double-strength method adds flavor.

HALIBUT-KING CRAB CHOWDER

1½ pounds halibut, fresh or frozen
1 package (6 to 8 ounces) frozen Alaska King crab, thawed or 1 can (7½ ounces) Alaska King crab
5 slices bacon, diced

⅛ teaspoon white pepper
1 can (8 ounces) cream style corn

2 tablespoons cornstarch

Combine orange and lemon slices with lemon juice, cinnamon, cloves and water. Bring to a boil; cook over low heat for 15 minutes. Remove cinnamon and cloves. Core and slice pears and apples, add to liquid with cherries and sugar. Blend cornstarch with a little water and add to fruit. Cook, stirring gently until thick and clear. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

PEAR CUSTARD SOUP

1 package (4½ ounces) instant vanilla pudding
1⅔ cups cold milk
¼ teaspoon almond extract
Nutmeg

Drain 1 can pears and set aside. Place remaining can pears, undrained, in blender container with vanilla pudding, milk and almond extract. Blend until smooth. Pour into chilled goblets. Top each serving with a pear half. Sprinkle with almonds and dust with nutmeg. Serve immediately, Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Hearty meals by the bowlful

Favorite foods change with the seasons as cooler autumn weather brings yearnings for hearty and warming meals, such as a bowl of homemade soup. Soups come in several varieties — so pick and choose to match the appetites in your home.

- Stock or broth — The type of liquid left after meat, fish and vegetables are simmered with water, usually from 4 to 6 hours. Use beef, browned in fat, for brown stock; chicken and veal for white stock.
- Cream soup — A thicker soup made with a milk or cream base, little fat and strained vegetables, meat or fish.
- Bisque — Shellfish make the base for a soup of broth, milk and seasonings.
- Puree — Cooked foods, especially vegetables, pushed through a sieve into their own stock are the basics for this soup.
- Chowder — A thick, unstrained combination of meat, fish or vegetables plus salt pork, milk and seasonings.
- Bouillon — Concentrated unsalted beef stock.
- Consomme — A cleared double-strength brown stock. Clearing or clarifying soup stock reduces cloudiness and the double-strength method adds flavor.

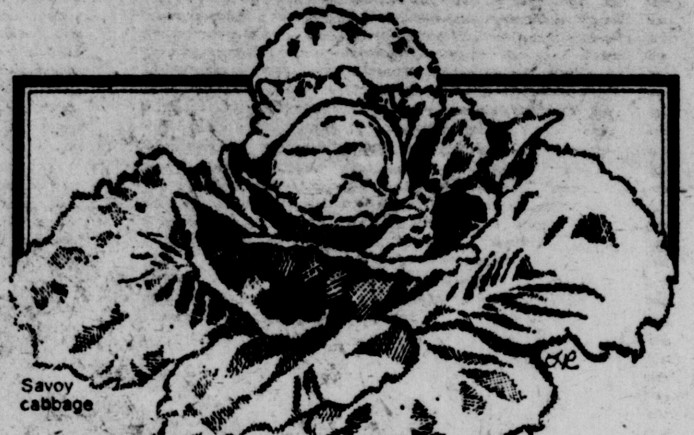
Colorful array of vegetables

Cabbage versatile, healthy



Fresh cabbage is a staple vegetable, versatile, well-liked, nourishing.

Cabbage is really a group of vegetables which includes: Green "head" cabbage; Red "head" cabbage, actually a purple-red Savoy cabbage, a head cabbage not much bigger than iceberg lettuce, yellowish, crimped leaves; Chinese cabbage: sometimes called celery cabbage . . . an elongated, oval-shaped head with some of the characteristics of both cabbage and romaine lettuce. Head should be firm, fresh, well-blanched. Used principally in salads.

Fresh approach

SHOPPING TIPS:

Look for a firm or hard head that is heavy for its size when selecting cabbage. It should have a fresh, bright color, be it red or green. Outer leaves should be free of serious blemishes. A few loose-fitting outer leaves is normal but the rest of the head should be tight.

TO STORE:

Wrap in plastic wrap and store in the hydrator section of the refrigerator.

NUTRITION:

Cabbage is rich in vitamin C. Dark green outer leaves are a source of vitamin A. If cabbage is to be cooked, it should first be sliced into portion size. This will speed the cooking process. The faster the cabbage cooks, the better the nutritional value and full, hearty flavor. Simmer cabbage in just a little water in an uncovered pan to tender-crispness.

SERVING SUGGESTIONS:

Coleslae . . . cabbage soup . . . stuffed cabbage . . . stir-fried . . . cabbage cooked and served with sour cream . . . with corned beef . . . shredded in green salads . . . sauteed with noodles.

'Open sesame' for new and interesting garnish

by BEATRICE H. COMAS

My first recollection of sesame seeds is a very pleasant one connected with a business trip my father made to Boston. While there he ate in Chinatown and brought a box of sesame candy for his daughter, who stayed at home in a small Maine village. I have eaten this sweet delicacy many times since but the first taste was the most exciting.

The ancient folklore surrounding sesame is also exciting. When Queen Scheherazade recounted the tale of Sinbad the Sailor, she had to think quickly of a password to open the robbers' treasure-filled cave. She hit upon the phrase "Open sesame," probably because the seeds that are contained in a small capsule pop from the hull and scatter in all directions.

As proof of their age, a drawing of an ancient Egyptian tomb dating back 4,000 years depicts a baker adding sesame seeds to his dough. We are still using them the same way in cookies, cakes, rolls, and breads, particularly holiday breads.

Untoasted, the seeds can be used in baked dishes, sprinkled over breads before baking, or used instead of bread crumbs as a topping for casseroles.

Toasted, the nutlike seeds can be used as crunch garnish for appetizers and salads and are good combined with cheese or sweet sauces, or as an interesting addition to fish sauces. They also make a good sprinkle-on garnish for vegetables and rice.

To toast sesame seeds, spread them in a pan and heat in a 350 degree F. oven from 10 to 20 minutes until brown. Shake occasionally.

SESAME FLANK STEAK

1½ pounds flank steak
3 tablespoons sesame seeds
3 tablespoons soy sauce
1½ tablespoons sesame oil
1½ tablespoons sugar
1 clove garlic, finely minced
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1 scallion trimmed and chopped

Place the steak on a flat surface and with a sharp knife cut it on the bias into very thin slices. Cut the slices into 1-inch cubes, Put the meat in a mixing bowl.

Spoon the seeds onto a baking dish and broil, stirring often, until nicely browned. Remove and let cool.

Add the sesame seeds to the meat. Add the remaining ingredients and let stand for one hour. Preheat the broiler. Arrange the meat in one layer in a baking dish and broil about four inches from the source of heat. It is not necessary to turn the pieces. Broil until done. Serves 4 to 6.

CAULIFLOWER, ONIONS, AND SESAME SEEDS

2 large Spanish onions, thinly sliced
¼ cup oil
1½ tablespoons sugar
1 medium-size head cauliflower, broken into flowerets
Salt to taste
½ cup tomato juice
2 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds

Saute the onions in the oil in a skillet until tender and lightly browned. Add the sugar and cook 2 minutes longer. Add cauliflower, salt, and tomato juice. Cover and cook over medium heat until cauliflower is crisp-tender. Sprinkle with seeds just before serving. Serves 6.

'Open sesame' for new and interesting garnish

by BEATRICE H. COMAS

My first recollection of sesame seeds is a very pleasant one connected with a business trip my father made to Boston. While there he ate in Chinatown and brought a box of sesame candy for his daughter, who stayed at home in a small Maine village. I have eaten this sweet delicacy many times since but the first taste was the most exciting.

The ancient folklore surrounding sesame is also exciting. When Queen Scheherazade recounted the tale of Sinbad the Sailor, she had to think quickly of a password to open the robbers' treasure-filled cave. She hit upon the phrase "Open sesame," probably because the seeds that are contained in a small capsule pop from the hull and scatter in all directions.

As proof of their age, a drawing of an ancient Egyptian tomb dating back 4,000 years depicts a baker adding sesame seeds to his dough. We are still using them the same way in cookies, cakes, rolls, and breads, particularly holiday breads.

Untoasted, the seeds can be used in baked dishes, sprinkled over breads before baking, or used instead of bread crumbs as a topping for casseroles.

Toasted, the nutlike seeds can be used as crunch garnish for appetizers and salads and are good combined with cheese or sweet sauces, or as an interesting addition to fish sauces. They also make a good sprinkle-on garnish for vegetables and rice.

To toast sesame seeds, spread them in a pan and heat in a 350 degree F. oven from 10 to 20 minutes until brown. Shake occasionally.

SESAME FLANK STEAK

1½ pounds flank steak
3 tablespoons sesame seeds
3 tablespoons soy sauce
1½ tablespoons sesame oil
1½ tablespoons sugar
1 clove garlic, finely minced
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1 scallion trimmed and chopped

Place the steak on a flat surface and with a sharp knife cut it on the bias into very thin slices. Cut the slices into 1-inch cubes, Put the meat in a mixing bowl.

Spoon the seeds onto a baking dish and broil, stirring often, until nicely browned. Remove and let cool.

Add the sesame seeds to the meat. Add the remaining ingredients and let stand for one hour. Preheat the broiler. Arrange the meat in one layer in a baking dish and broil about four inches from the source of heat. It is not necessary to turn the pieces. Broil until done. Serves 4 to 6.

CAULIFLOWER, ONIONS, AND SESAME SEEDS

2 large Spanish onions, thinly sliced
¼ cup oil
1½ tablespoons sugar
1 medium-size head cauliflower, broken into flowerets
Salt to taste
½ cup tomato juice
2 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds

Saute the onions in the oil in a skillet until tender and lightly browned. Add the sugar and cook 2 minutes longer. Add cauliflower, salt, and tomato juice. Cover and cook over medium heat until cauliflower is crisp-tender. Sprinkle with seeds just before serving. Serves 6.

Vitamin C—orange juice gives plenty

The morning glass of orange juice holds a cherished place on the breakfast table. In fact, it's almost become an institution as even the frantic commuter grabs a glass on the way out the door.

A 6-ounce glass of orange juice supplies the daily vitamin C needs for adults and children both. Other citrus juices, such as pineapple, grapefruit or combinations of them, equal orange juice in vitamin C content. Additions to the vitamin C crew include some brands of grape, apple and tomato juice. Not all brands contain 100 per cent of the recommended dietary allowance (RDA), so check the label before you buy.

Look for the words "pure unsweetened juice" on the label. Fruit drinks, punches and powdered mixes, whether in the jar or package, contain some vitamin C but also added sugar.

The kids won't drink the canned unsweetened juice? Try the frozen; the younger set may prefer the taste and texture.

ALTHOUGH most animals can produce vitamin C in the body, man, monkey and guinea pigs are among those who must find vitamin C from food sources. Citrus fruits and juices offer the highest amounts, but other foods such as cabbage, broccoli, tomatoes, white and sweet potatoes, greens, cantaloupe and green and red peppers offer smaller amounts of the vitamin.

Vitamin C losses appear when foods are cooked at high temperatures and in large amounts of water. For example, 1 cup of shredded raw cabbage looses almost half of the vitamin when cooked. The solution: to prepare your favorite cole slaw on corn beef and cabbage nights, try a vegetable steamer. If you do cook vegetables in water, save the cooking liquids for soups or sauces.

No vitamin C lost in cut and stored orange

If you hesitate to cut and store fresh oranges for fear all the vitamin C will be lost by the time you get around to eating them, don't worry. The vitamin C in fresh oranges is so stable that little, if any, is lost when an orange is cut and stored overnight in a plastic bag in the refrigerator.

The ground beef best for hamburgers, sloppy joes, chili and spaghetti sauce is not the preferred type for meatloaves, meatballs and beef casseroles.

The National Live Stock and Meat Board recommends slightly leaner beef for the later dishes: with 75 to 80 per cent lean meat, compared with 70 to 75 per cent lean for the first four dishes.

The least fatty of all, 80 to 85 per cent lean, is suggested for low-calorie diets, patties and recipes that combine ground beef with vegetables.

Oriental cooking class scheduled

With an emphasis on ethnic specialties, the adult and continuing education divisions of Oakton Community College (MONACEP) offers "Wonton and Egg Fu Yong," with Joe Yee, a Niles resident, sharing recipes and samples of these Oriental favorites. The class will meet on Tuesday, Oct. 18 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Niles West High School, Oakton and Edens Expressway, Skokie. Tuition is $8 for residents and non-residents of the college district. Vitamin C — orange juice gives plenty

The morning glass of orange juice holds a cherished place on the breakfast table. In fact, it's almost become an institution as even the frantic commuter grabs a glass on the way out the door.

A 6-ounce glass of orange juice supplies the daily vitamin C needs for adults and children both. Other citrus juices, such as pineapple, grapefruit or combinations of them, equal orange juice in vitamin C content. Additions to the vitamin C crew include some brands of grape, apple and tomato juice. Not all brands contain 100 per cent of the recommended dietary allowance (RDA), so check the label before you buy.

Look for the words "pure unsweetened juice" on the label. Fruit drinks, punches and powdered mixes, whether in the jar or package, contain some vitamin C but also added sugar.

The kids won't drink the canned unsweetened juice? Try the frozen; the younger set may prefer the taste and texture.

ALTHOUGH most animals can produce vitamin C in the body, man, monkey and guinea pigs are among those who must find vitamin C from food sources. Citrus fruits and juices offer the highest amounts, but other foods such as cabbage, broccoli, tomatoes, white and sweet potatoes, greens, cantaloupe and green and red peppers offer smaller amounts of the vitamin.

Vitamin C losses appear when foods are cooked at high temperatures and in large amounts of water. For example, 1 cup of shredded raw cabbage looses almost half of the vitamin when cooked. The solution: to prepare your favorite cole slaw on corn beef and cabbage nights, try a vegetable steamer. If you do cook vegetables in water, save the cooking liquids for soups or sauces.

No vitamin C lost in cut and stored orange

If you hesitate to cut and store fresh oranges for fear all the vitamin C will be lost by the time you get around to eating them, don't worry. The vitamin C in fresh oranges is so stable that little, if any, is lost when an orange is cut and stored overnight in a plastic bag in the refrigerator.

The ground beef best for hamburgers, sloppy joes, chili and spaghetti sauce is not the preferred type for meatloaves, meatballs and beef casseroles.

The National Live Stock and Meat Board recommends slightly leaner beef for the later dishes: with 75 to 80 per cent lean meat, compared with 70 to 75 per cent lean for the first four dishes.

The least fatty of all, 80 to 85 per cent lean, is suggested for low-calorie diets, patties and recipes that combine ground beef with vegetables.

Homemade cereal tasty, nutritious

Tired of the same breakfast cereal? Make your own and enjoy a nutritious morning meal. Top your homemade cereal with plain yogurt and fruit or buttermilk for a novel flavor treat. And to keep saturated fats low, use safflower or corn oil in this recipe from "The American Heart Association Cookbook."

CRUNCHY CEREAL

(not quick cooking)
½ cup coarsely chopped peanuts
½ cup sesame seeds
½ cup sunflower seeds
½ cup soy flour
½ cup nonfat dry milk
½ cup wheat germ
½ cup brown sugar, packed
½ cup oil
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
2 teaspoons vanilla

In a large bowl, mix oats, nuts, seeds, flour, milk and wheat germ.

Combine brown sugar, cinnamon and oil, stirring until smooth. Mix with dry ingredients and spread mixture on cookie sheet. Cook at 300 degrees for 1 hour, stirring every 10 minutes.

Remove from oven, sprinkle with vanilla and allow to cool. Mixture keeps well if stored in an airtight container.

Celery seed seasons many U.S. favorites

Celery seed is the fruit of wild celery or smallage, harvested for many centuries for its medicinal properties. Then, as now, only the seeds had appetizing aroma. The rest of the plant is unpleasantly bitter.

While thousands of tons of salad celery are grown in the United States, the celery seed for the spice shelf mostly is imported from India, France and China, a total of 3,287,200 pounds in 1976.

Celery seed and celery salt have long been popular in American cooking. (Celery salt is what the name implies: ground celery seed and table salt). This spice seed gives delectable aroma to such old-fashioned "sweets and sours" as chow chow, bread and butter pickles, mustard pickles, pepper relish and catsup.

The whole seed or celery salt make ideal seasoning for cole slaw, potato salad, corn chowder and boiled salad dressing. The Pennsylvania Dutch sprinkle the seed over fried potatoes, while New Englanders use celery seed in some of their seafood specialties.

Yogurt fans are right. Their favorite cultured milk product is more nutritious than other fermented milks and even non-fermented milks.

Scientists of the USDA's Agricultural Research Service fed young, growing rats yogurt, three types of acidophilus milk and two types of buttermilk, each made with a different bacteria strain.

. They also fed milk with lactic acid added and uninoculated fresh milk. All the fermented products were made from the same batch of fresh milk that included whole, low-fat and low-fat with vitamins and essential trace elements added.

They found the source of the yogurt didn't matter. In all cases, the rats fed the yogurt grew and gained weight faster than rats fed the other diets.

The recipe box

Looking for a dinner idea? Have you always wanted to make your own yogurt but never found the right recipe? Read on in The Recipe Box as Paddock employes offer more of ther favorites for readers of Sugar 'n' Spice.

CRUSTY WHITE BREAD

(Diane Mermigas, Television Columnist)

- 4 to 4½ cups unbleached flour
- 2 packages dry yeast
- 2 cups warm water
- ¼ cup cooking oil
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon salt

Dissolve yeast in warm water. Combine with 2 cups flour in mixing bowl; add oil, sugar and salt.

Using an electric mixer, add flour until mixture becomes too thick. Work in remaining flour while kneading; knead about 8 to 10 minutes.

Form the dough into a ball and place in a greased bowl. Cover and let rise until double in bulk, about 1½ hours. Divide in half and divide each half into 3 balls; let rest 10 minutes. Roll each ball into two 12-inch strips and braid into 2 loaves. Cover and let rise until double, about 40 minutes. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 minutes.

SAUSAGE SOUFFLE

(Lois Funck, Classified department)

- 1 pound pork sausage
- 6 eggs
- 2 cups milk
- 2 slices bread, cubed
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup grated Cheddar cheese

Brown sausage and drain. Beat eggs, milk, bread, mustard and salt. Mix in sausage and cheese. Place in an 8x8-inch pan and bake at 350 for 45 minutes.

Variation: add ¼ cup chopped onion, ¼ cup chopped green pepper and 1 cup chopped mushrooms.

Cooking tip: Make this dish the night before and bake it when you get home from work.

CORN AND TOMATO CASSEROLE

(Joan Rennau, Editorial Assistant)

- 2 cups corn, canned or frozen
- 1 minced onion
- 2 eggs
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 4 tomatoes, sliced or
- 1 can tomatoes (16 ounces)
- 1 pound ground beef
- ½ cup bread crumbs
- 1 green pepper, minced
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup cooked macaroni or mashed potatoes

Add eggs, crumbs, onion, green pepper, butter, salt and pepper to meat; mix well. Pack meat mixture on bottom of well-greased casserole. Place 1 cup of corn over meat and top with tomatoes; add remaining corn. Season to taste while combining the casserole. Top with cooked macaroni or potatoes.

Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 60 minutes.

If desired, top with strips of bacon. This dish may be prepared in advance and refrigerated until ready to bake.

PADDOCK YOGURT

(Joyce Zeller, Paste-up Department)

- 1 quart jar
- 1 cup powdered milk
- 3 cups warm water, about 120 degrees
- 1 cup plain yogurt

Place milk and water in jar. Shake until well mixed. Add yogurt and mix thoroughly. Wrap jar in one complete issue of The Daily Herald (the bigger the better). Place on top of refrigerator for 24 hours and then refrigerate.

The yogurt will be tarter than usual, depending upon the culture used. Save 1 cup to make the next batch.

A yogurt-making secret from Ms. Zeller: "This recipe was given to me by a friend who was quite adamant about keeping it on top of the refrigerator, so I've never tried anything else. Why fool with a good thing?"

ROULIN

(Dorothy Oliver Editor - Leisure and Medley)

- 8 sandwich steaks
- 1 large onion, cut in strips
- 4 slices bacon, cut in half
- 1 can (4 ounces) mushrooms or
- ¼ to ½ cup fresh mushroom pieces
- ½ cup wine
- 2 teaspoons salt

Put pieces of onion and mushrooms and one half slice of bacon in the center of each steak. Roll the meat up in jelly roll fashion and fasten with toothpicks.

Dust meat rolls with flour and brown in hot skillet. When meat is browned, add salt, wine and just enough water to partially cover meat rolls. Cover with a tight-fitting lid and simmer for 3 to 4 hours or until meat is tender.

When ready to serve, remove meat from pan and make gravy from the drippings. Add mushrooms to the gravy if desired. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

WORKING WOMAN'S ROULIN

Substitute 2½ pounds thick, frozen roundsteak for sandwich steak. Cut round steak into 3-inch pieces. Put steak and other ingredients into the crock pot. Turn to low setting and dinner will be ready when you return from work.

AVOCADO-EGG SPREAD

(Bev Goldberg, classified department)

- 1 ripe avocado, peeled and pitted
- 6 hard boiled eggs
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon pickle juice
- 1 small onion, minced
- salt and pepper to taste

Mash avocado and eggs. Add mayonnaise, pickle juice, onion and seasonings. Press mixture into mold. Refrigerate for several hours. Unmold and top with cavier, if desired. Serve with cocktail rye bread or crackers. Serves 6.

- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 2 teaspoons cream of tartar
- 1 teaspoon salt

Mix shortening and sugar; add eggs one at a time, then vanilla. Beat until smooth. Sift dry ingredients together and stir into first mixture. Chill in refrigerator. Form in marble size balls. Bake in 400 degree oven for about 12 minutes or until lightly browned.

Variation: Roll dough and cut in different shapes or add ¼ cup coconut to half of the dough.

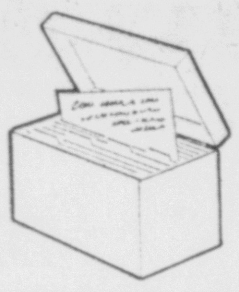
Working. . .cooking and a bread winner

Looking for a dinner idea? Have you always wanted to make your own yogurt but never found the right recipe? Read on in The Recipe Box as Paddock employes offer more of ther favorites for readers of Sugar 'n' Spice.

The recipe box



CRUSTY WHITE BREAD

(Diane Mermigas, Television Columnist)

4 to 4½ cups unbleached flour
2 packages dry yeast
2 cups warm water
¼ cup cooking oil
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon salt

Dissolve yeast in warm water. Combine with 2 cups flour in mixing bowl; add oil, sugar and salt.

Using an electric mixer, add flour until mixture becomes too thick. Work in remaining flour while kneading; knead about 8 to 10 minutes.

Form the dough into a ball and place in a greased bowl. Cover and let rise until double in bulk, about 1½ hours. Divide in half and divide each half into 3 balls; let rest 10 minutes. Roll each ball into two 12-inch strips and braid into 2 loaves. Cover and let rise until double, about 40 minutes. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 minutes.

SAUSAGE SOUFFLE

(Lois Funck, Classified department)

1 pound pork sausage
6 eggs
2 cups milk
2 slices bread, cubed
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese

Brown sausage and drain. Beat eggs, milk, bread, mustard and salt. Mix in sausage and cheese. Place in an 8x8-inch pan and bake at 350 for 45 minutes.

Variation: add ¼ cup chopped onion, ¼ cup chopped green pepper and 1 cup chopped mushrooms.

Cooking tip: Make this dish the night before and bake it when you get home from work.

(Joan Rennau, Editorial Assistant)

2 cups corn, canned or frozen
1 minced onion
2 eggs
2 tablespoons butter
4 tomatoes, sliced or
(16 ounces)
1 pound ground beef
½ cup bread crumbs
1 green pepper, minced
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 cup cooked macaroni or mashed potatoes

Add eggs, crumbs, onion, green pepper, butter, salt and pepper to meat; mix well. Pack meat mixture on bottom of well-greased casserole. Place 1 cup of corn over meat and top with tomatoes; add remaining corn. Season to taste while combining the casserole. Top with cooked macaroni or potatoes.

Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 60 minutes.

If desired, top with strips of bacon. This dish may be prepared in advance and refrigerated until ready to bake.

PADDOCK YOGURT

(Joyce Zeller, Paste-up Department)

1 quart jar
1 cup powdered milk
3 cups warm water,
about 120 degrees
1 cup plain yogurt

Place milk and water in jar. Shake until well mixed. Add yogurt and mix thoroughly. Wrap jar in one complete issue of The Daily Herald (the bigger the better). Place on top of refrigerator for 24 hours and then refrigerate.

The yogurt will be tarter than usual, depending upon the culture used. Save 1 cup to make the next batch.

A yogurt-making secret from Ms. Zeller: "This recipe was given to me by a friend who was quite adamant about keeping it on top of the refrigerator, so I've never tried anything else. Why fool with a good thing?"

ROULIN

(Dorothy Oliver Editor - Leisure and Medley)

8 sandwich steaks
1 large onion,
cut in strips
4 slices bacon, cut in half 1 can (4 ounces)
mushrooms or ¼ to ½ cup fresh mushroom pieces
½ cup wine
2 teaspoons salt

Put pieces of onion and mushrooms and one half slice of bacon in the center of each steak. Roll the meat up in jelly roll fashion and fasten with toothpicks.

Dust meat rolls with flour and brown in hot skillet. When meat is browned, add salt, wine and just enough water to partially cover meat rolls. Cover with a tight-fitting lid and simmer for 3 to 4 hours or until meat is tender.

When ready to serve, remove meat from pan and make gravy from the drippings. Add mushrooms to the gravy if desired. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

WORKING WOMAN'S ROULIN

Substitute 2½ pounds thick, frozen roundsteak for sandwich steak. Cut round steak into 3-inch pieces. Put steak and other ingredients into the crock pot. Turn to low setting and dinner will be ready when you return from work.

(Bev Goldberg, classified department)

1 ripe avocado, peeled and pitted
6 hard boiled eggs
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 teaspoon pickle juice
1 small onion, minced
salt and pepper to taste

1½ cups sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla

Dress up salads easily with homespun favorites

Joyce Lofstrom
Food editor

Homespun recipes continue with dinner in a dish as the elixir for the cook on the run. Although the after-five pace won't change, you can set a new trend at home with a meal-in-one salad.

Nothing tastes better than a homemade dressing atop your favorite combination of seats, cheeses and greens. No time to prepare the dressing? Join the ranks of convenience cooks with a salad dressing mix made at home. The basic mix lends itself to a variety of tastes from bleu cheese to crunchy pecan.

FRENCH DRESSING MIX

4 tablespoons salt
1/3 cup sugar
3 tablespoons instant minced onion
4 teaspoons paprika
4 teaspoons dry mustard

Combine ingredients and store in tightly covered container. To make 1 cup of dressing combine ¾ cup salad oil, ¼ cup vinegar and 1 tablespoon French dressing mix. Whirl in blender or shake in a jar until emulsified. Refrigerate in covered jar. Makes 8 pints.

Blue Cheese Dressing: Add ¼ pound crumbled bleu cheese to 1 cup French dressing mix.

Lorenzo Dressing: Combine 1 cup French dressing mix, 3 tablespoons chili sauce, 2 to 3 green onions with tops, cut in pieces; ¼ bunch watercress and ½ cup minced pimento.

Pecan Dressing: Saute ¼ cup pecans in butter until lightly browned. Blend with 1 cup French dressing mix until pecans are in small pieces.

Vinaigrette Dressing: In blender, combine 1 cup mix, 6 green olives; 1 teaspoon capers; 3 to 4 green onions with tops cut in pieces; 2 tablespoons pickle relish; 3 to 4 sprigs parsley and 1 teaspoon chervil. Blend until emulsified but not perfectly smooth.

Meal-in-one Salad
Homemade salad dressing
Wheat Germ Zucchini Squares
Pudding or Apple Crisp

Wheat germ adds protein to treats and hot soups

A mug of creamy potato soup or steaming crock of a homemade minestrone seem only fitting for dinner on a brisk night. For a lighter meal, cooks often turn to a salad supper packed with seasonal vegetables and favorite meats. But even soup and salad needs company — be it a favorite bread or cracker.

Take advantage of a fall favorite, zucchini, coupled with crunchy wheat germ for a super sampler. And if you have leftovers, save for another dinner or reheat for a quick snack.

For these dinnertime finger foods, look for regular, not sweetened, wheat germ in the grocery or health food store. Made from the germ of the wheat kernel, wheat germ contains the highest quality protein and is rich in B vitamins. Save extra wheat germ for breads, cookies or a crunchy addition to yogurt.

WHEAT GERM
ZUCCHINI SQUARES

3 cups thinly sliced zucchini
¾ cup vacuum packed wheat germ, regular
1 cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese
4 eggs
¼ cup butter, melted
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped parsley
1 small clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon marjoram
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Combine all ingredients, mixing thoroughly. Spread in greased 9x13x2-inch pan. Bake in 350-degree oven 15 to 20 minutes or until set and lightly browned. Cool about 5 minutes. Cut into small pieces. Makes about 4 to 5 dozen appetizers.

NOTE: Appetizers may be reheated in 350-degree oven 5 to 8 minutes, or in microwave oven 1 minute.

Cooking tip: Use extra wheat germ to make wheat germ flour. Combine 1/3 cup of powdered wheat germ and 2/3 cup of all-purpose flour and substitute for 1 cup of all-purpose flour. Use toasted wheat germ or toast powdered or whole wheat germ before combining with flour. Refrigerate.

Authentic German dishes

Flavorful fare for Oktoberfest

Lois Seiler

Cook of the week

Spread out a checked tablecloth, invite in your friends and have an Oktoberfest in your own home with an excellent meal of sauerbraten, potato dumplings, red cabbage and German beer!

The recipes are authentic. They have been handed down in the family of Edith Pletch of Arlington Heights. Although Edith was born in the United States, her parents returned to Germany where Edith spent most of her youth, coming back to America at the end of World War II.

Even with this heritage and her husband, Bob, being of German descent, Edith admits her family prefers the spicy flavor of Italian food. However, now that her children are older, they have come to appreciate some of the German specialties. Her sauerbraten always has been popular with guests.

The suerbraten is made with a rump roast marinated in a spicy sweet-sour solution for several days, then cooked in a savory gravy until tender. Edith's recipe is especially good, as the meat can be cut with a fork and has an exceptional flavor.

THE TANGY GRAVY is delicious over Edith's potato dumplings, which take time to make but are an ideal accompaniment. A subtle touch of nutmeg in the batter gives a different flavor. Toasted bread cubes pressed into the dumplings keep them from getting mushy in the center.

Because the dumplings are heavy, they are quite filling, but leftovers taste just as good. They can be reheated in a covered-dish, or are excellent sliced thickly and browned in butter.

The red cabbage also has a tart flavor, with apples and caraway seeds adding interest to this appealing German vegetable dish.

For dessert, Edith suggests Bienenstikhc, made from an old family recipe everyone likes. The basic cake has an almond topping and is made in a jelly roll pan. The cake must be remoeved from the tin to be cut horizontally into two layers and then is returned to the tin with a rich pudding spread between the layers.

"THE RECIPE JUST sounds complicated, but it is not hard to make," Edith said. She serves this baked delicacy for dessert after dinner and for bridge groups, but her children also enjoy it for breakfast.

The Pletches have a married daughter, a daughter living in Tulsa, Okla., and a son, Kevin, at home. Edith is a member of the bowling and golf leagues at St. Mark's Lutheran Church, and both she and Bob are enthusiastic cross-country skiers. In her

Last tomatoes not so hot for home canning

If the last of this summer's tomato crop is on dried-out vines, the fruit is a poor choice for home canning. Teresa Shaffer, extension food and nutrition specialist in Lincoln, Nebr., says they are potentially dangerous for canning because overripe tomatoes or those picked from dead vines can be low enough in acid to permit bacteria growth when canned by the usual boiling water bath method.

Ms. Shaffer warns home canners to use only top quality tomatoes for home canning and processing. They should be firm and ripe, of good quality and high acid content. (UPI)

New regulation would OK ground bone tissue in meet

Under a proposed new U.S. Dept. of Agriculture regulation, the meat industry would be able to use tissue from ground bone acquired by the mechanical separation of meat from bone.

"During the last year, USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service has conducted an extensive review of this product," said Carol Tucker Foreman, assistant secretary of agriculture for Food and Consumer Services. "We have obtained data from university scientists, an interagency panel of experts, public health officials and consumers. We are confident that this product, when used within stated limitations and labeled accurately, meets the requirements of the Wholesome Meat Act."

Under the proposal, federal meat inspection regulations would be amended to add "tissue from ground bone" as a "meat food product" that could be used as an ingredient in certain products under specified limitations. "Tissue from ground bone" would be defined as any tissue resulting from the mechanical separation of skeletal muscle from bone by straining through screens, sieves or ports not to exceed 0.5 millimeters in diameter and which conforms to specified levels for protein, fat and calcium.

Other provisions of the new proposal include:

- When bone tissue is used as an ingredient in meat products, the name of that product would have to be qualified by the phrase, "tissue from ground bone added," in a type size at least one-half the size of the product name. Further, "tissue from ground bone" would have to be included in the list of ingredients contained in the product, so that persons who must stringently restrict calcium intakes could avoid these products.
- "Tissue from ground bone" could be used only up to a maximum of 20 per cent of the meat "block" (i.e., the total of all meat, meat byproducts, poultry meat and poultry products) used in the product.
- "Tissue from ground bone" could not be used in the manufacture of strained baby, junior or toddler foods due to the flouride content. Food quality officials note that although the flouride content of bone tissue is not considered a health hazard, flouride intakes by children need to be controlled more closely than for adults in order to avoid discoloration of children's teeth.
- "Tissue from ground bone" would have to contain a minimum of 14 per cent protein and would be limited to a maximum of 30 per cent fat.
- The calcium content of bone tissue could not exceed 0.75 per cent, and the minimum protein quality would be set at a protein efficiency ratio of 2.5, the latter being equal to the quality of milk protein casein.
- No standards are proposed covering maximum microbiological content of "tissue from ground bone" because USDA reviews found no evidence that there is bacterial health hazard associated with this product when it is handled in keeping with good manufacturing practices. Federal meat inspectors monitor meat packing firms to maintain strict sanitary requirements, and appropriate control programs exist to provide for safe handling practices.
- Products failing to meet the standards for bone tissue because of high calcium content could be used only for rendering animal fat. Until such time as USDA establishes standards for producing low temperature rendered products, bone tissue product that fails to meet the proposed standards for reasons other than high calcium may be used only in producing imitation meat products.

- "Tissue from ground bone" would have to contain a minimum of 14 per cent protein and would be limited to a maximum of 30 per cent fat.
- The calcium content of bone tissue could not exceed 0.75 per cent, and the minimum protein quality would be set at a protein efficiency ratio of 2.5, the latter being equal to the quality of milk protein casein.
- No standards are proposed covering maximum microbiological content of "tissue from ground bone" because USDA reviews found no evidence that there is bacterial health hazard associated with this product when it is handled in keeping with good manufacturing practices. Federal meat inspectors monitor meat packing firms to maintain strict sanitary requirements, and appropriate control programs exist to provide for safe handling practices.
- Products failing to meet the standards for bone tissue because of high calcium content could be used only for rendering animal fat. Until such time as USDA establishes standards for producing low temperature rendered products, bone tissue product that fails to meet the proposed standards for reasons other than high calcium may be used only in producing imitation meat products.

International fans will like this pizza

A blend of two worlds makes a good snack for a teen-age party or a late nibble for adult sports fans.

Taking a tip from the Italians, we combine sardines and sour cream as suggested by some Norwegian friends and top this with cheese slices.

NORWAY PIZZA

cheese-pizza mix
1 can (3¾ ounces)
sardines, drained
½ cup sour cream
1 egg yolk
1 tablespoon capers
4 fresh mushrooms, sliced or 1 can (4 ounces)
sliced mushrooms, drained
1/8 teaspoon oregano

Preheat the oven to 425 degrees. Mix dough for pizza, following instructions on package. Pat out to a rectangle 9x12 inches on a cookie sheet. Arrange sardines on dough, spacing them about one inch apart. Blend sour cream, egg yolk, capers, mushrooms and oregano. Pour about two-third can of the pizza sauce with sour cream mixture and swirl lightly. Spread over dough. Sprinkle generously with the grated cheese (included with the pizza mix). Bake in preheated oven 20 to 25 minutes, or until bubbly and golden. Cut into slices and serve at once. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Practice makes perfect in micro-baking cakes

Eileen Kelly

Let's learn to micro-cook

Cakes sometimes are a sore point in discussions of microwave cooking. They do not have a brown crust and it does take some practice to get them perfect. Here are some suggestions to make the going easier.

If your cake is to be unfrosted, try baking ones that have a natural color such as chocolate or spice cakes. White and yellow cakes will have to be frosted to get them looking just right. Cakes must be cooked in nonmetal pans. If you want to remove the cake from the pan, either line the cake pan with waxed paper or lightly grease it.

The goal is to bake the cake evenly. Elevate it on a glass custard cup or some other glass dish to help it to cook evenly. Also rotate the cake pan several times during the cooking period.

THE TOP OF cakes done in the microwave oven often have a moist appearance, even when the cake is done. You have to get used to this and not be inclined to continue cooking the cake to get rid of the moist spots. They'll usually disappear as the cake sits after baking. A cake is done when a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean. Overcooked cakes get very hard and are worthless.

I do a lot of plain snacking-type cakes for my children and their friends and also to have on hand for unexpected company. These cakes aren't frosted and are great for the lunch box crowd. I make these cakes in square glass pans, but when I'm making a round cake to be frosted, I use a round plastic pan designed for use in microwave ovens. Round glass baking dishes are fine to use, too.

CAKES BAKED IN the microwave do rise high so be sure not to fill the pan more than half full. If you have extra batter, use it for cupcakes. Sometimes microwaved cakes have an uneven top. You can help prevent this by letting the batter settle in the cake pan a few minutes before putting it in to cook.

I hope you will give cake-baking in the microwave a whirl. I know that when I started baking cakes in the oven, I got a little discouraged reading all the do's and don'ts. Now I bake all but a few cakes the microwave way so my discouragement was shortlived.

This is a good cake for picnics and lunch boxes. It also gives the house a fragrant aroma when baking. The applesauce keeps it moist and the chocolate makes it dark.

CHOCOLATE APPLESAUCE CAKE

2 ounces semisweet or milk chocolate (squares or bits)
2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar
1½ tablespoon cornstarch
2 teaspoons baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cloves
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 cup raisins
2 cups applesauce
Powdered sugar to sprinkle on baked cake

Put oil and chocolate in glass bowl and microwave, uncovered, for 1 to 2 minutes on high or until melted. Set aside. Stir together the flour, granulated sugar, cornstarch, soda, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves, raisins and nuts. Add applesauce and chocolate mixture to the dry ingredients and mix by hand until well blended.

Pour into 7-x11-inch glass unlined and ungreased baking dish. Cook uncovered for 12 to 13 minutes on high or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Be sure to elevate the cake dish during cooking and also turn it several times. Sprinkle baked cake with powdered sugar.

You can wrap this cake or part of it in plastic wrap, freeze it and then reheat it in the microwave for 1 to 2 minutes on high. Delicious!

Authentic German dishes flavorful for Oktoberfest spare time, Edith enjoys needlework and bridge.

SAUERBRATEN

1 rump roast, 5 to 6 pounds
4 teaspoons salt
Dash of pepper
3 small onions
About 3 dozen whole cloves
2 cups vinegar
2 cups water
¼ cup sugar
3 bay leaves
1 teaspoon peppercorns

About 4 to 6 days before cooking, rub meat with the salt and pepper. Place in a large bowl. Pierce each onion with about 12 cloves and place in bowl with meat. Combine all remaining ingredients and pour over meat. Cover bowl tightly and place in refrigerator 4 to 6 days to marinate, turning meat once each day.

When ready to cook, drain liquid from meat and save. Pat meat dry and brown it in 3 tablespoons shortening in a heavy skillet or Dutch oven. Add the following gravy and let simmer for 3 to 3½ hours, covered, until meat is tender.

Gravy:
4 cups water
2 cups strained marinade

In a heavy iron skillet over low heat, brown flour. Stir constantly until flour is light brown. Let skillet cool. Then slowly add the water and strained marinade. Stir until smooth and pour over meat. Cook as directed above. If gravy becomes too thin, it can be thickened with a flour and water mixture or some crushed gingersnaps just before serving. Serves 12.

POTATO DUMPLINGS

4 to 5 pounds red potatoes
2 slices white bread, cubed
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups flour
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon nutmeg

The day before, boil potatoes in their jackets. Cool and peel. Refrigerate until ready to make dumplings.

Brown bread cubes on all sides in butter and set aside.

Just before cooking, grate boiled potatoes with hand grater into a large bowl. Add flour, eggs, salt and nutmeg and mix together. With floured hands, shape into balls about 3 inches in diameter. Press 3 to 4 bread cubes into center of each, covering with dough.

Drop into boiling salted water in a large kettle and simmer until they float to the top, about 15 to 20 minutes, uncovered. Remove with slotted spoon and drain well. Keep warm until ready to serve. Makes approximately 15 to 18 dumplings.

Reheat leftovers in a buttered, covered baking dish, or slice thickly and brown in butter.

RED CABBAGE

2½ pounds red cabbage
1 tablespoon vegetable shortening
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon or more caraway seeds
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons wine vinegar or red wine
3 to 4 tart apples, washed, sliced and cored
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon cold water

Remove coarse outer leaves from cabbage and discard. Cut cabbage in 4 sections to remove core. Wash and shred finely. Cook in water for a half hour, covered.

Add the shortening, bay leaf, caraway seeds, salt, wine vinegar and apples. Cook, covered, an additional hour, until tender.

Season cabbage to taste with sugar. Thicken with cornstarch and one tablespoon water, that have been mixed together. Serves 8 to 12.

BIENENSTICH

1 cup slivered almonds
1/3 cup sugar
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 tablespoon milk
1¾ cup sifted all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or margarine
2/3 cup sugar
2 eggs
5 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon flour
1 package (3 ounces) vanilla pudding
½ cup butter

In a saucepan, combine the almonds, 1/3 cup sugar. ¼ cup butter and 1 tablespoon milk. Heat until butter and sugar are melted. Set aside.

Sift 1¾ cups flour, baking powder and salt together and set aside.

In mixing bowl, cream the ½ cup margarine. Gradually beat in 2/3 cup sugar until mixture is light. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well. Alternately beat in sifted flour mixture with milk and vanilla.

Spread batter into a lightly greased jelly roll pan. Sprinkle batter in pan with 2 tablespoon flour. Spoon almond mixture over this and bake 20 minutes at 375 degrees.

Cool cake and then cut in half in order to remove it from pan. Cut each piece in half horizontally to make two layers. Then return the two bottom pieces to pan, to make the bottom cake layer.

Prepare vanila pudding according to package directions. When done, remove from heat. Add ½ cup butter and stir until melted. Spread over bottom layer of cake in pan. Then replace the top layer over the pudding. Cut in squares to serve. Serves 18. Leftovers should be refrigerated.

Spread batter into a lightly greased jelly roll pan. Sprinkle batter in pan with 2 tablespoon flour. Spoon almond mixture over this and bake 20 minutes at 375 degrees.

Cool cake and then cut in half in order to remove it from pan. Cut each piece in half horizontally to make two layers. Then return the two bottom pieces to pan, to make the bottom cake layer.

Prepare vanila pudding according to package directions. When done, remove from heat. Add ½ cup butter and stir until melted. Spread over bottom layer of cake in pan. Then replace the top layer over the pudding. Cut in squares to serve. Serves 18. Leftovers should be refrigerated.
